Those Yankees who have grown rich retain, I believe, a hard common sense and a love of hard work that is rooted in a history of being fishermen, farmers, and small businessmen. It always amused me that Gov. Dukakis, who seldom swears, could never understand why his predecessor Francis Sargent sprinkled his speech with Anglosaxonisms. Dukakis thought Sargent was trying to play the role of the common man, and it never occurred to him that Sargent, who ran a tackle shop before entering politics, was just being himself.

Well-to-do Yankees usually have a strong sense of public service. This gets ridiculed in the media as a sort of anachronistic American imitation of the British aristocracy. But it is real, and if your child's life has been saved at the Mass. General, the Brigham, or the Children's, or if you plan to take in the Renoirs at the Museum of Fine Arts this fall, you ought to be reminded that Boston's great private institutions thrive through the labor, love, and anonymous service of a lot of Yankees.

Another lie about the Yankees is the charge of prejudice. Allegedly they exploited their Irish maids until the sons of maids rode the sons of b-----s out of Massachusetts politics. The charge, although at least partly true in certain instances, is no more generally true than the charge that the Irish of today are bigoted against blacks.

In general, in fact, the Yankees have always been a tolerant crowd. The building of the first Roman Catholic church in Boston was funded in large measure by the contributions of Protestant Adamses, Quincys, Hancocks, and Warrens. Later, in politics, the Yankees, with Cardinal O'Connell, didn't think much of Curley, whom they regarded as a demagogue. But from David J. Walsh to John F. Kennedy, the rise of other Irish politicians was abetted by Yankee support. The Yankee infatuation with the Irish Democrat Kennedy in the fifties probably led to the weakening of the will of Yankee Republicanism that ultimately allowed aggressive conservative non-Yankees to take over the Republican Party.

Finally, the Yankee attitude toward blacks may be surmised from the fact that when Democrats slammed the door in Edward Brooke's face in the 1950's, Leverett Saltonstall and other Yankee Republicans gave him a home which led to his historic election to the U.S. Senate in 1966.

If I were to fault the Yankees for anything it would be that they seem to have lost their political will. Whereas in business, in the arts, in medicine, in law, and in education their contribution is still made at least in proportion to their numbers, the last Yankee state-wide office holders (Peabody, Richardson, Saltonstall, and Sargent) left office ten to twenty years ago. With the exception of the part-Yankee John Kerry, the tradition of the successful Yankee in politics, which dates at least to the American Revolution, has apparently expired. The bright and up-and-coming state legislators, even in predominantly Yankee towns, tend to be Irish, Italian, Armenian, and Greek. Among them, not among Yankees, will come our future governors. The essentially voluntary withdrawal of the Yankee from the pool of future political leaders does not serve the public interest, and it is not something of which Yankees should be proud.

I said that there were two things the matter with "Yankee-bating", the first being the perpetration of a lie. The second needs no elaboration: Yankee-bating is wrong. As Cardinal Law has said many times during his extraordinary first year in office, understanding is absolute, indivisible, and unexceptionable. Bigotry in any form is a sin.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Sometimes, picking up the morning mail isn't worth the trip to our little village post office. Days when our box is jam-packed with second class mail finds the huge waste basket in the lobby filled to over-flowing with ads that never reach home. Then there are days when a tempting invitation comes our way, such as press day at the King Richard's Faire. We couldn't make it, but hope to yet, for food lovers are flocking to the re-creation of a Renaissance marketplace at festival time over four hundred years ago. It goes on each weekend through Oct. 19, including the three-day Columbus Day weekend. Foods that include everything from fish and chips to fruit-filled crepes with whipped cream and chocolate sauce, are designed to provide a taste of English life in those days. Entertainment, costumes, crafts carry out the festive atmosphere. Located on Rte. 58 in South Carver, the Faire's hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. each weekend. Admission is free for children under five. Included in the reams of material prepared by their Boston advertising firm is a batch of recipes served in those days when cooking was a craft and kitchens in the home of the wealthy were their studios.

MUSHROOM PASTIES

Crust: One full-recipe pastry (enough to make a two-crust pie), rolled and cut into pieces a little over twice the size of the desired pasties, or 12 small tart cases.
Filling: 3/4 lb. small button mushrooms
2 oz. cheese, grated: 1 oz. each cheddar and parmesan
2 T. olive oil
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper
1/4 tsp. ginger
Wash and pare stems of mushrooms, leaving whole. Parboil in salted water for 3 to 4 min. Drain. Mix with oil, cheese and seasonings. Make turnovers. Fill and bake in 425 oven for approx. 20 min., or until lightly brown.

Forever welcome is a new cookbook to add to my collection. Bill Doren of Pastene Wine and Spirits Co. sent me a great paperback of favorite recipes from their Somerville kitchens. Their company goes back to 1848 when Luigi Pastene arrived in Boston and sold fruit from a push cart in the North End. It became a growing family business as immigrants flocked to our city and Italian goods were necessary. The business grew down through the years to become international, with their famous olive oil in Imperia, Italy and wines from California and France. All this time, files of their favorite recipes were kept and a marvelous collection has resulted, to include such recipes as Frittatas, Baked Eggplant Romagnola, Clam Sauce Neapolitan Style, Baked Macaroni A La Greco, Panzorotti, Mushrooms Risotto, Pot Roast with Wine and Italian Veal Rolls. When I asked Bill how our readers could get their copies, he was kind enough to say that this 217 page collection of delectable fare, though it cost $7 to prepare, could be theirs for the handling charge of $2.50. So, just send that amount to Bill at their firm on 12 First Ave., Somerville, 02143. Then, I asked him what his favorite recipe is. After much pondering, he guessed that perhaps this is one of his most favorite:

SHRIMP RISOTTO

1 lb. fresh shrimp
4 T. imported olive oil
2 cloves garlic
2 T. chopped parsley
1/2 wine-glass white wine
2 C. plum tomatoes
1 C. extra long grain rice
2 oz. jar imported grated cheese
Salt and pepper to taste
Wash and parpoil shrimp, saving water. Remove shell, black vein and cut shrimp into small pieces. Brown garlic in olive oil. Remove and add shrimp and parsley. When they start to brown, add wine; let it come to a boil, then add tomatoes, previously mashed with a fork. Cook approx. 10 min., season to taste. Add rice, well washed. Cook slowly, stirring constantly. Add water in which shrimp was boiled, a little at a time as needed. When rice is tender, pour on a platter, sprinkle generously with grated cheese and serve hot. Delicious and nourishing, serves four.

MUSINGS

By John H. Cutler

☐ The trouble with some problems is the solution.

☐ Progress is seldom created by contented people; discontent leads to progress.

☐ Presidential quiz: Name the only U.S. President who was also Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Name the only woman who was the wife of one President and the mother of another. (Answers below)

☐ My two favorite definitions of middle age:

"Middle age is when you are too young to take up golf and too old to rush up to the net." — Franklin Adams.

"Middle age is when you are sitting home on Saturday night and the telephone rings and you hope it isn't for you." — Ring Lardner.

☐ Church sign: The Ladies Literary Society will meet Wednesday. Mrs. Johnson will sing, "Put Me In My Bed," accompanied by the pastor.

☐ Abraham Lincoln was full of musings. Example: "No matter how much cats fight, there always seem to be plenty of kittens."

☐ A golfer is a person who can walk several miles lugging 25 pounds of equipment but who asks junior to bring him an ashtray.

☐ Answers to presidential quiz: William Howard Taft and Abigail Adams.

☐ A political candidate from Texas shrieked: "That low-down scum deserves to be kicked to death by a jackass — and I'm just the one to do it."

☐ This electromechanical age is getting too complicated. A man in Eldorado, IL, had an air conditioner installed in his house, turned it on and went to sleep. But when the conditioner brought the temperature down to 68 degrees his furnace switched on.

☐ I like the sound and the meaning of it: "Ring the bell, close the book, light the candle."

☐ A millionaire is a man who travels between his air-conditioned home and air-conditioned office in an air-conditioned car, then pays $50 to go over to the steam room at the club to sweat.

☐ If a man would walk a mile for a camel, how far would he walk for a dromedary? The animal on that once popular pack of cigarettes is a dromedary. A camel has two humps.

☐ Dean William Inge said: "A nation is a society united by a delusion about its ancestry and by common hatred of its neighbours."

Camp Squanto - a place and a spirit

By Joan Pinkham

A day in the life of a camp director such as Squanto's Arnold Briggs starts off gently, explains the greying Marshfield resident. "The sun comes up outside the log cabin which has been home for seven weeks for the past 17 summers."

It's 7 a.m., the birds are singing in the scrub pines — Scouts are asleep in their tents. It's the prelude to an active day that will end with taps at 10 p.m. in the million dollar complex for Boy Scouts of the old Colony Council in Plymouth.

For ABCD (i.e. Arnold Briggs Camp Director), there is not time to roll over for another 40 winks; soon the old fire bell will sound to announce breakfast for the 11 and 12-year-old Scouts, their Scoutmasters and the staff.

Before they descend, Briggs is in the kitchen, checking on the 19 Scouts who have pulled "k.p." for breakfast. As with the remaining two meals, the menu must be hearty and the kitchen left immaculate. Like any restaurant, the dining area is subject to surprise checks by the local health inspector.

About a thousand Scouts and 250 Scout Masters were at Squanto during the seven weeks the thousand-acre camp site is open. Each troop is there for a week, shepherded through the busy day's round by the Scout Master of their patrol, their leader in their year-round hometown activities.

Most of the youngsters are there to complete more merit badges as required for promotion. About 50 percent will attain the top rank of Eagle Scout.

Their carefully structured day starts at nine under the supervision of a staff composed of former Scouts and Scoutmasters. Down on Fawn Pond water skills are being taught; in the sports area, nature study area, rifle and archery range and other facilities, one of the finest Scout camps in the nation offers not only instruction in craft skills and team sports, but, according to Briggs, "A busy, busy day. Scouts have no time to get into trouble and seldom have we had disciplinary problems."

Meanwhile, back at the administration building, Briggs and his staff gather each morning at 10 for an hour-long meeting with the Scoutmasters. "It's like running a large city," the former Eagle Scout (one of three brothers - Eagles all) comments. "We have to provide or service water, food, electricity, medical care and teaching skills for 30 different merit badges."

ABCD and his staff of 50 are Boy Scouts, most of whom started in elementary school as Cub Scouts. Ingrained in them are the ideals of Scouting; growing throughout the years in body, mind and spirit.

They call it the "Squanto Spirit" in honor of the Patuxet Indian, Tisquantum, whose aid to the Pilgrims in Plymouth helped them to survive the first few difficult years of their settlement.

In 1932, the Brockton Scout Council which had previously included only the city of Brockton was expanded to take in the communities of Abington, Avon, Bridgewater, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Kingston, Marshfield, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Rockland, West Bridgewater and Whitman.

The land in Plymouth was given to the council by LeBaron R. Barker, a local cranberry grower and landowner.

In 1970 the Squanto Council and the old Colony Council merged. The latter took in most of the south Shore from Weymouth and Braintree on the north to Plymouth in the South and Walpole on the west with a total of 41 towns.

Since then, buildngs have been winterized to provide year-round camping. Instructors for outdoor classroom experiences have been provided by the federal government.

Buildings have been added, more land acquired and still other improvements to make the future of Camp Squanto as great as its past, continue on each year.

Since serving with the Marine Corps and graduating from Boston University's School of Education when he was 28 years old, Briggs has dedicated his life to young people.

He is a sixth grade teacher in Hanover and says enthusiastically: "I love the kids of today. They're so very far ahead of us when we were their age. We're dealing with a different breed of kids . . . much more knowledgeable, but just as frail and vulnerable under it all as youngsters have always been."

Of today's Scouting program, he confesses to being ashamed of his hometown of Marshfield. For the past several years the ranks of Scouts have dwindled and Troup 101 under Paul Bryant, scoutmaster, though strong and flourishing, is the only troop in town.

"I know if there is a good troop in their town the kids will flock to it. Scouting takes up their afternoons working on their badges, for so many kids don't have anything to do. It's sad they are not involved in doing good for others; then I think they would feel good about themselves."

There are city boys in Old Colony Council who have never had the chance to pet a goat, or sidle up to a lamb. These are found in the nature sanctuary at Squanto. There are many who have never known the camaraderie of sharing a tent, singing around the campfire, or the thrill and pride of saluting the colors on the parade field.

These are routine in the life of a Scout, daily camp ceremonies that may instill a lifetime of patriotism and memories of pride when one's name is called in the amphitheater for recognition in the weekly awards ceremony.

It's all there for the taking at Camp Squanto. As a former Scout wrote to Briggs: "You've touched and influenced many lives."

Briggs urges men to volunteer a few hours a week to form a troop in their hometown.

CAN YOU FILL THESE SHOES?

It isn't easy! These are the shoes of a very special person...

HOME MANAGEMENT/PERSONAL CARE SPECIALIST

Certain traits, attitudes and habits are often seen in people who are successful in the health care field. These attributes abound in our people here at Home & Health Resources of the South Shore, Inc.

They have decided that they want to be the best. They are people who can be trusted and upon whom others can depend. They are sensitive to the feelings and needs of others and they get satisfaction from helping. Most of all, they believe they are doing important work. So do we!

We need special people to provide the "extra hands" it takes to keep elderly or convalescing persons in their own homes, with nourishing meals and warm companionship. Being a Home Management/Personal Care Specialist is NOT just another job.

If you'd like to earn top pay, have flexible hours and feel proud of what you do...Come try on our shoes! Call Personnel at 849-1710 for an appointment.

MacArthur's

Let us tell you a little about MacArthur's

We are the only restaurant on the South Shore that has combined seven different food concepts in one menu. Be it creative Burgers, Pasta, New Orleans Style Cajun cooking, Hickory Smoked B-B-Q, Stir Fry, Fresh Fish and Roast Prime Rib—we guarantee you the freshest product possible. These are the reasons we are as popular as we are today. Also, our high service standards make us a cut above the rest.

In addition to a tasteful interesting menu, we also feature other ways you can enjoy MacArthur's Restaurant:

FUNCTIONS We can accommodate parties of up to 50 with special arrangements for larger groups.

LOUNGE Our lounge is open seven days where you can enjoy your favorite sporting event on our wide screen T.V. Also, relax to the sounds of our entertainment.

HAPPY HOURS Daily from 4:00-6:30 pm. Help yourself to our complimentary hors d'oeuvres. A great match with your favorite cocktail.

WINE We feature a premium California selection. You can enjoy it by the bottle or, due to popular demand, by the glass.

ICE CREAM DRINKS Our ice cream drinks are second to none. Our tempting strawberry shortcake or cookie crumble keeps em' coming back.

DESSERT Our "See For Yourself Dessert Tray" is brought right to your table—a real palate pleaser.

OPERATING HOURS Lunch served Monday-Saturday 11:30 am-4:00 pm. Dinner served 4:00 pm-10:00 pm, Monday-Thursday and 11:00 pm on Friday and Saturday. Sunday dinner 11:30 am-10:00 pm.

CREDIT CARDS We accept American Express — MasterCard — Visa.

WE THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE,

Mark Richard and Tom Harrington

A strange twist in legal fight to evict a tenant

"It's bizarre. It's a nightmare." That's how Beryl Joy Manns described life for her and her family the past seven months.

Since March 2, life in their ranch-style home has been unbearable, according to Forest Avenue resident. Tales of irrational behavior, missing clothing and damage to property fill her conversation as she talks about the events of the past seven months.

It was that spring day she allowed a woman and her two children into her home. They rented two rooms within the spacious house, had kitchen privileges and used the garage to store old furniture and clothing.

It worked for about two weeks, according to Manns. A registered nurse, Manns originally intended to lease the rooms to two elderly ex-patients from Massachusetts General Hospital.

But a teenager, a best friend of her eldest son William, had been staying for several weeks with them. He had run away from home. He convinced Manns to take in his mother and two younger brothers because they could not afford to pay the rent where they were staying.

When Manns met the woman, Renne Jones assured her that South Shore Housing would pay the rent for the two rooms.

"She was a likeable woman - she had a great sense of humor," Manns recalled. But soon it was apparent something was not right. One night two weeks later, Manns' daughter, Julie, was awakened and frightened by crashing noises from the kitchen. Manns ordered her daughter to stay in her bedroom, knowing the noise was from Jones and her four year-old baby who were rummaging around the house until 4 a.m.

"I was so frightened by the bizarre behavior, I called the Department of Social Services the next day and said it wouldn't work," Manns said.

Jones agreed, and started to look for another home. But after a few days of unsuccessful attempts, Jones and Manns reached a compromise. The tenant agreed to keep the house clean and the noise down.

"I felt terrible about sending a mother and two children into the streets. I wanted this arrangement to work for them," Manns said.

Jones told her landlord that DSS wanted her to sign a lease. "And like a fool, I signed a year's lease," Manns added. "Maybe I'm a fool, but I couldn't see sending a mother and her children out

How we weathered 'Gloria'

No ice in Hull

By Tanna Kasperowicz

By Sunday afternoon the Kasperowicz family had three potential fires (wrong fuel in hurricane lamps and faulty Coleman stove); the food in the refrigerator was gone—thrown out or eaten.

But thanks to friends, the fallen trees were largely cleaned up.

We had several "dinner and shower" invitations and were going to take three separate families up on the shower part of their invitation—after food and lights in Hull.

During the early days of the storm we envied friends who were on the gas line, because they had water for showers. Until the Coleman stove went up in flames on our porch we were taking baths in a half-inch of water (it's possible, but not relaxing).

Sunday p.m.: reports of electricity on some parts of Forest Avenue, Elm Street, Summer Street, Cedar Acres Lane—Beechwood was on briefly Saturday, until a few insidious downed lines caused a blow-out.

By this publication, most all of us should be back to normal—many of us barely wounded.

According to phone communication, Tom Meyers and family had some extensive damage to their home from fallen trees. The Nothnagles had boat damage, the Slotnick's lost an old tree which unleashed havoc on neighbors' cars; Kathy Morgan had a tree slide down her hill and almost into her and a good book, but was ultimately saved by a "nothing" little tree she and Bill had almost severed last spring.

Storm vs steeple

By Jane Lane

In the words of Rev. Edward Atkinson, "it looked like a tinker toy up there. Or perhaps, one of those houses you make with straws, and if you blow on it, the whole thing will collapse."

That's how he described the sight of the scaffolding as it rested for several hours aside the steeple of the First Parish Meeting House. The winds that whipped the Commons area Friday afternoon loosened a pin within the metal frame of the scaffold. What had originally been intended to brace the steeple during restoration work, was now clinging to the wooden structure for its support.

No one was injured, and no harm was done to the steeple, according to Rev. Atkinson. And if nothing else, he added, the adventure has allowed the public to become aware of the efforts to restore the Meeting House.

The First Parish congregation is about to begin a major fundraising drive to restore the historic steeple and the Meeting House. The church building, constructed by the town in 1747, will undergo major reconstructive work totaling about $105,000.

When the building was first built it was maintained by the town. After the separation of church and state in 1824, the town remained caretakers of the Common, and the First Parish maintenance committee presided over the church, including the historic town clock.

Saturday's game revives old rivalry

It may have been more than thirty years ago, but the rivalry that once thrived between two towns is about to be reborn.

The Scituate-Cohasset football game, as traditional in these parts as turkey on the Thanksgiving Day when the last game was played between the two schools. Nearest we can tell, it was Thanksgiving Day, 1951. If that is the correct date, Cohasset was table, will commence again this Saturday after an absence of more than 30 years.

A generation separates the players in Saturday's match from their fathers, uncles and neighbors who once graced the high school playing fields. Indeed, many of the former Scituate and Cohasset High School players will be among those in the bleachers, cheering their sons onto victory.

It's a natural rivalry, according to Cohasset Athletic Director Clark Chatterton. The two high schools are matched in every other sport, and it was high time football was again included in that schedule.

It's been a bit of a struggle trying to figure out "handily defeated" by the larger, more experienced team. That score was 38-7.

A fullback 34 years ago, Jim Froio agrees that Cohasset High School was "diplomatically speaking, handily deafeated" by Scituate High in 1951. A CHS graduate of 1952, Froio said his brother Ralph's class of 1951 was the last senior class to play against Scituate.

Power return ?

As of Wednesday morning, approximately 10-12 percent of the town remained without power. A utility company spokesman said full power should be restored to the entire town by the end of the day.

According to Webster H. Francis, vice president of corporate relations for Eastern Utilities Association, there were roughly 300-400 homes still without electric power by mid-week. "We expect everyone, with a few individual exceptions, to have power by the end of the day (Wednesday)," he said.

The Scituate Board of Selectmen is sponsoring a hearing with the Department of Public Utilities to look into the emergency response of Eastern Edison Co. during the past week.

The public is welcome to attend the open hearing which will be held Tuesday, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Scituate High School.

Cohasset's week . . .

Town meeting date

Selectmen approved the date of Monday, Dec. 2 for the Special Town Meeting.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said a date two weeks earlier would bring the Town Meeting too close to Thanksgiving.

Selectmen aproved the date for the Town Meeting which will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium, as long as that gives town counsel sufficient time to prepare and hold hearings on the proposed bylaw changes.

Tax rate prepared

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew said the assessors should be done with all tax rate information by the end of this week. Once the preparations are completed, he will bring the material to the state Department of Revenue for its approval.

"Tuesday I will inquire where they (the assessors) are, and I will take the information into Boston as soon as I can," he told selectmen.

Exchange group members

Selectmen voted to appoint four new members to the Cultural Exchange Committee. The new members include: Rosette Greco, Paul Narkiewicz, a French teacher at the high school, Mildred Mitman, and Jacqueline Fahey, a student representative to the committee.

Response to race

In response to a letter received from Linton Young of Highland Avenue, selectmen have offered to meet with him to discuss his concerns about the number of local road races.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew responded to Young by noting that selectmen routinely grant permission to groups holding events on public property in Cohasset. One requirement is that representatives of the group meet with selectmen prior to the event.

Andrew suggested that if Young wished to discuss the matter further, selectmen would be willing to talk with him at their next meeting.

Committee appointments

The appointing authority, including Town Moderator William Weeks, has appointed Michael J. Howley of Wood Way to the three-year term in the Personnel Committee, and Kenneth Wilcox of Beechwood Street to a three-year term on the Capital Budget Committee.

Cable changes

In a letter to selectmen, the general manager of American Cablesystem explained the changes that have occurred since a final license was signed in May.

"We have made the following improvements; initiation of Sunday, evening, and holiday repair hours, staffing of a regular maintenance program to assure high picture quality, establishment of toll free 24 hour a day repair phone lines and the expansion of computer software and the introduction explanatory billing," General Manager Stephen Farquhar stated.

He noted that such improvements have nessitated price increases for cable services.

As of Dec. 1, the a la carte rates for the following services will be: Showtime, $8.95; Cinemax, $8.95; Sportschannel, $8.95; and Home Theatre Network, $5.95. But, Farquhar added, this new packaging plan will offer discounts to twice as many people as the current plan, with many customers experiencing a decrease in the cost of their premium package.

In addition, he added, the Supercable rate will be $9.85 per month and the Focus rate will become $6.50 per month. The net percentage increase from all of these changes to the average customer will be about nine percent on a regular monthly bill.

Correction

There was a mistake in last week's story regarding the location of the "Chemically Free" program sponsored by the Social Service League.

The three-part program which began this week, is being held at the Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church.

The second session of the program will be held there from 7:30 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 9 for parents only.

The third session will be held Oct. 16 at the same time and location for both students in grades seven through 12 and their parents.

Chamber meeting

There will be a Cohasset Chamber of Commerce meeting Wednesday, Oct. 9 at 6:15 p.m.

Paul Montle, president of the Yankee Companies, Inc. will be guest speaker. Non-members are invited.

Teachers hope for new contract

The president of the Cohasset Teachers' Association is hoping a fifth mediation session scheduled for Monday will conclude with a new contract agreement.

Teachers in the Cohasset schools have been working without a contract since June. They have been negotiating with the school committee for over a year, according to Union President George Fortin.

The negotiating team support committee was to appear at the school committee meeting, but Fortin explained that logistical problems resulting from school cancellation forced the sub committee to postpone its attendance at the meeting.

Fortin noted, "We're going to be meeting in a mediation session all day Monday. Hopefully, things may move and it will make an appearance at the next school committee meeting by our support committee unnecessary."

The negotiating team support committee was put into effect, Fortin said, to activate the rank and file union members and organize them behind the leadership of the negotiating team. By its actions and organization, the support committee would call attention to the efforts of the union's negotiating team.

At this point in the negotiations with the school committee, Fortin explained that money is not the issue separating the two sides. Since the previous contract, the union made it clear they wanted some changes in the contract language this year. "We've been wanted the change in the contract language for a long time. That was an issue we raised last year when we reached a settlement on the previous contract. A promise was made to us at that time that the change would be made," he added.

This is the second year Fortin has served as the union's president. It is the longest Cohasset teachers have worked without a contract since he came to the system 20 years ago. The previous contract expired in June.

At this time, Fortin emphasized, there is no discussion or thought about a teacher strike. "We're not even thinking about such an illegal action," he said Tuesday. "That is one of the last things that would come to mind."

Monday's mediation session with the school committee negotiators, Joseph Nedrow and Diana Kornet and attorney Allan Miller, will be the fifth session since negotiations began over a year ago. Four mediation sessions were held this summer, Fortin said.

Tree debris policy

Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said it is his department's policy to assist as many residents as possible in disposing their fallen tree limbs. But, he warned, residents must help the department by taking as much debris to the dump themselves as they are able.

Laugelle said he would appreciate residents hauling the debris caused by the storm to the dump. Any fallen trees or limbs that can't be taken by the property owner will be transported to the dump by the Tree and Park Dept.

By the light of flickering candle light, selectmen meet

In the light of candle flame, selectmen held their bi-weekly meeting Monday night. Because of the length of their agenda, they decided to hold the session despite the power outage at Town Hall.

With flashlights to read their communications, selectmen met in a closed executive session for one hour to discuss contract negotiations with the personnel board. They later opened the meeting which concluded at about 10:45 p.m.

The Town Hall was completely dark except for the flicker of six candles and a kerosene lamp. Members of the audience could not be seen until they verbally identified themselves to the town officials.

Among the issues decided during Monday night's meeting was approval to ANKH productions to film a major motion picture in Cohasset this summer.

Director-producer Tony Mich, a former summer employee at the South Shore Music Circus, intends to film a fictious story about ten adolescent interns and their summer spent working at a music theatre. Although he told selectmen that the Music Circus board of trustees will not allow him to film there, he was confident he could find an alternative sight.

"That has no effect on my decision to film in the town of Cohasset," he told selectmen Monday night.

Selectmen had discussed Mich's movies plans at a meeting a few weeks ago. At that time, they had read a "bare bones" script which outlined the events of a summer in the lives of the young theatrical apprentices. As Mich, who also wrote the storyline explained, "it is a film about adolscence and maturity."

Mich said filming would begin in mid-May and conclude sometime in July, if his original schedule is followed. Several locations within the town will be used, he said, along with an office within Town Hall and the police station cells.

At a meeting of all town department supervisors, no objections were raised to the project, Executive Secertary Donald Andrew told selectmen. Prior to the May filming, there will be another meeting to complete plans.

Selectmen urged Mich to post a bond during the duration of the fiming in Cohasset to protect the town against liability. Chairman Frank England also noted he and Executive Secertary Andrew would discuss which charity the production company will contribute to - a guarantee previously made by Mich.

After the board was assured that the film's rating would be PG, and that all road-closings would be properly posted with the local residents and town officials, they granted their approval.

Andrew, who has worked in communities used extensively in "Jaws" and "The Bostonians,"

EQUAL HOUSING LENDER

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

NEW DEAL ON PROPERTY SETTLEMENTS

The Tax Reform Act of 1984 made major changes in the IRA's role in divorces. It trims the tax bill created by many splits. Formerly, the transfer of property from one spouse to the other, as part of a divorce settlement, was treated as a taxable event. It was as though the property had actually been sold. Assume that the husband was the sole owner of the family home which had been purchased for $25,000. If the wife received the home, now worth $100,000, as part of the divorce settlement, the husband had to pay tax on the $75,000 "profit." This was true even though he got no money in the deal. Under the new tax law, no tax is due.

Marital problems offer many complications. Legal matters concerning marital affairs should be accomplished only with the assistance of professional advice. For the protection of all concerned, today as well as in the future, such legal steps are enhanced by utilizing one experienced with the operation of the law in such matters. LAW OFFICE OF RICHARD PRICE, SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P.C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660. I am available daily by appt.

promised the local residents would cooperate and enjoy this venture. "As soon as they start filming, you're going to see people out there you've never seen out of their homes," he said.

In another matter, selectmen again postponed any decision to sell the Independence Gown Museum until the full board meets again Oct. 15. Selectman Rocco Laugelle was attending a Norfolk County meeting this week.

Board members are now divided as to whether the town should sell the building or maintain it, and what restrictions should be placed on the sale of the former Historical Society museum on Main Street.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she would prefer the building remain under the town's jurisdiction, although her suggestion to locate a town archive there did not meet with approval from the board. She also suggested the building would make a unique residence for an elderly person or a young couple.

One woman who attended the meeting said she was interested in purchasing the building. She envisioned converting the first floor into a commercial business, and using the second floor for an apartment dwelling.

"It's a beautiful old building," she told selectmen. "I would like to see it preserved. I am anxious to make some use of it. There is a shortage of housing in Cohasset amd this would make an ideal apartment for a young couple or single person."

Selectmen have received two real estate appraisals of the building that specify the building is worth about $65,000. Their concern is that a commercial business which attracts customers can not be located there because of the traffic hazard it would create at the corner of Elm and Main Streets.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson developed a condition of sale for the building, specifying that the conveyance of title be made on the condition consistant with the zoning bylaws, only for residential purposes or a professional office space or a non retail commercial space.

Selectman Sullivan said residents have contacted her, requesting the building remain under the ownership of the town. Selectman Cliff Mitman stated he would like the building to be used strictly for commercial purposes, stating it would not be a preferable place to house a family.

The building is constructed into a wall of ledge, and has no frontage on Main Street. There is a steep walkway to the second level of the building on the side, and there is minimal parking area in the front of the structure.

Selectmen Chairman England said the board will definitely decide the fate of the building at its Oct. 15 meeting. "We will do something, the question is what," he said, adding the board was leaning to a decision to sell the property for commercial use.

At Monday's meeting, selectmen also decided to raise the fee for the rental of the Town Hall facilities by $10. That increase does not affect the Cohasset Dramatic Club however, and their use of the auditorium for performance rehsearsals.

The board decided, after talking with club member Helen Ketchum, that the rehearsals will continue to cost the organization $10 each night. The cost for the days of the performance will be raised to $25.

Selectmen decided that the club does not use the entire hall during its rehearsals, only the stage. Therefore, there would be no wear and tear on the auditorium and the furniture within the hall.

Ketchum explained to the board that raising the fees for club rehearsals would "not be good" for their finances. The Dramatic Club has currently been using the hall three times a week for play rehearsals, and as the production nears, they will be in the auditorium four times a week. "Death of a Salesman" will be performed at the Town Hall within six weeks, she noted.

Selectmen explained the increase was based on the wear and tear of the Town Hall facilities and the cost of heating the hall. "This auditorium takes a lot of abuse," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said. "There's gum on the floor and food everywhere and paint on the furniture" caused by several different rentors.

Executive Secretary Don Andrew explained the fee increase would not go into effect for those organizations already committed to renting the hall. It will go into effect immediately for any new users.

It was decided the new $10 increase would go into all organizations. The Dramatic Club will continue to pay $15 per night for rehearsals and $25 on performance dates., plus custodial fees.

A series of bizarre twists in legal plot

into the street. Up to this point, there had been no damage to my house."

At the end of April, Manns flew to England on a mission to see her dying father. He died before she saw him again, and she returned nine days later.

The atmosphere in the home had changed. Her children were being disobedient and indifferent to her. She later found they had missed several days of school. Her 18 year-old son Robby had never gone to school the entire time she was away. According to Robby, it was Jones who urged the kids to stay home while their mother was in England.

"She declared a holiday while I was gone, and the kids really fell for that," Manns said.

Later that day, Manns discovered a poster hung on the inside of a livingroom closet door. When she ripped it off, there was a gaping hole kicked into the door. Another hole was found in the bedroom door of Jones's 13 year-old son.

"I confronted her about it, but it was a big joke to her. The only one who was upset was her oldest son, John. And he was obviously trying to cover up for his mother," according to the landlord.

Confused by the change in her children's attitude, Manns brought them to breakfast one morning where they could talk in confidence about their problems. "They were turning against me because I was the disciplinarian in the home," she said. Manns took her daughter to a counselor for additional professional help.

At the same time, she tried to evict her tenant. An attorney helped develop the proper papers and the process was initiated in July. Quincy District Court Judge George Sullivan was sympathetic to her plight. He issued a restraining order against the tenant, but said the papers were not filed properly. He was sympathetic to her condition, Manns said, and said she should try to evict the tenant through a complaint regarding the damages to the home.

On July 11, Jones was served with a violation of lease and a notice to leave the premises. Judge Sullivan said Jones would have three days to leave. But Jones fought the eviction with her attorney, saying she had nowhere for her and her children to live.

In the meantime, more damage was found to the home where furniture was scratched, clothing and sofa cushions were slashed with a knife, and articles of clothing were missing.

Local police and fire departments responded in early August to two fires set inside the garage. The two fires occurred within two days of each other after Jones' 13 year-old son had ignited aerosol cans in the garage, Manns later discovered.

She went straight to Judge Sullivan the next day and said she was scared to leave her home for work.

Now, she was returning to the court on a continual basis but no ruling was made on an eviction notice claiming damages to her home.

Police were called to the home one day to view their articles of clothing they had found stored inside Jones' duffle bags in the garage. Jones denied stealing the items and a Judge said to lock the garage. When they later found the door had been opened, the Judge advised Manns to press criminal charges while the eviction was being processed. He urged the older boys to help keep peace in the home, according to Manns.

"All this time, her oldest son John had been on our side, acting as a witness for us in court. He really didn't want to go against his mother and get

Meet the new PSO president

A co-founder of the PSO, Nancy Sandell was its first president in 1981 and here she is again—a sure sign of commitment to a first rate public school system.

Nancy attended the University of Minnesota and Winona College and graduated with a B.S. in Education, which was put to good use teaching first grade in Minneapolis and Medford, MA.

After extensive travel in Europe and North Africa with husband, Jim, the Sandells lived in Rome, Italy for six years. There, Nancy was involved with activities of the Kendale International School and the Overseas School of Rome.

In 1980 the Sandells returned to the U.S. to settle in Cohasset. By this time four children had been born: Mason, a 1985 graduate of CHS, now studying in Rome; Anna, in the seventh grade at CHS; Jessie, a first grader at the Osgood School; and, Morgan, a four-year-old son, just beginning his scholastic career at the Carriage Horse Nursery School.

Our PSO president enjoys spending free time working with children, especially teenagers. For three years Nancy was a house parent at Dana Hall School, a private boarding school for girls in Wellesley, in charge of 30 girls in grades 9 through 12.

In Cohasset, Nancy has been president of the senior high Communication Council, vice president and host family coordinator of the AFS Chapter. Last year the Sandell family hosted a student from Argentina.

As 1985-86 president of the Cohasset Parent School Organization, Nancy hopes that all parents of Cohasset students will attend the upcoming PSO fall parents meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 22, 7:30 p.m. at the CHS new study hall for a discussion of "The Whole Child." Nancy says, "I think we have a strong, first rate school system, and because of my confidence in it, I can take the time to concentrate my concerns in some non-academic areas. I see our volunteer pool decreasing, due primarily, I think, to more women working outside the home. To remain strong, the schools need volunteers, and both the schools and the children need parental support of activities.

"I am concerned about the emotional needs of our children and how their needs affect their learning. We need a qualified counselor at the elementary level to deal with the issues of the 'hurried child,' the child of divorced parents, single parent homes, 'latch-key kids.' We might have a need in Cohasset for after-school extended day care."

Come meet Nancy Sandell, as well as our superintendent of schools, school principals and teachers Oct. 22.

The Old Colony Montessori School, 20 Derby Street, Hingham, has openings presently in the Junior House involving students of the elementary level - ages 8-12.

The school offers an alternative source of learning for students. For more information and applications, please call 749-3698.

The Old Colony Montessori School of Hingham held its first official Board meeting for the 1985-1986 school year.

President Steve Chase announced the donation of an Apple IIC computer which will be used to teach all full-day students, ages four to 12.

A new computer science course for the younger students has begun and is being taught by Virginia Galpin, Montessori parent and Treasurer of the Board.

The Old Colony Montessori School is a parent-run school. This allows the parents a unique opportunity to involve themselves in their child's education.

into the street. Up to this point, there had been no damage to my house."

At the end of April, Manns flew to England on a mission to see her dying father. He died before she saw him again, and she returned nine days later.

The atmosphere in the home had changed. Her children were being disobedient and indifferent to her. She later found they had missed several days of school. Her 18 year-old son Robby had never gone to school the entire time she was away. According to Robby, it was Jones who urged the kids to stay home while their mother was in England.

"She declared a holiday while I was gone, and the kids really fell for that," Manns said.

Later that day, Manns discovered a poster hung on the inside of a livingroom closet door. When she ripped it off, there was a gaping hole kicked into the door. Another hole was found in the bedroom door of Jones's 13 year-old son.

"I confronted her about it, but it was a big joke to her. The only one who was upset was her oldest son, John. And he was obviously trying to cover up for his mother," according to the landlord.

Confused by the change in her children's attitude, Manns brought them to breakfast one morning where they could talk in confidence about their problems. "They were turning against me because I was the disciplinarian in the home," she said. Manns took her daughter to a counselor for additional professional help.

At the same time, she tried to evict her tenant. An attorney helped develop the proper papers and the process was initiated in July. Quincy District Court Judge George Sullivan was sympathetic to her plight. He issued a restraining order against the tenant, but said the papers were not filed properly. He was sympathetic to her condition, Manns said, and said she should try to evict the tenant through a complaint regarding the damages to the home.

Now, she was returning to the court on a continual basis but no ruling was made on an eviction notice claiming damages to her home.

Police were called to the home one day to view their articles of clothing they had found stored inside Jones' duffle bags in the garage. Jones denied stealing the items and a Judge said to lock the garage. When they later found the door had been opened, the Judge advised Manns to press criminal charges while the eviction was being processed. He urged the older boys to help keep peace in the home, according to Manns.

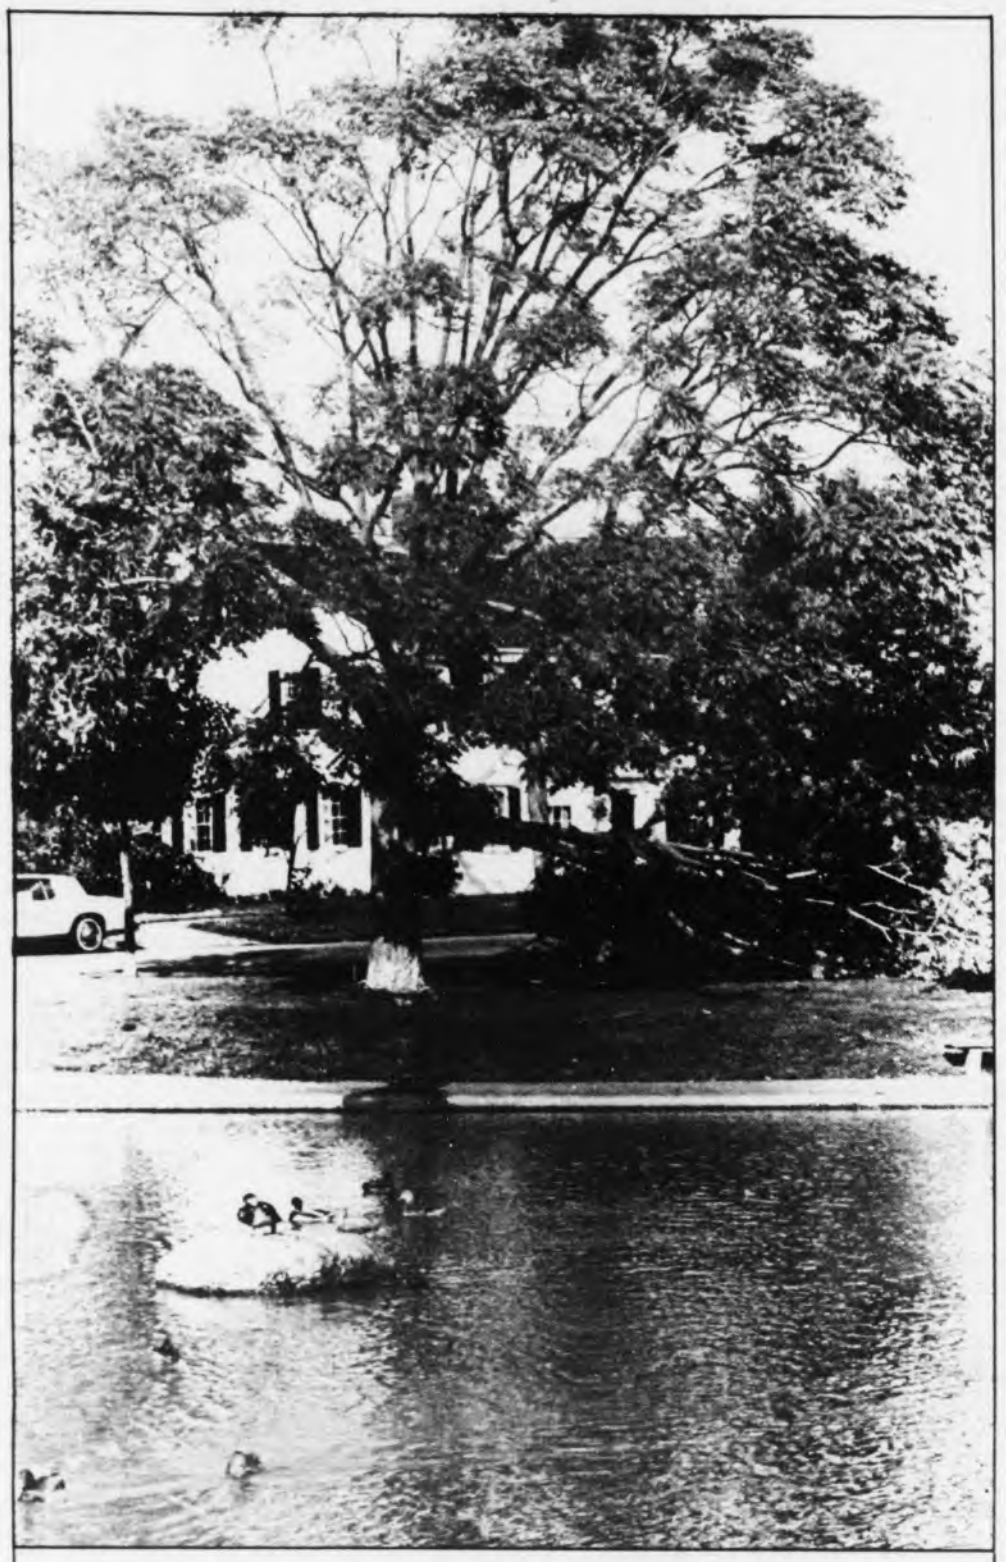
☐ Who will be the new Postmaster?



☐ The Cohasset Community Center has started its fundraising to renovate the barn that is behind the center, they need more donations to make the total of $40,000 that they have stated they will need. A donation from you will help to make this project a huge success.

☐ We've all heard of the family on the run, and most of us are "guilty as charged." Between games, play tryouts, practices, rehearsals, etc, who has time? Well, this certainly was the case in the Richard Silvia family last week! It was Matt's birthday Wednesday, and he was trying out for a play so he had no time to go home. In the parking lot was the whole family, with Matt's cake on the hood of the car! The case of the cake trying to find the celebrant was solved! Happy belated birthday to you, Matt—I'm sure you'll always remember it.

☐ Bill and Becky Bates McArthur had their second son this month. Scott Andrew was born at 11:59 p.m. on Sept. 18. Now, we all know that "Gramma Bates" has retired from her teaching post at the high school so you can bet that she'll have a super time with her grandson! He'll probably be a math genius by the time he's five! Congrats to all.

☐ While talking about congratulations, what about Richard Guilfoyle, son of Barbara and Richard Guilfoyle and a 1971 graduate of CHS!! He has been chosen by the University of California Medical Center at San Francisco to recruit and supervise a staff of bioscientists for a special advanced cancer research program. Richard claims he first became interested in biology and genetics during his senior year at CHS. From there he went to the University of Pennsylvania where he earned his bachelors degree and his doctorate in molecular biology. Last year he finished a post-doctoral program at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratories on Long Island. This past year Richard has been studying immunology at Stanford University.

☐ Don't forget to go to the Scituate vs. Cohasset football game, to be played at Scituate. Our boys should do very well, and would like our support to do an even better job.

One of the hazards of Friday's storm was a large branch of an elm tree along the duck pond.

☐ Thought you should know about the gals that I bragged about before, and what they've managed this time! Polly Litchfield, Pat Laugelle, Pat Litchfield, Marge Ritter, Donna MaGee and Martha Conley were responsible for raising over $2,000 in the Jimmy Fund Raffle—they gathered all of the prizes (unbelievable, great ones) and sold all of the tickets to make the money possible. Imagine that much money for the Jimmy Fund,andit's all profit! Good work gals!

☐ Saw a lot of the college gang around this weekend, all being evacuated due to the storm. All had good reports about college life,it's always nice to hear!

☐ Instead of what were you doing during the blizzard, you can now ask people what they did during Hurricane Gloria. Gloria sure did a lot of damage to all of the trees, luckily that's it though. We had plenty of warning to 'secure' everything, and seems as though everyone did what they could. As laundry mounts and food defrosts, we wonder what we'd ever do without electricity full time!

☐ Happy Birthday to Sue.

☐ The Historical House's flea market and yard sale was postponed last week due to Gloria, and will be held this week instead. Plan to attend. One thing that will go like hotcakes is any oil lamp or lantern they might have. After this week's crisis, those have proven to be the best source of light, as well as the safest.

☐ Best wishes to Eileen Kurtz on her 60th birthday, Saturday, Oct. 5.

☐ Simmons College senior Bridget Mary Farren, daughter of James and Anne Farren of Stockbridge Street, Cohasset, was inducted into Academy, the college's honor society, at an Honors Convocation ceremony Sept. 4.

☐ That's the news from here—all of us have at least one story due to the storm—why not tell everyone about it! Write or give me a call, and share it with the readers!

Interviews Saturday for Fire Chief

The Fire Chief Search Committee will be holding interviews this Saturday with the six final candidates for the position of Cohasset Fire Chief.

The committee has scheduled the six interviews throughout the day in the Town Hall auditorium.

A comprehensive test will be given to the same candidates on Friday, Oct. 4. The examination will be administered by three specialists who will set up an assessment center, administer and grade the exams, and conduct candidates interviews.

The next meeting of the committee will be held Oct. 7 to discuss the results of the interviews and to initiate a final reference check process.

The committee is hoping to limit their interview questions to four areas including, technical, experience, administrative and leadership. Each of the interviews will not take longer tnan one hour. Each candidate will be asked the same questions, however, other questions not on the list can be presented by any committee member as appropriate during the interview.

In its communication with selectmen, committee members noted there is one candidate from Kalamazoo, Mich.

A bad connection

The talk about town wherever you go, is the same. When are we going to have our power again? Or, why did we have to wait so long for the power to come back on?

Hurricane Gloria wasn't any Blizzard of '78. It certainly couldn't compare to the massive destruction caused by the 1938 hurricane. Yet, the damage from fallen trees atop electrical wires was so great that one Eastern Edison spokesman said it was the worst storm damage in 25 years.

Some boards of selectmen have called for an investigation into the electric company's emergency response system. Why do more than 30,000 customers remain without power five days after the storm, they question.

We say that is a valid question - one that must be answered.

We are aware crews from several states have responded to Eastern Edison's pleas for assistance. And we know that each day more and more residences have their power restored.

What we take great issue with is the total and complete lack of communication between the municipalities and the utility company.

When residents in one section of town question why they are without lights, when another section of town is fully powered, we want answers.

How many people remain without power in Cohasset today?

Why were certain neighborhoods turned on before others?

How long will the remaining neighborhoods be without power?

And why did we have to wait several days before we regained power?

There may be valid, understandable answers to all these questions. But the trouble is, there has been no attempt to respond.

The selectmen's office has been flooded with phone calls from angry residents (since the phones began working Tuesday). The police department has received an average of 100 calls a day from people waiting for an answer.

One police officer we spoke to is very angry. "My perception of the electric company has really diminished," he said disgustedly.

If only the electric company had taken the time to prepare for such an emergency. They could have had one man singled out for communication duty, assigned to the individual communities to explain why and how the power outage was caused and when the wires would be replaced.

Perhaps the police station could have been designated the central communications office. A company spokesman could notify the officers each morning of their scheduled route, informing them of the area to be repaired each day.

The officers could relay that information to the residents, while warning others it may take days to repair another section of town.

We realize the utility company may be doing its best to alleviate a distressing situation. But when people haven't taken a hot shower in days, haven't eaten a good hot meal for a while, live in darkness each night, and the answers aren't forthcoming, they have every right to get angry.

We think the residents of Cohasset are past the point of deserving a straight answer. It is the obligation of the electric company to respond immediately.

It's an ill wind

By Claire McDonough

I don't normally make two visits to Madam Zolar in such rapid succession, but I noticed so many people wandering around looking bemused during the recent hurricane that I decided heroic measures were justified.

In addition, the National Weather Service informs us that we may be in for a series of hurricanes over the next 20 years, and I'd just hate to see confused individuals not knowing whether their behavior was suited to Aquarians or Cancers.

So pay close attention. The next time there's a hurricane watch you'll be abie to swing into action and extract your astrological best from the disaster.

ARIES (March 21-April 20): Aries, as we all know, are happiest when they are bossing others around. Hurricanes provide unlimited opportunities for this behavior, so Aries natives are in for a wonderful 20 years. At the first sign of a hurricane alert, put an arm band over your sleeve. Be sure there are letters on it. It doesn't matter which letters. Everyone will assume they stand for some obscure government agency that activates only when the winds exceed fifty miles an hour, and they will all do whatever you direct them to do. Heaven!

TAURUS (April 21-May 21): Although they all have a certain fondness for natural beauty, every Taurean's deepest ambition is to amass and retain as many of this world's goods as possible. Go into the hurricane insurance business, and by the time the next 20 years are over you should be doing very nicely, thank you.

Just make sure that each policy has a fine-print clause specifying that the loss must be the combined result of a hurricane, a herd of maurading Berbers, and a crazed camel.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21): The Gemini twins are at their most frolicsome during hurricanes. They are often to be seen on wind-swept beaches interviewing disaster victims or, every hair in place for the t.v. cameras, clinging to the tops of high buildings and announcing the latest developments to an adoring public.

CANCER (June 22-July 23): Cancerians cannot bear to part with any of their possessions. The people who insist that they will ride out the storm on their boats, or will remain in their homes come heck or high water are, to a man or a woman, Moon Children. Carefully check any hurricane insurance policy you purchase from a Taurean.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23): Arians may settle for spurious positions of authority, but Leos demand the real thing. Begin at once to jockey for a position of leadership in your organization, community or, if none of these work out, your family. When the winds blow, insist that everyone adhere to your pre-conceived plan. If your scheme fails, you can always blame a Pisces.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): Since cleaning Boston Harbor shouldn't take up all your time over the next two decades, isn't it nice to know you can also do a lot of straightening-up-after-hurricanes? Start practicing on your children's rooms and a Sagittarian's bureau drawers. By the time the next hurricane comes you will be able to go from street to street cleaning up debris and making everyone feel vaguely guilty because there was a hurricane.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oc.t 23): If the natives of all the other signs heed the advice in this column, it will be easy to identify the Librans. They will be the ones who still look bemused. They are also identifiable by the bumps on their foreheads caused by walking into walls and each other.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22): Smart Scorpios will use the coming hurricane cycle to advance their political careers. If you are a liberal, mutter darkly that the present administration is tampering with things best left to a higher power and doubtless causing untoward weather phenomena. If you are a conservative, say that it's all the result of years of neglect of hurricane defense by previous liberal administrations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): Hurricane season is Sagittarians' prime time. At the height of the hurricane, everyone else's property looks exactly as yours does all the time, and for at least a month after each storm you'll be able to blame your normal clutter on "that darned hurricane."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20): Great news, Capricorn! While everyone else is busy clinging to masts, bullying, bossing, jockeying, cleaning, straightening, bumping and misrepresenting, you can go into the office, steal all your co-workers' ideas, and efficiently claw your way to the top. Congratulations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19): Hurricanes present untold opportunities to Aquarians. While the police and other autorities are busy about the tasks enjoined on them by the storm, you will find unprecedented freedom to pursue your zany, fun-loving inclinations. Just don't pursue them around any Geminis. You may find yourself in an embarassing position on national television.

PISCES (FEB. 20-March 30): You will be beset by many problems during the coming hurricane cycle. An Aries will buly you, a Taurean will sell you a fradulent insurance policy, a Gemini or two will say terrible things about you on national television, a Leo will blame you when his scheme fizzles, a Virgo will make you feel guilty, a Libra will confuse you, a Scorpio will sucker you into his political campaign, a Capricorn will take your job, and an Aquarius will embarass you. You will be miserable. Congratulations.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: An unscrupulous Sun Sign astrologer will attempt to deceive you. She is, in meteorological terms a bag of wind.

'Natural rivalry' is reborn between two towns

Although his memory of that particular time and date is a bit fuzzy, his recollections of the two-town rivalry is not. "It was fantastic," he said. "It was a great rivarly, but very clean. It was all-scholastic, all-sports-minded and we had a great time playing against Scituate."

Froio said he is eagerly anticipating Saturday's rematch at Milliken Field in Cohasset. His two sons, John, a senior at CHS, and Glen, a junior, will be playing in that game.

"They're excited and so am I. It's going to bring back a lot of memories. I lived in Cohasset all my life, and to play against our friends in Scituate was the best game of the season," Froio recalled.

The coach of the 1951 Scituate High School football squad was the father of the present coach, Paul Johnson. His brother Dick, who still lives in Scituate, was a member of several victorious Scituate teams. He graduated in 1951 after a winning Thanksgiving Day match against Cohasset. The score that year was 18-0, he recalled.

"We played Cohasset one or two years after I graduated," he added, "and then we switched to Hull. But the rivalry was nothing like what we had with Cohasset."

The operator of a Marshfield restaurant, Johnson said he will "definitely" see the game on Saturday. His son Ricky, a senior halfback, will be playing against Johnson's old rival high school.

SHS Coach Johnson said he is also looking forward to Saturday's match, although Hurricane Gloria precluded any training sessions until Tuesday afternoon.

"Both schools are now in the South Shore League," Coach Johnson stated. "We're in the big school division and Cohasset is in the small school. But the bylaws dictate that we play the same small school for two years. The boys are looking forward to this game - playing against a lot of their friends. They play them in the other school sports. I'm confident that we can get our play together, and hopefully overcome a bout with the flu and some injuries."

The Cohasset high coach during the 1951 match between the two schools was Ed Dorr. As Chatterton explained, Dorr was a "legend in this town and in Scituate." A Scituate High School player in the 1940's, he was known as one of the best players in the South Shore.

Despite an injury sustained in Iwo Jima, Dorr continued to play football in college and was an acclaimed goal kicker. "The townies in Cohasset hated the idea of Dorr being named Cohasset High School coach because he was always so great against our team when he played," Chatterton laughed. "He'll always be remembered for single-handedly beating Cohasset."

A Scituate resident, Dorr retired from his position as Cohasset Athletic Director in 1975. He believed that 1951 was the last time Cohasset was set against its neighbor on Thanksgiving Day.

"We got bombed," he remembered, although unable to immediately recall the exact score. "I do remember they were running wild against us."

The loss was the result of an uneven competition between the schools. Scituate, Dorr said, was much larger than Cohasset. At that time, Cohasset High had only 30 football players from the upper three classes. Scituate had more than 200.

"I believe that year we had one senior, two juniors, two sophomores, and the rest of the starting team were freshmen," he said.

Another startling but true statistic, according to the former coach, is that after that 1951 loss to Scituate, Cohasset High School never won another game for three years.

"In 1950, a good amount of the team graduated," Dorr noted, "and after that it was very difficult to field a team. It was a mutual feeling between the Scituate coach and myself that 1951 would be it as far as the Scituate-Cohasset game was concerned."

Since his retirement, Dorr was been busy "really enjoying life" with golf, traveling with his wife, and minding his grandchildren.

Chatterton agreed that the kids playing in Saturday's game are excited about the renewed rivalry. "They've heard about the games of long ago and they're anxious to play them. Cohasset and Scituate have always had a friendly relationship, a natural rivalry. Hingham was like another continent. Scituate is like the same town," Chatterton said.

"Some added flavor to Saturday's game is that our head coach Phil Pisano and one of his assistants are teachers at Scituate High School. The traditions and coincidences here are almost too many to list."

Ed Mulvey, a member of the 1953 CHS graduating class, firmly believed that the last game between the two schools was played in 1952. "I played in the Thanksgiving Day game in 1952 and then graduated in the spring of 1953. That was definitely the last time we played Scituate High School," he said this week.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, Mulvey said he will probably attend Saturday's game.

"The rivalry between Cohasset and Scituate has always been closer than other towns. We played them in other sports and we knew the Scituate players very well.

"The Catholic parish in Cohasset at that time extended into North Scituate and Minot, so we knew a lot of the Scituate kids from church. It just seemed like a natural tie; we were very close to the Scituate kids."

The president of Pilgrim Cooperative Bank in Cohasset Village, Mulvey played center in what he said was the last game between Cohasset and Scituate - 32 years ago.

Landlord fights her eviction

involved in the court fight," Manns stated.

The next time the issue came up in Quincy Court, Judge Lewis Whitman heard the case. He called Manns' description of the situation "a complete fabrication." He said the tenant could remain in the home.

"I was dumbfounded. This time, we didn't even get any sympathy from the judge," she continued.

On Aug. 29, after a "terrible row" with Jones, the landlord took the woman's belongings into the garage and locked the doors to the house.

According to Manns, "I'm patient with problems, but this was too much."

Her husband, with whom she was separated, had arrived at the home, and when Jones returned, Roy Manns let her gather her items from the garage. As she turned to leave she said to him, "I'll own your house," Manns recalled.

Conversations followed with various attorneys who claimed Jones could start eviction notices against the landlord. One attorney advised Manns to contact Jones and arrange an agreement for the woman to live there again. "I said never!" Manns claimed.

An eviction notice was received by the landlord and her attorney failed to appeal it within the statutory time, nor did he appear in court on the hearing date. On Sept. 9, Manns was ordered by the court to leave her home without her possessions.

On Sept. 19, her husband Roy filed a motion for delay, but instead the court found Mrs. Manns in contempt of court. She was jailed for three hours at Quincy District Court so the tenant could return to the home without confrontation.

Jones said she later phoned the Judge to request Manns' release. The next day, Judge Whitman again told the Manns' that the tenant should remain in the home. "He said he had never seen such arrogant people as my husband and I," she said.

The trial which will decide whether Manns will be jailed for failing to obey the Judge's order has been postponed until Nov. 20. At that time, he will also consider whether Jones should be awarded an estimated $30,000 in damages from Manns for "property damage and emotional distress" caused by landlord during their long dispute.

"It's a nightmare going from bad to worse," Manns said this week as she awaits a decision which could send her to prison for three months. "This has been bloody awful. And if it doesn't end in November, how will it end?"

In the meantime, Manns said Jones' son has been warned that if he is a witness against his mother, he will be removed from the house. The son also reported that if Manns is found guilty of contempt and ordered to jail, her daughter Julie could be sent to a foster home for the duration.

"I'm a wreck," Manns said this week, awaiting the outcome of "my worse nightmare."

This is the extensive water damage caused to a bathroom in the Manns' home. it will cost about $1900 to replace the ruined tile work. (Paula Brackett)

How some families survived trauma of 'Gloria'

Gloria's aftermath was definitely more dangerous for us—with all the fire hazards that were created (putting the wrong fuel in the hurricane lamps, formerly used only as decoration); and in the operation of the Coleman, which we hadn't used or cleaned in years. I can see now that we weren't prepared. 1. We had candles, but not enough for three to ? days; 2. We didn't have any plans for heating the water we saved in our bathtub (the Coleman was "discovered", the hurricane lamps were afterthoughts); 3. Food —lots of leftovers for the first 24 hours, after that, nothing.

By Saturday afternoon the Board of Health closed Curtis and Central Market (no milk, no ice, no meat, no candles, no cheese). I went off to play chess by candlelight at the De Santis home, I noticed four to five homes around the Brockton Edison office on North Main St. had electricity. This looked hopeful.

People prepared for Gloria in different ways, not really knowing what to expect.Somepeopletied their trees together—others really did board up their windows. Bill Morgan (Bow Street) holed up in the Log in Fire, hoping to get stuck there for the duration (his wife reported).

Manny and Noel Ripley had some concerns about their horses, but said horses don't become too upset over the natural elements (high winds). A limb did fall on the stall during the storm, but the horses were fine.

Prior to the storm people everywhere reported animals acting strangely—staying close to home, followingthemaroundthehouse.Six-year-oldHillary Strong said she wished she could be stranded at Thayer Academy, where she is in second grade. "We could have slept on the cushions at the library."

Ken Ekberg, responsible Deer Hill School principal, had initially planned to "ride the storm out" in his boat in the harbor; however, Alma was able to convince him that this would not be wise. Benjy Watson was seen, in foul weather gear, heading out to his boat. And the lobstermen were putting bridals on their traps. Not being particularly interested in boats, I never checked up on any of this. If people want to die for their boats, that's fine. I would think there are a lot better things to risk one's life for.

Martha and Arne Gjesteby no sooner unloaded "Solace," their boat, when they seriously considered returning to her shortly after the storm. "Solace has everything, electricity, hot water." Interestingly, in preparation for Gloria, Martha waxed and waxed her floors???

Laura Doherty wonders now what possessed her to do a full week's shopping directly before the storm. Luckily, she and Jack found ice in Hull shortly after the storm and were able to save most of their food.

The storm brought out mostly the best in people. People shared their food, their hot showers, transportation when needed. Friends (thanks, Steve) gave hours and their chain saws to help others get rid of fallen trees.

Somehow, the mail got through. But the writer of this "Aftermath" saga has not reached the point of giving acolades. After all—it is Sunday night. There is no ice in Hull. How does Brockton Edison decide what streets to turn on? How long will the Cohasset Chess Club ruin its collective eyesight playing chess by candlelight?

Why are Cohasset Public Schools always the last to decide if there will be school or not be school? It is Sunday night—and every school on the South Shore except Cohasset has announced there will be no school tomorrow, why should this be so difficult?

What are non-perishable foods and where do you buy them? Where does one buy bread? These are the simple questions the hurricane has presented.

It was only exciting until I wanted a shower.

What would Cohasset residents do differently to prepare for Gloira?

Jane Goedecke: I would have emptied out my freezer—cooking things ahead of time. I was preparing for the hurricane itself—not for loss of power. Otherwise, I followed all the rules. I don't think there's anything I could have done differently—except I would have eaten a lot more.

Anonymous: I might send my children some place else—to their grandfather's.

Marie Caristi: I would be on gas.I would also have more candles. I suppose one thing I might do is have dry ice on hand.

Jim Drysdale: I stood behind my home and quivered over a huge pine tree. I would have had food moved into safe places—but where is a safe place? I moved my Bluefish into my condo in Boston. It would have been nice if some civil authorities would let people know of facilities for storage.

Sally Davenport: Knowing what I now now, we would not have had to move everything out of the cellar and the garage. (The lawnmowers were in the kitchen; the bicycles were in the dining room.) We had our grill and ate soup, bread. And we had two lovely kerosene lamps.

Larry Fone: I think I would have been better prepared to cook than I was. I think in Cohasset it's good to have a small sportsman store. Otherwide, we would never be prepared. Next time, I'll make sure I have more than a chafing dish to cook with (this, from the former owner of Cookworks).

Julie Guild: I would probably, having advance warning, get rid of the food in the refigerator. You have to cook just enough for one meal. The refrigerator does you in.

North Main street resident: I probably would have bought dry ice or as much ice as I could, and stored it. I did have a cooking stove, and enough candles.

How the town fared in aftermath

clock, have harbored "historic respect and cherishing by the community," according to Rev. Atkinson. That is why the congregation is requesting the financial help of the entire community to complete the restoration work begun two weeks ago."

This is not the first time the famed building has undergone major reconstruction. The long steeple which climbs several hundred feet into the air has been knocked to the ground twice before by lightning.

According to Rev. Atkinson, that occurred prior to this century. Since that time, lightning rods have prevented similar incidents. "But steeples are accustomed to that sort of occurrence," he noted.

The problems with the scaffolding, he said, will not place them far behind their reconstruction schedule. Although there may be more expense involved than orignally estimated, Rev. Atkinson said this weekend's situation will be resolved between the contractor and the insurance companies.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley inspected the scaffolding prior to Friday's anticipated storm, and ordered the wooden planks laid across the metal frames to be taken down. The contractor complied and later barricaded the Commons area for the duration of the storm and the repair work.

When the pin loosened from the bracings, the top of the scaffolding leaned against the steeple. Posts that had previously been inserted into the steeple helped strengthen the structure and the scaffolding that was positioned next to it, Rev. Atkinson explained.

"It was a case of what was thought to be the stronger member, was being held up by the weaker member," he philosophized.

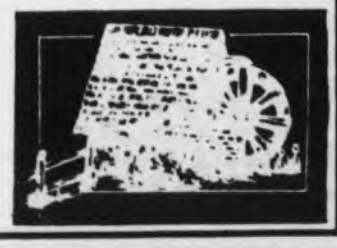
Actually, he continued, the rescue efforts Saturday afternoon proved to be as much an attraction to local sightseers as the leaning scaffolding. "They had a couple of young fellows dangling from the end of a crane as they fixed it," Rev. Atkinson explained. "It would be quite a scary thing for anyone not accustomed to that sort of thing. But these boys had quite a lot of fun time up there. They were very skillful about dismantling it without it collapsing. Everything came down fine."

Along with repairing the Meeting House steeple, the congregation is planning to strip and repaint the building. The southwest side of the structure will be re-sided.

Rev. Atkinson said the community will be invited to participate in the renovation expenses to restore this town landmark.

After the storm

Monday and Tuesday following the Friday hurricane, power was still out in many sections of town. No school announcements greeted the youngsters Monday morning, while Town Hall was staffed to minimum level.



Police and fire departments reported no major incidents through the storm or its aftermath. "Just a number of people calling to complain about no power," according to Officer Paul Grassie.

The town emerges from 'Gloria'

The Town Hall was unable to receive incoming phone calls Monday and Tuesday.

Because of a lengthy agenda, selectmen decided to hold their meeting Monday by the light of candle flames and kerosene lamp. At about 10:30 p.m., Frank England quipped, "it's time to end the meeting, my candle is just about out."

Selectman England said he had been in contact with a representative of the electric company who assured him Cohasset was receiving full priority attention. Company personnel said trucks were sent from Connecticut, Ohio and as far away as Canada, which were "fully manned," England said. It was planned that fifty percent of the town would have power by Monday, with the remainder of the town completed within two days. There would be sporadic outages, he said, which will require repairs to individual home connections.

According to Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, clean-up efforts throughout the town were proceeding well. As of Monday, all streets were opened for traveling, although the town was still in the midst of helping residents haul fallen tree limbs to the dump.

After repeated pleas from residents, the Board of Health ordered the Cedar Street landfill opened for three hours on Monday, a day when the dump is normally closed.

Laugelle described the turmoil following the storm as "a real problem. There was a lot of tree and home damage."

His responsibility was to clear a path 15-feet wide on each road for access by emergency vehicles. By Monday, he reported that all roads including private ways, were accessible and safe to travel through.

The police department reported no unusual incidents through the storm or the power-outage. Officer Grassie noted that six extra officers reported to duty Friday afternoon and evening, and four extra men were assigned to the night shift.

That department, along with the fire station, was operating at full power with the assistance of a fire department generator.

The schools were closed Friday, with only custodial help, Asst. Supt. Steve Hart and Supt. Eugene assisted in the bus relocation and building maintenance through the storm.

"We drove the buses from their usual parking area to the high school, in the area between the administrative offices and the auditorium. We wanted them there in case we had to evacuate people from their homes during the storm," Supt. Crowell said.

Cafeteria Director Patricia Wunschel was at the high school along with Mildred Salyards to prepare food throughout the day for anyone arriving at the cafeteria. Supt. Crowell said only eight persons came to the schools during the height of the storm.

The superintendent praised the efforts of the cafeteria help along with the custodial crew including head custodian Charles Stover, and his crew Donald Ainslie, Donald Haasy, and Kevin Soule.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, after a meeting with all department supervisors early Friday morning, told Town Hall employees to leave for home. As of Tuesday morning, the telephones were not working properly and the power was still off in the building.

Tuesday, he was to request a minimum work force in each office.

Although the town's computer was not in operation, Andrew said town employees were given advance warning and no problems resulted. Bills could not be paid, or warrants completed. But the town's payroll will be signed on time, he noted.

In his hometown of Brookline, there was a small problem with fallen trees. But the power was never shut off there, Andrew said. He later traveled to North Andover where the power was cut for 12 hours.

When Andrew checked on his home on Martha's Vineyard, he found the situation "not bad. And they had power."

State Party chairman, Chet Atkins, has announced that the Donkey Project Awards will be presented to the Cohasset Democratic communities at a ceremony on Monday, Sept. 30 at 7:15 p.m. at UMASS/Boston Harbor Campus, in the large Science Auditorium.

Teddy Kennedy Jr., Honorary Co-Chairman of Massachusetts Democrats Against Hunger: The Donkey Project, will present citations to the thirty top donor committees and unions which excelled in the $40,000 fundraising drive for Ethiopian famine relief. A representative from Grassroots International, the Cambridge relief agency which administered the funds, will also be in attendance.

Committees to receive awards include: Boston Ward 17, Bourne, Burlington, Chatham, Chelmsford, Chelsea, Cohasset, Dover, Duxbury, Essex, Fall River, Falmouth, Fitchburg Ward 6, Groton, Hanover, Haverhill Ward 2, Hingham, Holliston, Hull, Lowell, Marshfield, New Bedford, Northampton, Orleans, Revere, Saugus, Scituate, Sherborn, Watertown, Weston and Weymouth.

The Awards ceremony will precede a regularly scheduled meeting of the Democratic State Committee.

How some families survived trauma of 'Gloria'

Gloria's aftermath was definitely more dangerous for us—with all the fire hazards that were created (putting the wrong fuel in the hurricane lamps, formerly used only as decoration); and in the operation of the Coleman, which we hadn't used or cleaned in years. I can see now that we weren't prepared. 1. We had candles, but not enough for three to ? days; 2. We didn't have any plans for heating the water we saved in our bathtub (the Coleman was "discovered", the hurricane lamps were afterthoughts); 3. Food —lots of leftovers for the first 24 hours, after that, nothing.

By Saturday afternoon the Board of Health closed Curtis and Central Market (no milk, no ice, no meat, no candles, no cheese). I went off to play chess by candlelight at the De Santis home, I noticed four to five homes around the Brockton Edison office on North Main St. had electricity. This looked hopeful.

People prepared for Gloria in different ways, not really knowing what to expect.Somepeopletied their trees together—others really did board up their windows. Bill Morgan (Bow Street) holed up in the Log in Fire, hoping to get stuck there for the duration (his wife reported).

Manny and Noel Ripley had some concerns about their horses, but said horses don't become too upset over the natural elements (high winds). A limb did fall on the stall during the storm, but the horses were fine.

Prior to the storm people everywhere reported animals acting strangely—staying close to home, followingthemaroundthehouse.Six-year-oldHillary Strong said she wished she could be stranded at Thayer Academy, where she is in second grade. "We could have slept on the cushions at the library."

Ken Ekberg, responsible Deer Hill School principal, had initially planned to "ride the storm out" in his boat in the harbor; however, Alma was able to convince him that this would not be wise. Benjy Watson was seen, in foul weather gear, heading out to his boat. And the lobstermen were putting bridals on their traps. Not being particularly interested in boats, I never checked up on any of this. If people want to die for their boats, that's fine. I would think there are a lot better things to risk one's life for.

Martha and Arne Gjesteby no sooner unloaded "Solace," their boat, when they seriously considered returning to her shortly after the storm. "Solace has everything, electricity, hot water." Interestingly, in preparation for Gloria, Martha waxed and waxed her floors???

Laura Doherty wonders now what possessed her to do a full week's shopping directly before the storm. Luckily, she and Jack found ice in Hull shortly after the storm and were able to save most of their food.

The storm brought out mostly the best in people. People shared their food, their hot showers, transportation when needed. Friends (thanks, Steve) gave hours and their chain saws to help others get rid of fallen trees.

Somehow, the mail got through. But the writer of this "Aftermath" saga has not reached the point of giving acolades. After all—it is Sunday night. There is no ice in Hull. How does Brockton Edison decide what streets to turn on? How long will the Cohasset Chess Club ruin its collective eyesight playing chess by candlelight?

Why are Cohasset Public Schools always the last to decide if there will be school or not be school? It is Sunday night—and every school on the South Shore except Cohasset has announced there will be no school tomorrow, why should this be so difficult?

What are non-perishable foods and where do you buy them? Where does one buy bread? These are the simple questions the hurricane has presented.

It was only exciting until I wanted a shower.

What would Cohasset residents do differently to prepare for Gloira?

Jane Goedecke: I would have emptied out my freezer—cooking things ahead of time. I was preparing for the hurricane itself—not for loss of power. Otherwise, I followed all the rules. I don't think there's anything I could have done differently—except I would have eaten a lot more.

Anonymous: I might send my children some place else—to their grandfather's.

Marie Caristi: I would be on gas.I would also have more candles. I suppose one thing I might do is have dry ice on hand.

Jim Drysdale: I stood behind my home and quivered over a huge pine tree. I would have had food moved into safe places—but where is a safe place? I moved my Bluefish into my condo in Boston. It would have been nice if some civil authorities would let people know of facilities for storage.

Sally Davenport: Knowing what I now now, we would not have had to move everything out of the cellar and the garage. (The lawnmowers were in the kitchen; the bicycles were in the dining room.) We had our grill and ate soup, bread. And we had two lovely kerosene lamps.

Larry Fone: I think I would have been better prepared to cook than I was. I think in Cohasset it's good to have a small sportsman store. Otherwide, we would never be prepared. Next time, I'll make sure I have more than a chafing dish to cook with (this, from the former owner of Cookworks).

Julie Guild: I would probably, having advance warning, get rid of the food in the refigerator. You have to cook just enough for one meal. The refrigerator does you in.

North Main street resident: I probably would have bought dry ice or as much ice as I could, and stored it. I did have a cooking stove, and enough candles.

clock, have harbored "historic respect and cherishing by the community," according to Rev. Atkinson. That is why the congregation is requesting the financial help of the entire community to complete the restoration work begun two weeks ago."

This is not the first time the famed building has undergone major reconstruction. The long steeple which climbs several hundred feet into the air has been knocked to the ground twice before by lightning.

According to Rev. Atkinson, that occurred prior to this century. Since that time, lightning rods have prevented similar incidents. "But steeples are accustomed to that sort of occurrence," he noted.

The problems with the scaffolding, he said, will not place them far behind their reconstruction schedule. Although there may be more expense involved than orignally estimated, Rev. Atkinson said this weekend's situation will be resolved between the contractor and the insurance companies.

Fire Chief Martin Dooley inspected the scaffolding prior to Friday's anticipated storm, and ordered the wooden planks laid across the metal frames to be taken down. The contractor complied and later barricaded the Commons area for the duration of the storm and the repair work.

When the pin loosened from the bracings, the top of the scaffolding leaned against the steeple. Posts that had previously been inserted into the steeple helped strengthen the structure and the scaffolding that was positioned next to it, Rev. Atkinson explained.

"It was a case of what was thought to be the stronger member, was being held up by the weaker member," he philosophized.

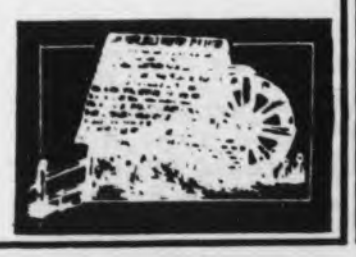
Actually, he continued, the rescue efforts Saturday afternoon proved to be as much an attraction to local sightseers as the leaning scaffolding. "They had a couple of young fellows dangling from the end of a crane as they fixed it," Rev. Atkinson explained. "It would be quite a scary thing for anyone not accustomed to that sort of thing. But these boys had quite a lot of fun time up there. They were very skillful about dismantling it without it collapsing. Everything came down fine."

Along with repairing the Meeting House steeple, the congregation is planning to strip and repaint the building. The southwest side of the structure will be re-sided.

Rev. Atkinson said the community will be invited to participate in the renovation expenses to restore this town landmark.

After the storm

Monday and Tuesday following the Friday hurricane, power was still out in many sections of town. No school announcements greeted the youngsters Monday morning, while Town Hall was staffed to minimum level.



Police and fire departments reported no major incidents through the storm or its aftermath. "Just a number of people calling to complain about no power," according to Officer Paul Grassie.

The Town Hall was unable to receive incoming phone calls Monday and Tuesday.

Because of a lengthy agenda, selectmen decided to hold their meeting Monday by the light of candle flames and kerosene lamp. At about 10:30 p.m., Frank England quipped, "it's time to end the meeting, my candle is just about out."

Selectman England said he had been in contact with a representative of the electric company who assured him Cohasset was receiving full priority attention. Company personnel said trucks were sent from Connecticut, Ohio and as far away as Canada, which were "fully manned," England said. It was planned that fifty percent of the town would have power by Monday, with the remainder of the town completed within two days. There would be sporadic outages, he said, which will require repairs to individual home connections.

According to Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle, clean-up efforts throughout the town were proceeding well. As of Monday, all streets were opened for traveling, although the town was still in the midst of helping residents haul fallen tree limbs to the dump.

After repeated pleas from residents, the Board of Health ordered the Cedar Street landfill opened for three hours on Monday, a day when the dump is normally closed.

Laugelle described the turmoil following the storm as "a real problem. There was a lot of tree and home damage."

His responsibility was to clear a path 15-feet wide on each road for access by emergency vehicles. By Monday, he reported that all roads including private ways, were accessible and safe to travel through.

Lottery chief explains Megabucks trends

by Cathy Conley

The player saunters up to the cashier at his favorite variety store.

He asks for that familiar 4 x 6 slip of red-white-and blue paper.

He x's out those six numbers that are going to bring him a million bucks, hands it back to the cashier with a hard-earned dollar.

She puts it into a green machine. There is the sound of a high speed computer, a beep, and out pops that ticket bordered in 19 multi-colored G's —his ticket to millionaire land at least until the numbers are announced.

This scene replays itself hundreds of thousands of times a week across the Commonwealth.

The player has done what has become ritual for many — like buying the morning paper. He has bought his Megabucks ticket.

Not only has he bought a few days or hours of delicious hope and excitement, he has contributed to the financial well-being of his favorite Mom and Pop store. And he is contributing megabucks to the well-being of his community.

The Massachusetts State Lottery returned a total of $23,204,858 last year to the ten Mariner towns —Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Weymouth, Hanover, Pembroke and Randolph. Combined population of the 10 towns is 211,590.

These millions have been returned in the form of lottery fund distribution, prizes and commissions and bonuses to sales agents.

Total lottery game sales in the ten Mariner towns in 1984 were $26,574,608 and the amount returned to the local economy was $23,204,858, according to James E. Hosker, executive director of the Massachusetts State Lottery.

"The primary purpose of the lottery is to generate revenues for the cities and towns," Hosker said. "In our first 13 years we generated more than $1.5 billion toward that objective — money that has gone to support public schools, libraries, police and fire departments, senior citizens' programs and countless other activities undertaken in the public interest by the state's 351 cities and towns. That's a billion and a half dollars that didn't have to be raised through property taxes."

Hosker reports that in 1984 lottery prizes paid to the residents of the ten Mariner towns amounted to nearly $15.5 million.

Commissions and bonuses earned by the 122 sales agents in the ten communities amounted to over $1.6 million last year.

In addition thirty-six charitable organizations in the 10 towns earned over $1.5 million in 1984 from Beano games — which are all controlled by the Lottery Commission.

"Above everything I would hate to see Beano eliminated. It is part of the social life of so many elderly," Hosker said.

If Megabucks or Beano doesn't satisfy your urge for a quick win, then there's the daily Numbers game or the ever-changing $1 Instant ticket, or the game that started it all, the Weekly Game.

Lotteries find their roots in the birth of the colonies, Hosker said.

"The first lottery was held in 1620. Jamestown had run out of money and asked the king for permission to run a lottery to survive," Hosker said.

"The buildings at Harvard College were financed by lotteries. In 1775, Faneuil Hall burned down and was rebuilt through a lottery," he said.

"Lotteries have come and gone. If they have failed, it has been because they were beaten from within. Because of computers nowadays, you can run lotteries with much tighter security," Hosker said.

Hosker points out just how beneficial The Lottery has been to each individual community.

"You have to look at what is going back to each community in tax relief. You have to look at what has gone back in prizes."

"And we've rejuvenated a lot of small businesses in town who have become our agents. In 1972, the Mom and Pop stores were going out of business," Hosker said.

Agents in the Mariner towns make from $15,000 to $20,000 a year from The Lottery.

"Needless to say, we lose very few agents," Hosker said.

Hosker said that surveys show 62% of people in Massachusetts play The Game — as it is popularly known — in one form or another.

The Game's executive director is fascinated by the actions of Megabucks winners after they learn they have hit the jackpot.

"A winner comes into the office in Braintree and gives us the ticket. It takes about three or four hours to process it before the check can be written," Hosker said.

"If a person under 35 wins he invariably comes back at noon in a brand new car. A young person usually changes his life completely."

"But a person over 35 really doesn't change his life style that much. They might buy a little house down on the Cape. They might send their kids to a better college. But they live pretty much the same as they did before," Hosker said.

He added that very few million dollar winners stop working, no matter what their age.

Hosker explained that Lottery officials continue to puzzle over the best distribution of prize money, to keep the most number of people happy.

"How big is big? The complaint I always get is that the $40 you get for choosing four of six numbers and the $400 for choosing five out of six numbers is too low."

"But a person buys the Megabucks ticket to win $1 million," he said. Hosker went on to explain how it works.

"If we gave $10,000 for getting five out of six numbers and $1,000 for four out of six, the jackpot would only be about $10,000. There would be no million dollar jackpot. You've taken all the money away," he said.

In other words, he explained, the total jackpot would be divided up into too many small payoffs.

Those looking for smaller, perhaps more immediate prizes, can play one of The Game's other games, Hosker said.

Half of all the money raised goes into the jackpot. "If we do $4 million worth of business tonight, I'm going to have $2 million in prizes."

"In order to give a big prize, you have to give small prizes to the four-out-of-six and five-out-of-six winners," Hosker explained.

"People want the big prize money. The first game we had with a large prize guaranteed was Megabucks. Suddenly we sold 8 million tickets."

"If we have an $18 million jackpot, we'd do $18 million dollars worth of business. If I had a $40 million jackpot, I'd do $40 million worth of business. Sales rise to the level of the jackpot."

Hosker said that sales might fall off if the most popular numbers kept coming in.

What numbers do people play most out of the 36 available for Megabucks?

"Believe it or not, 1 is the most popular number, 2 is the second most popular number, 3 is the third most popular and so forth."

"The only exceptions are 7, 13, and 36. These numbers vary in the frequency of being played," Hosker said.

"If 1-2-3-4-5-6 came in tonight, there would be about 3,000 winners. I knew last Saturday (September 21) when two numbers over 30 came in — 31 and 34 — there would be no winners. Nobody plays numbers 31 through 35."

"If you look at the Lottery number tonight and there are three numbers in the single digits, and everything is under 31, no question there is a winner. The question is — how many winners," he said.

"We've had as many as 21 winners. The jackpot was so divided we ended up giving all the money out at once."

"If anyone can tell us a better way of breaking up the money, and keeping the largest amount of people happy, then tell us how," Hosker said.

But the bottom line as far as Hosker is concerned: Any way you want to play The Game is okay with him.

Scituate resident among Notre Dame appointments

St. Anne Monica Ruane, S.N.D., principal of Notre Dame Acadmey, Hingham, has announced the appointments of new personnel to the school faculty and staff.

Joining the Religion Department as a teacher is Linda Wild of Scituate. A graduate of Northeastern University, Mrs. Wild also holds a master's degree in religious education from Emmanuel College. She previously held teaching positions in Kentucky, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and in the American Military School System, Germany.

Mary Brooks of South Weymouth, will be teaching science this year at NDA. A former Chemistry Lab supervisor at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, Mrs. Brooks holds a Bachelor of Science degree in chemistry from Northeastern University and a Master's Degree in education from Eastern Nazarene College.

Joining the administrative staff as Development Director is Marie Vance Hoy of Duxbury. A former executive vice president of Notre Dame College, Manchester, N.H. Mrs. Joy previously served as university editor at Boston University and as associate dean of student affairs at the University of California/Irvine.

She is a graduate of George Washington University and holds a master's degree from Claremont Graduate School.

A new addition to NDA's business staff is Sister Marguerite Gannon, S.N.D. who will serve as assistant treasurer of the Academy. Sister recently returned to the area after serving as principal of an elementary school in Birmingham, Ala. for seven years. Before her southern assignment, Sister was administrator at Notre Dame Academy, Tyngsboro. She holds degrees from Emmanuel College and Boston College.

Sister Mary Doyle, S.N.D. has been named to the Academy's library staff. A former elementary school principal and a former junior high school teacher, Sister is a graduate of Emmanuel College with degrees in English and education and also holds a master's degree in school administration from Salem State College.

Named as public relations director at Notre Dame Academy is Mrs. Phyllis Hayes of Canton. A graduate of Emmanuel College, Mrs. Hayes is a former feature writer and editor of the Canton Courier.

Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, the oldest Catholic day academy for girls in New England, began its 132rd year of operation this month with a welcoming orientation for 104 members of the class of 1989.

The Academy, under the direction of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur since its founding in 1853, has been located on Main St., Hingham, since 1965. Prior to that, the college preparatory school which has graduated nearly 5,000 women, was situated at several locations in Boston.

Welcomed into the class of 1989 by Principal Sister Anne Monica Ruane S.N.D. were the following Cohasset residents: Michelle Babin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Babin, 120 Jerusalem Rd. and Denise Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, 33 Cedar Acres Lane.

Studds submits bass bill

Congessman Gerry E. Studds introduced legislation last week to extend legal protections for the imperiled striped bass for an additional two-and-a-half years.

Existing restrictions on striped bass landings, enforced under a federal statute authored by Studds in 1984, have "helped slow the decline of a species of immense commercial value," Studds said. "The combined commercial and recreational catch of the striped bass has dropped by 90 percent in the last 20 years. Studies released in May indicate that bass stocks remain dangerously low, and that overfishing, habitat pollution, and acid rain have all contributed to the problem."

The bill introduced last week would "encourage continued action by Atlantic Coast states to help restore the striped bass to its historic status as one of the most important commercial and recreational fisheries in the United States," Studds said.

Current law set a deadline of June 30, 1985, for compliance with guidelines, set by the Atlantic States Marine Fisheries Commission, requiring a 55 percent reduction of the striped bass catch in the waters of each east coast state. The statute also authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to impose a moratorium on all striped bass landings in states which fail to comply with these guidelines.

"I am pleased that the states' record of compliance with these guidelines has thus far been excellent, and that it has not been necesary for the Secretary to invoke his enforcement authority," said Studds, a ranking member of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. "It is, nonetheless, obvious that restoration of the striped bass will be a long term proposition and that further protective steps may be needed in the future. This legislation is a critical part of our ongoing efforts to ensure the health of our bass stocks."

Boston vanpool has seats

A Caravan vanpool making stops in Hull, Hingham and Weymouth presently has seats available for commuters traveling to Boston and Watertown.

The vanpool arrives in Boston at 8 a.m. and makes stops at South Station, the Financial District and Back Bay before continuing on to Watertown for an 8:30 drop-off. The vanpool departs Watertown at 4:30 and makes stops in Boston, leaving South Station at 5:20.

Commuters interested in joining this vanpool can contact Caravan at 973-7189 in Boston.

Caravan is a non-profit corporation which works with Massachusetts communities and corporations to organize commuter ridesharing to work.

Caravan currently serves 2,400 people in 160 vans throughout the state. In addition to its carpool and vanpool matching service, Caravan also offers commuters, at no charge, information about other public and private transportation alternatives to their particular route, including bus, train, commuter boat and bicycle options.

Hockey registration extended

The Massachusetts Floor Hockey Association extended its registration dates for individuals and teams because of the overwhelming response received.

All games in all age divisions will be played in a new indoor floor street hockey facility which is located on Recreation Park Dr. in Hingham inside the South Shore Sports Center.

It is located near the Hingham Plaza between Routes 3 and 53.

Absolute final registration dates will be Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 28 and 29, Sat., Oct. 5 , Sunday, Oct. 6 and Sat. and Sunday Oct. 12 and 13.

All registrations will be held at the Sports Center and all will be held form 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All league divisions are non-contact and will include two newly formed divisions Penguin Division (ages 7-9) and the Women's Division (age 16 and over). The remaining divisions are the Beaver (ages 10-12), Cadet (ages 13-15), Freshman (ages 16-19) and Senior Division (ages 18 years-old and over). The Senior Divison will also be split into three levels of competition, Class A, B and C.

With the expanded divisions, there is also a need for additional coaches and referees. Interested coaching applicants should contact Mark at 834-4862 and referee and scorekeeping applicants should contact Brian at 843-0566 or 337-1744.

Senior division teams are expected to open regular season play Oct. 13 and all remaining divisions are expected to begin no later than Oct. 27.

Any further information regarding individual or team registration can be obtained by contacting the Sports Center at 740-1105.

Nantucket basket course

The Nantucket Lightship basket course will take place Oct. 29 and 30.

It will run through Nov. 13. The course will be given by Bill Severens of Nantucket.

The course will be held at Cohasset Hardware in the pottery loft. Call Tina Watson for information at 383-0185.

'Chemically Free'

Mrs. Helen L. Hooper, the chairman of the Family Service Committee of the Social Service League, opened the first session of the three-part seminar, "Chemically Free," last week by introducing the panel of speakers: Bill Spinks of the Alcohol Resourse Center; Michael Gill, health coordinator for the Cohasset schools, and Mr. Rosita.

Only students of junior and senior high school age were present. Adults were excluded, so that the students felt free to discuss the issues raised.

Some basic information was given by the panel on mind-altering drugs and their effect, particularly alcohol and marijuana. The concerns of the students were brought out, and peer pressure issues and refusal techniques were discussed. A film was shown to highlight these issues.

The second session of the series will be held in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church Wednesday, Oct. 9 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. This will be parents' night and no students will be present. Parents of all ages of children are invited.

The final session will be held at the same time and place on Wednesday, Oct. 16, when both parents and children will be present. All interested persons are welcome.

Refreshments are served at each meeting.

Community Bloodmobile

Seventy-nine donors donated 72 pints of blood at the recent Cohasset Community Bloodmobile held at the Unitarian Parish House.

Groups donating to this Bloodmobile were Seavey Engineering, six; Norfolk Conveyor, six; Rotary, seven; Legion, three; Mason's, two; Firefighter's, one; Beechwood Congregation, two, Second Congregational, 12; St. Stephens, 10; First Parish, one; St. Anthony, 17; Special, five; and Independent, seven. Fourteen new donors were included in the above; and 57 had donated previously in 1985.

Blood Chairman Corinne Cahill wishes to thank all those who regularly contribute to the success of the Cohasset Tri-ennial Bloodmobiles—in addition to the donors, those who made telephone contacts for the various groups, the volunteers on the day of the Bloodmobile, the media, the Red Cross staff, and again, the Unitarian Church for the use of their Parish House.

There is a special recognition night being held for volunteers on Jan. 8. The next Community Bloodmobile will be held Monday, Jan. 27.

Yard sale postponed

The Cohasset Historical Society's fall Flea Market and Yard Sale, originally scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 28, has been postponed to Saturday, Oct. 5.

Gloria's untimely visit to New England shores occasioned the postponement, but has not affected the quantity or diversity of pre-owned useable items which may be seen at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the day of the rescheduled event.

The Lothrop House is at 14 Summer Street, Cohasset. Among items that will be available are books, clothes, household wares of many types, sporting equipment, artworks and various kinds of collectables.

Refreshments will be available at a modest fee for hungry buyers. Featured in the sale will be a new collection of the well-known and popular giant sized posters from the South Shore Music Circus picturing this past season's show personalities.

Dealer spaces are available for $10. Please call the Society at 383-0773 or 383-6930.

Be sure to look in at the Cohasset Historical Society's giant fall Flea Market and Yard Sale to find those unusual things you may have been looking for but couldn't find anywhere else.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

GOOD RAPPORT

Many pain sufferers report that they value the "holistic" approach of chiropractic as much as its manipulative techniques. In short, they feel that their whole person is being treated, rather than an isolated body part. A chiropractor seeks to listen to and take into account the patient's feelings and experiences. A good practitioner-patient relationship helps the pain sufferer. The most effective treatment combines talking and listening. It encompasses advice in addition to procedures. From this give-and-take there often emerges a multi-faceted plan which can include a nutrition plan, relaxation exercises, a vitamin and mineral regimen and advice on daily living habits. Chiropractic believes that no body part or system works in isolation. Every part is treated as an element of one's whole being.

The science of chiropractic is a natural, knifeless and drugless approach to dealing with the needs of your health preferences and requirements. It is important to establish a sound patient relationship and understanding. Obviously some difficulties take some time to correct. Thus an ongoing and informed approach is necessary on the part of all involved. For an assessment of your needs as well as answers to your questions, we welcome your call at the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt. Many insurance plans accepted as well as Workers Comp cases.

First Parish

Parish Committee Notes— As part of the restoration project of our meeting house, clapboards and wide boards will soon be removed. Anyone interested in these should contact Max Pounder now at 383-6869 for further information.

Max urgently needs some storage area for these boards. Do you have a barn, shed or garage where these could be stored temporarily?

The next Parish Committee meeting will be on Monday, September 30th at 7:45 p.m. in the Parish House.

Ministerial Relations Committee—

The Ministerial Relations Committee invites your comments, feelings, suggestions, criticisms, observations on any and all First Parish functions.

Our purpose for the third year will be to provide a bridge or another line of communication between the members and the minister and Parish Committee.

We will bring member's concerns up for discussion, assuring confidentiality, and we will respond directly to those members, relaying decisions or responses from the committee being addressed.

You may share your ideas with these three members: Sine Pounder, 383-6869; Linc Bloomfield, 383-1360; Dorothy Booth, 383-0824.

Also, see the following 1984-85 Report to the Annual Meeting.

Ministerial Relations Committee— Sine Pounder, chairperson, members: Linc Bloomfield, Dorothy Booth, Ed Atkinson.

The Ministerial Relations Committee met four times this year, our purpose being to act as a communications agent within the church bringing ideas and concerns to the minister from the congregation and with the minister responding to these through our discussion.

Preservation Fund Drive—

I am pleased to announce that John Kornet has accepted the position of director for the Meeting House fund drive.

Work is just beginning (on both the meeting House and the Fund Drive) and those of you who are interested in having the Fund Drive be an "out and out" unqualified success and would be willing to assist in the planning and organizing activities, please let us know! Call Bill Bell at 383-9837 or John Kornet at 383-6576.

Family Life Forum— This program will be a series of informal conversations on life issues. At our first program on Friday, Oct. 4 at 7:45 p.m. in the living room of the Parish House, Carolyn Hausman, a social worker from the Cohasset Social Service League, will speak with us on the subject of "dealing with our aging parents."

Aftermath of Picnic— Found one pair of shoes and two pairs of glasses. These may be picked up at the church offices. Serving dishes, etc, may be retrieved from the church kitchen.

Ballou Channing District— Annual Fall Conference, Saturday, Oct. 5 at the Westminster Unitarian Church, 119 Kenyon Haven, East Greenwich, R.I. "A New Partnership in Sharing" Call the church office at 383-1100 for additional information.

Second Congregational

Church School— It was great to see everyone back and eager to work after a restful vacation. Teachers are as full of enthusiasm as the children. A few substitute church school teachers are needed. If you could help out occasionally, please let me know. Please put these additions on your calendar: Oct. 13, Kite Day in Bates Hall. Oct. 31, Halloween Party to return UNICEF money. See you in church with your families this Sunday. Request: Does anyone have a spare rocking chair which would be donated for use in our child care room. If so please contact the church office.

"Chemically Free"— The Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring a three part series, especially designed to bring students and parents together to raise awareness of issues regarding alcohol and drugs. Leading the sessions will be professionals from the South Shore Council of Alcoholism, and the Alcohol Resource Center and Mike Gill, health coordinator for the Cohasset schools.

The series will be held on three Wednesday evenings, Oct. 2, 9, and 16 from 7:30 until 9 p.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's, 16 Highland Ave. For further information, call the Social Service League office, 383-0771, or 383-0821.

New Friends— This new program in Cohasset introduces lonely, handicapped or socially isolated people to new friends. If you would like to be a visitor (training provided) or a "visitee," please contact the Social Service League at 383-0771

In the Family— We are sad to note the death last weekend of one of our church's long term members, Minnie Andrews. Memorial services were held Sept. 25. Mrs. Andrews' family requested that in lieu of flowers, memorial donations be sent to our church. Those who knew her will not be surprised to learn that Minnie had just begun a handwork project for the Village Fair.

Congratulations— to William and Rebbeca Bates-McArthur on the birth of the second son, Scott Andrew on Sept. 18 and to Robert and Pamela (Galligan) Lindsey, married last Sunday in the church.

St. Anthony's

Baptisms— Erin and John Healy, Christine Hardy.

Banns of Marriage— Lynne O'Hearn-William McDonald; Marian Lynch-Mark Winchester; Stephen Arnold-Janice Krause.

Choir Rehearsal— Thursday, Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m.

Sunday Mass Schedule Change— beginning Oct. 6. The early Mass will be celebrated at 8 a.m.

Commended students

Robert E. Corkery, Heather A. Davenport, Jacqueline M. Fahey, Justin E. DeSantis, Michael A. Greiner and Brian H. Leary have been designated Commended Students in the 1986 National Merit Scholarship Program.

These seniors will receive a Letter of Commendation in honor of outstanding academic promise, demonstrated by placing in the top five percent of over one million participants in the 31st annual National Merit Scholarship Program.

Participants entered the current Merit Program by taking the PSAT/NMSQT in October 1984, when most of them were juniors. Although their qualifying test scores are very high, the 35,000 Commended Students nationwide scored slightly below the level required for semifinalist standing. Only the 15,000 semifinalists, whose names were annouced on Sept. 11, will continue in the competition for some 5,800 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1986.

Back-to-School Night

Thursday, Oct. 3, 7:30 p.m. A raffle, sponsored by the PSO, will conclude the evening's activities. The raffle will benefit the 6th grade field trip transportation fund. Those donating raffle items include: So. Shore Music Circus, Flemings, Hair Imports, Peridot, Aveni Cleaners, Sea 'N Cheese, The Red Balloon, Sharon's Chocolate Factory, Cohasset Hardware, and a friend of the sixth grade. Tickets will be sold for $1 each, or six for $5 at the Back-to-School Night. Drawings will be held in the school cafeteria while refreshments are being served. Winners do not have to be present at the drawing!

Host families

Host families are needed for two new METCO students, a first grade girl and a first grade boy. Call Sue Terry at 383-0789 if interested. Also at Deer Hill School, host families are needed for a fifth grade girl and a fourth grade boy.

PSO meeting

The PSO Fall parents' meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday evening, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m at the CHS study hall. All parents of Cohasset students save that date!

Second day for talent pool

On Tuesday, Sept.16,Mrs. Wondolowski oriented the 14 fifth grade talent pool students.

These students have the goal of being or trying to be "creative producers."

We learned about the Triad Model for Enrichment. We learned that Type I is a one time activity to get us interested in a topic so we can put our interest to some use.

Example: Type I presentation on the styles of calligraphy.

Use: Create a book in or about calligraphy.

Type II is another enrichment service. We have training sessions on how to do something. We're starting to learn ways to improve our thinking. Mrs. Wondolowski used "Wollygoggles." It was fun to try to find the patterns in a sequence of numbers.

Another activity is called an "Interest Assessment." We circled topics we would like to study. This will help Mrs. Wondolowski get to know us better and plan our classes.

Support group meeting

The Cohasset Support Group for parents of Children with Special Needs is offering a morning of information on all aspects of respite care for developmentally delayed children and adults. Phyllis Hickey of the Dept. of Social Service and Karen Irwin of TILL will speak about the availability of respite and the various settings in which it can be provided. The program will be held at Cohasset Second Congregational Church (next to the Town Hall) on Tuesday, Oct. 8, at 9:30 a.m. for more information, call Taffy Nothnagle at 383-0895 or Maureen McHugh at 545-1074.

Chess mates hopeful for a South Shore club

What's the only group in Cohasset that can meet for more than an hour without saying a word?

It's the Cohasset Chess Club. At least that's how Tanna Kasperowicz's husband describes the membership.

A small group of local people, men and women from Cohasset and Marshfield, have been meeting for more than a year. Their only ambition? To gather as many competitors together for a night of chess-playing.

As the Mariner's Chess Quiz Editor has said, "the more people we can get together, the better the competition. I'd like to see this group evolve into a membership of 30 or 40. I can see that happening, no problem." Chris Bernstein of Marshfield, along with Mariner publisher David Cutler, has been playing chess regularly in the Kasperowicz's home since last year.

A chess player since the age of five, Bernstein thrived on the competition, but has trouble locating it. "When I was little, I used to beat all the adults I played, and then I couldn't find anyone else to play against," he said. "There's nothing I'd like more than to start up a South Shore Chess Club in Cohasset. It would be an ideal location, and I think we could attract people from all over the area."

Bernstein said there is a North Shore chess club located in Framingham where residents gather every week or two for tournament play. About 30 or 40 people play in pairs for the entire evening, at one time and in one place.

What a South Shore Chess Club would need, according to Bernstein, is one person committed to setting up a routine tournament schedule and a meeting place. Bernstein envisions cash prizes based on the number of entries in each tournament.

The Marshfield resident has competed in several tournaments, including the New York Open in April, and the World Open in Philadelphia. Although he has yet to be ranked a Master player, Bernstein said steady competition might afford him that opportunity.

"The South Shore Chess Club would give people the chance to play chess on a regular basis and to promote the game. If I had someone to compete against consistently, I might have been a Master by now," he added.

The Chess Quiz attracts many faithful readers, he noted, and many may be interested in playing in the South Shore Chess Club.

Asked why he is so dedicated to the game, Bernstein answered, "I first learned to love the game when I was young because I beat everyone I played against. But now I like it even when I lose, because I can evaluate the game and see where I lost. It's a game where you can look into the future and project what will happen in the next 20 moves. It's a game of logic, with a slight element of luck and chance. It's a great use of the mind."

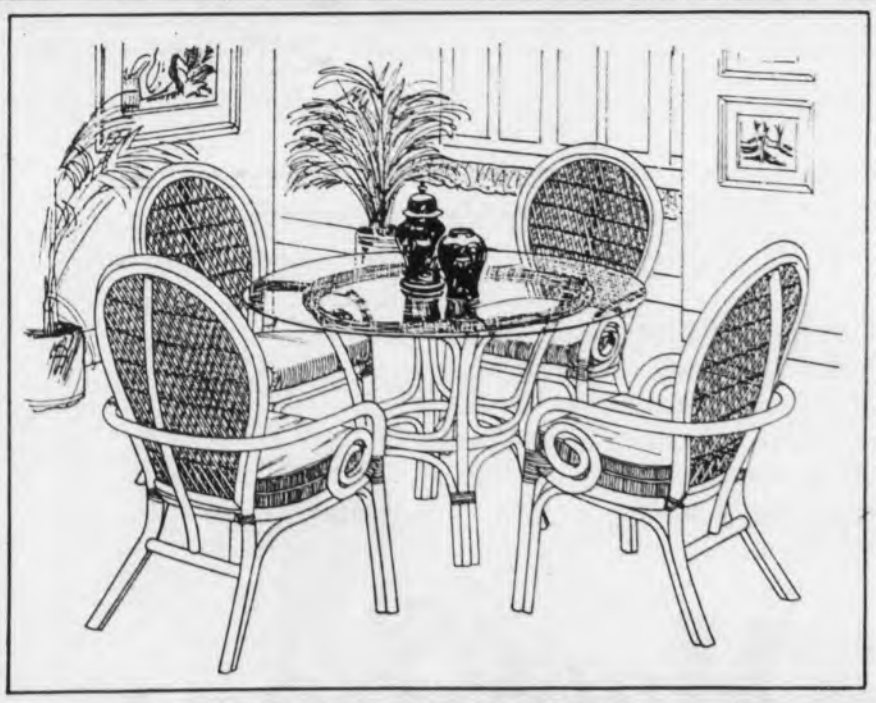
Kasperowicz, whose South Main Street home is the frequent location for the Cohasset chess matches, agrees it is a game that "grows on you." The first year she played, her husband Ray won every match. She finally beat him and "he hasn't played against me since."

As Bernstein explained, learning the game at an early age can be advantageous. Kasperowicz's son, Peter, is about to begin instruction classes at the Community Center. Several second graders have signed up for the course; an age, according to Kasperowicz, when children often express a desire and aptitude for the game.

The idea for a South Shore Chess Club, Kasperowicz said, is to establish a central meeting place and time. Currently, there are about 17 people who have expressed an interest, but Bernstein and Kasperowicz know there are many more probable competitors.

"It's a great game, but it's kind of a funny type of meeting," Kasperowicz explained. "The Cohasset group usually includes about 15 people in the livingroom on my home. The entire night is silent, punctuated by an occasional grunt from someone. We go for hours without a word. I might say 'there's coffee in the kitchen' and that's it for the night. It's a bit peculiar, but we really enjoy the competition."

The advantages of chess playing have been outlined in several books written especially for youngsters, according to Deer Hill Librarian Marge Murphy. Kasperowicz and Bernstein agreed that using the mind in an abstract fashion is challenging and rewarding for most children.



There will be a meeting of the Chess Club, Wednesday, October 9 at 8 p.m. It will be held at the Kasperowicz residence, 172 Main Street.

Anyone interested in attending this organizational/playing meeting, should contact Kasperowicz at 383-9115 or Dee DeSantis at 383-6464.

Tickets ready for Gilman fundraiser

Judy Gilman, recovering from a serious motor vehicle accident June 12 in a Boston therapy center, needs more visitors, her husband said this week.

Judy, Hingham Mariner editor, is making good steady progress at the Greenery of Boston, a rehabilitation and skilled nursing center which specializes in programs for the head injured.

John Gilman, Judy's husband, said Judy has repeatedly asked for more visitors. She is reasoning better, John said, and is more aware of people around her. She has started to walk with a cane although she has lost some mobility in her legs.

Judy is learning how to read again and enjoys letters and cards.

Judy has special occupational and physical therapy twice a day. Visitors are encouraged at the Greenery from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily.

Directions to the Greenery, 99 Chestnut Hill Ave., Brighton, are: take the Southeast Expressway to the Massachusetts Turnpike West. Get off at the first exit, Allston-Cambridge toll booths and head for the Allston-Brighton exit. This exit will lead to Cambridge Street. Go straight for a mile, past St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Head straight through a set of lights and take a left after the second set of lights which will lead to Chestnut Hill Avenue.

The entrance to the parking lot is before the center. Travel time from the Mass. Turnpike to the center is 15 minutes.

In a related matter, a five member Hingham resident fundraising committee reports plans are progressing well for a special fundraiser to benefit the Judy Gilman Medical Fund. Entitled, "We Love Judy," the special night will be Saturday, Oct. 26 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at The Vogue, Nantasket Beach.

Tickets will be $15 per person donation. Musical entertainment will be provided by The Pete Collins Dixieland Band, D.J. Jake Manning and South Shore Drive Band.

The committee is also preparing food plans for the affair.

Tickets can be purchased at the Marshfield and Hingham Mariner offices, the Hingham Community Center and Greg Hall Associates, North Street, or through fundraising committee members, Hilary McCarthy, Larry Stein, Tom Wallace, Nick Kokinos, Don Thompson, Charlene Vandini and Moira McCarthy-Stanford.

The Judy Gilman Medical Fund continues to grow. Donations can be mailed to the Hingham Institution for Savings, 55 Main St., Hingham, Mass. 02043.

Tickets are also available at Poopsie's in Norwell, Osborne's in Duxbury and Nobles Camera Shop in Hingham Square.

Retirement party Oct. 17

There will be a retirement party for Mrs. Shirley Manna of the Joseph Osgood School at Hugo's Restaurant, Oct. 17 at 6 p.m.

In addition to teaching at the Osgood School since 1963, Mrs. Manna has served as president of the Cohasset Teachers' Association.

For further information and reservations, friends and colleagues are invited to contact Shirley Tewksbury at 383-1074 after 6 p.m.

Reservations must be made by Oct. 10.

We have two words for the Printing & Publishing Industry: Thank you.

The presses are always rolling in Plymouth County. Printing and publishing is the largest and fastest growing manufacturing industry in the region, providing more than 3,500 jobs for area residents. There are scores of printing operations in Plymouth County, ranging in size from a major book publisher with 900 employees to small print shops with one or two people.

Governor Michael S. Dukakis has proclaimed Plymouth County Printing & Publishing Week for Sept. 30 through Oct. 5. This commemoration will honor the many firms in the industry that contribute to the region's economic wellbeing.

Diversity is a good description of the industry in Plymouth County today. Local firms produce newspapers, catalogs, flyers and other materials for national advertisers. They also print personal stationery and wedding invitations. However, the common bond for all these companies – both large and small – is quality. The industry relies on modern technology and old-fashioned craftsmanship to handle the printing needs of the most demanding clients.

Halliday Lithograph in Hanover and Plympton was recently honored for its years of service to the regional community. The Plymouth County Development Council presented the Corporate Citizen Award to Halliday for "its continuing commitment to maintain and expand the local economy." The firm is New England's most complete book publisher and the third largest manufacturer in Plymouth County.

The Printing & Publishing Industry is a good neighbor in Plymouth County. These firms pay local taxes, hire area people, support community projects and take pride in the region. They are concerned about Plymouth County because this is where they live and work.

Plymouth County appreciates the contributions made by the many businesses in the thriving Printing & Publishing Industry. They make the county part of the fastest growing region in the state and help raise the standard of living to an important level.

To these companies we can only say two words: thank you.

Sponsored by Plymouth County Development Council in cooperation with MPG Communications, Duxbury Clipper, Mariner Newspapers, The Enterprise, Franklin Publishing Company.

How we weathered the Hurricane of 1985

These cars did not fare our foul weather well at all. A huge tree landed atop the unfortunate vehicles, leaving shattered glass and tree limbs in its path. No one was injured in the mishap.

This is one of the reasons power was knocked out during Friday's storm. This light pole was severed in half by a hearty gust along North Main Street.

While bracing held up the First Parish steeple, workmen wondered how to hold up the bracing. It was all figured out by Saturday afternoon.

Another victim of the storm was this sailboat in the harbor. Boatowners reported little damage, and some returned to the refuge of their boats — and electricity!

Scituate Garden Club adds spark to Cranberry Festival

To join the Scituate Garden Club is to work. There are a variety of talents among the sixty members — artists, writers, speakers, gourmet cooks and, of course, gardeners.

That they are all creative is evident to scores of people who come from all over the state to the Cranberry Festival held every other year.

The post of vice president carries with it the task of chairing the club's only fund-raising event and on a recent sunny September day, Jane O'Sullivan could be seen supervising the outdoor display of crafts and foods, the result of hours of work by members since last May.

"I don't know where all this is taking us," the pleasant young chairman said as crowds flocked to the grounds of "The Farm," the lovely setting provided by the Arthur Crosbies. "Each year Mrs. Crosbie gets calls from clubs from all over the state," Jane noted "and each year we have more and more visitors." (By day's end, the hospitality table which offers a taste of cranberry juice and bread, estimated they had served a thousand.)

By closing time at two, most things would be sold out and money earned would go toward developing a wild flower garden at the Mann House, their present to the town's 350th anniversary.

Five hundred luncheons had been prepared by a committee of 10 — an all-day effort that always finds them running short of the gourmet meal feature. Mary Bailey Moore's Light House Chowder, Beth Spradlin's Quiche Lorraine and Ann Hall's Tortellini Primavera with Mozzarella and Pancetta filled the bill. Dessert was a choice of Linzer Torte, Pecan Pie or Cranberry Tiramisu and coffee or tea. Sandwiches were Turkey Pesto on Focaccia or Prosciutto and Provolone on Italian Bread with Roasted Red Pepper Mayonnaise and Arugula. Salads were Spinach with Mushrooms and Bacon or Mixed Greens with Walnuts and Roquefort Dressing. Entrees were Chicken Breast Stuffed with Spinach and Boursin Cheese or Pasta Primavera with Fresh Vegetables and Cream Sauce. Rolls were Cranberry Nut or Herb Focaccia. Appetizers were Cranberry Chutney Cheese Spread or Spinach and Artichoke Dip with Fresh Vegetables and Tortilla Chips. Beverages were Cranberry Punch or Cranberry Spritzer. Desserts were Cranberry Tiramisu or Cranberry Pecan Pie. Lunch was served on the lawn at tables covered with red and white checked cloths and centered with bouquets of cranberries and fall flowers.

Mary Bailey Moore and Beth Spradlin and their committee of six, had been planning since August for the goodies offered at their table called the "Sea Food Sampler."

Here, one could sample this chowder, a recipe which Mary says can be served hot or cold. If offered as a first course, it will serve six; if a luncheon, two to three will enjoy this

LIGHT HOUSE CHOWDER

3 large potatoes, peeled
3 leeks, washed, cut up, white part only
1/2 lb. finnan haddie
1 pt. light cream
Freshly ground pepper, salt (if desired) and dash of nutmeg
4T butter

Boil potatoes in 3 C. water, along with leeks. Cook until tender, drain and reserve cooking liquid. Puree potatoes and leeks. Add finnan haddie to reserve liquid. Cook until soft. Puree fish. Combine potatoes and leek mixture with fish and cooking liquid. Bring slowly to boil. Add cream and butter, adjust seasonings to taste. Milk may be added if too thick.

Clear blue skies offered a perfect canopy for the antique white cape, sparkling blue pool, gardens of annuals, shade trees and potting shed where Sylvia White and her committee offered dried arrangements. All summer long, armed with scissors and baskets, members scrounged their gardens, fields and woods for materials for these exquisite offerings.

Across the way, the plant table featured Edwina Foley's roses that have won many a blue ribbon and Ella Doherty's plaques and statues were soon sold. Members baked three hundred loaves of cranberry-bread — soon sold and people flocked to the boutique table when the old farm bell sounded at the opening hour of 11 a.m. Pat Michaud and Miriam Chesley co-chaired this table laden with such delights as Marjorie Stout's painted baskets, Dorothy Gurll's pressed flowers, Ellie Hayes' potpourris and Gail Michaud's 16 inch cone-shaped trees made of herbs and dried flowers. Clever ladies, all! Wendy Forman of the American Cable Systems, says of the two-hour filming they did: "It was a photographer's dream." There will be 15 minute segments shown on Scituate Cable TV as follows: Oct. 2, 5 p.m.; Oct. 4 at 6 p.m.; Oct. 7 at 5 p.m.; Oct. 8 at 10 p.m.; Oct. 9 at 5 p.m. On Channel 12, the regional channel, tentative arrangements have been made for Oct. 5 at 6 p.m. Tune in and see if you can see yourself at the "Sea Food Sampler" table munching on one of their

BOG BARS

1 pkg. sugar cookie mix, 15 oz.
1 T. water
1 jar Ocean Spray cranberry-orange sauce
8 oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/4 C. granulated sugar
1 egg
1 T. lemon juice
1/2 tsp. vanilla

Combine cookie mix, shortening pouch and water. Stir until it forms course crumbs. Reserve one cup for topping. Press remaining mixture into 9" square pan, lightly greased. Bake 12 to 15 min. until lightly browned. Do not over-cook. Cool slightly. Spread evenly with cranberry-orange sauce. In small bowl mix together cream cheese and remaining ingredients. Beat until creamy. Pour over cranberry layer. Sprinkle with reserved crumb mixture. Bake 30 min. at 350 degrees. Cool completely before cutting into 15 squares. Refrigerate.

World of Weather . . . Hurricane watch

By Warren Waitkus

By this time, you have been saturated by the radio, television, and newspaper reports of Hurricane Gloria. Most people have had the opportunity to drive through their cities and towns, evaluating the damage for themselves. I am going to give you a different perspective of this vicious, and potentially catastrophic storm.

A great deal of credit should be given to Boston's TV weathermen for their handling of this serious situation. Channel 4, 5, and 7 had continuous storm coverage. Channel 56 broadcast hourly updates. The respective news departments should also be recognized for their commendable performance. The demeanor of the on-screen meteorologist made the difference between alerting the public, and unduly causing panic.

Many people felt that the weathermen should have been able to pinpoint the area and time of landfall of Gloria, as she tracked up the Eastern seaboard. They may feel that with today's technology, utilizing radar, computers, weather satellites, and special weather planes that supply hour-by-hour data into the National Hurricane Center, the meteorologists have sufficient information to know exactly what a hurricane will do.

A hurricane is the greatest storm on earth, and the most capricious in behavior. The local weatherman receives his data from the National Weather Service and must make a judgment and present it to the public. As you watched TV, you heard the weathermen referring to the latest advisory on the progress of the storm. I would like you to read an advisory, and then put yourself in the meteorologist's shoes. What would you say to the viewers.

"Bulletin
Hurricane Gloria Intermediate Advisory
National Weather Service Miami FL
Midnight EDT Fri Sep 27 1985

Hurricane warnings are extended Northward to the mouth of the Merrimack River in Northern Masschusetts. Hurricane warnings are now in effect from Little River Inlet, North Carolina to the Merrimack River. A hurricane watch is in effect North of Plymouth through Eastport Maine.

Gloria is moving on a course slightly East of due North at 20 to 25 MPH. The hurricane is expected to continue on this general course. . . . Perhaps becoming a little more toward the North Northeast and its forward speed increasing to more than 30 MPH later today. This means that the center will pass over or near Cape Hatteras in the next two or three hours. . . . Be over or just off the New Jersey coast by midday. . . and over New England late today.

The effect of Gloria throughout the warning area critically depends upon its precise track. It now seems unlikely that the hurricane will move directly inland over North Carolina. Two remaining possibilities are that the center will skirt along the mid-Atlantic Coast which would bring hurricane conditions along that coast but the strongest winds would remain over the open waters to the right of the center. Also . . . the hurricane would weaken a little and Long Island and New England would experience less severe conditions. Another strong possibility is that the hurricane will move on a more North Northeast course skirting the Carolina coast and then moving over the water maintaining its strength and increasing its forward speed increasing the threat to the Long Island and New England areas. Forecasting skills are not sufficient to predict which of these possibilities will occur. Therefore . . . the course of least regret is for residents of the warned area to prepare for the worst condition.

Tides of 8 to 12 feet above normal will occur along the coast with tides up the bays reaching 6 to 10 feet above normal with some isolated higher values. Details on these tides and actions to be taken are included in local statements being issued by National Weather Service local government officials. Evacuation from offshore islands should be complete along Eastern North Carolina and be rushed to completion along the mid-Atlantic states.

At midnight EDT . . . 0400Z . . . the center of Gloria was located near latitude 34.5 North . . . longitude 75.8 North or about 50 miles South of Cape Hatteras North Carolina.

Maximum winds remain near 130 MPH and the central pressure is 941 millibars . . . 27.79 inches.

Gale force winds extend out 200 miles North and 150 miles South of the center.

Rain totals of 5 to 10 inches will occur over portions of the East Coast from North Carolina Northward to New England.

. . . Dangerous Gloria threatens Northeast U.S. Coast . . .

Hurricane warnings are in effect from Cape Lookout North Carolina to the Merrimack River Massachusetts. A hurricane watch is in effect North of the Merrimack River through Eastport Maine. Discontinue hurricane warnings South of Cape Lookout.

At 8 A.M. EDT . . . 1200Z . . . The center of Gloria was near latitude 38.3 North . . . Longitude 74.7 West. This position is 80 miles South of Atlantic City.

Gloria is now moving Northward about 30 MPH and is expected to further increase forward speed as it moves near the New Jersey coast. This track will take the eye of Gloria to the Long Island area by noon. A slight change in track could cause the hurricane to move ashore at any time.

Maximum sustained winds remain near 130 MPH with gales extending outward 200 miles North and 150 miles South of the center.

Gloria is a dangerous hurricane and has the potential to produce damaging winds and storm surge flooding almost anywhere from the Delmarva Peninsula Northward through Massachusetts . . . depending on the exact track of the hurricane. Coastal residents in the warning area should be prepared for the worst conditions.

Tides of 8 to 12 feet above normal are expected along the coast with Bay flooding of 6 to 10 feet above normal and with isolated higher values. Details on tides and actions to be taken are included in local statements being issued by National Weather Service and local government officials.

Rain totals of 5 to 10 inches are expected over portions of the warning area.

Repeating the 8 AM EDT position . . . 38.3N . . . 74.7W."

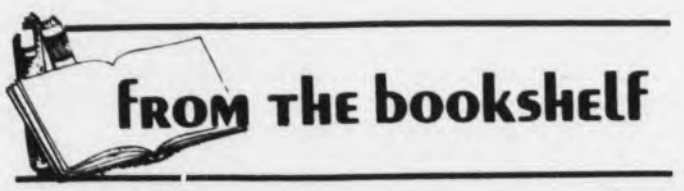
In my opinion, the broadcast media did a great job.

'Who stole Stonehenge', a book with a foreign setting

By Peggy Beals

"Too bad you didn't read it before your trip." That's the usual comment about books with a foreign setting, be it just guide books, or other works about travel abroad.

To me, it smacks of school, studying things we don't know about just in case someday they prove useful, and may I say that those painful hours I did forced labor on a drawn-work pillow case were a total waste. It's like hanging clothes on a line that isn't there. I like to read about places I've been. My memory can flesh them out, recall those ravens, that tomb, that sign, picture those valleys and cathedrals.



If you were among the 4 million Americans who trooped abroad through England, Scotland, Wales or parts thereof last summer, the following may hold particular interest. Each, however, has merit of its own, in case your only reservations were for a comfortable chair in the living room.

"Cranford" by Mrs. Gaskell is an 1833 novel, similar to the gentle, beloved English village books by "Miss Read". Both chronicle the doings of ordinary people in little English villages, giving them significance as Garrison Keillor does for Lake Woebegone.

Jane Austen's books do the same, and Barbara Pym's. If you saw Austen's tomb in Winchester Cathedral, do seek out Rudyard Kipling's delightful poem about her.

Who Stole Stonehenge, by Cutter, a mystery story, does a neat reverse on the theories of how the rocks got there. Cecilia Holland's Pillars of the Sky, a new book, uses the famous stones as settings for a more profound tale.

English sight-seeing is hung on its royals. Jean Plaidy brings them to vivid life in her many novels, a skillful but easy blend of research and light romance novel.

Nora Lofts does much the same for ordinary people. In her "house" series, The House at Old Vine, The Townhouse, The House at Sunset, she takes one house through centuries of English history. She does this in several others.

The Arthurian legends are recounted in Morte D'Arthur, a 1469 work drawing on many sources with the sole purpose of telling a good tale. Alfred, Lord Tennyson tackles the story in "Idylls of the Kings", which never grabbed Hollywood and Broadway, but T.H. White's The Once and Future King did, inspiring "Camelot", and if memory serves, some Disney productions.

One of my favorites, Mary Luke's The Nonsuch Lure, offers a memorable tale of a great manor house, haunted since the dissolution, with a smidgin of gentle romance.

Blenheim Palace, birthplace of Winston Churchill, and near the little village of Woodstock where his amazingly simple burial place is, is a mecca for many. It's a thorough stately pile. Of the many Churchill books, Jennie, by Ralph Martin will tell you more about W.S.'s mother than even she knew. I couldn't hack the whole two vols., but "skimmed" enough to get the picture, which is fascinating.

Richard Llellwyn's How Green was my Valley is the classic Wales novel. See also Jan Morris' The Matter of Wales, a stout loving look at a poor, plucky, lively people. Kilvert's Diary is a classic, too, the daily notes of a parish priest in Wales.

Above the Border, Guy McCrone's Red Plus series will revive memories of Edinburg, and Lillian Beckwith's delightful books are hilarious accounts of life on the islands off the Northern coast.

The Time-Life book on the Tower of London is a superb account of that unique institution.

If you know of other books along these lines to recommend, please share, via a postal to the "Mariner."

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

We will have to reinvent sport

By David A. Mittell, Jr.

"Like every other instrument that man has invented, sport can be used either for good or for evil purposes. Used well, it can teach endurance and courage, a sense of fair play and a respect for rules, coordinated effort and the subordination of personal interests to those of the group. Used badly, it can encourage personal vanity and group vanity, greedy desire for victory and hatred for rivals, an intolerant espirit de corps and contempt for people who are beyond a certain arbitrarily selected pale."
Aldous Huxley, "Ends and Means"

Like the man who inherited a harem, the critic of sport knows what to do but he is not sure where to begin. To begin with baseball, the American Pastime, up to its nasal orifice in cocaine? Or with the B.A.A. Marathon, the last great sporting event where amateur and professional competed as one, now a prize event like all the rest? Or with mites on skates who are often coached by unmerciful midgets and are watched by parents sometimes screaming obscenities across hockey rinks at referees and other mitey parents?

I will chose the Marathon as a metaphor of sport as it ought to be and sadly is. To put it simply, I am very sorry that the Boston Athletic Association Marathon (despite Ray Flynn it is still not the "Boston Marathon") is to become a prize event in 1986. It is said Boston needed to do this to compete with prize cattle contests in such cities as New York, Montreal, and Tokyo. So now our John Hancock Marathon will go at it hype and pitch with the likes of First Jersey Securities and Eveready Rayovac for the dollar bill and oh yes a laurel wreath.

I don't mean to be cynical. I've no objection to corporations using popular sports to purchase good will in a shallow but harmless way. I admit I've never understood why the public gives more credence to the pitch of a jock reading a cue card than it does to the kiss of a prostitute, but it does and that's no matter. My concern is sport not the marketing business, a business which in a free society has the same right to exploit the public's infatuation with sports as I to exploit your indulgence writing in this space.

The problem is that with the greatly increased popularity of professional sports since television, and with the imitation of professional sports by amateur sports, there is today very little sport left in sports. What I mean by "sport" can be boiled down to two things: spiritual development and fun. Sport in its ideal form teaches most of the civilized values we hold dear . . . fair play, trying our best, the thing we have come to call "good sportsmanship, honesty, self sacrifice, respect for an opponent, physical improvement, and many others.

The "fun" side of sport shouldn't be overlooked but often is. Between 1975 and 1985 I coached a total of 30 seasons of sports at the junior high and high school level. At some point during each season I would ask my charges why we play sports. The answers—"to get into college" . . . "to attract a professional scout" . . . "because the school/my parents make me"—were always astounding. But I would always have to tell them that sport is, or is supposed to be, for fun. Trouble is that when eight year-olds are subjected to try-outs, cuts, coaches who yell at them for non-proficiency in the sport allegedly being coached, and parents many of whom are incapable of separating their own needs from their children's needs, sports tend not to be much fun.

What until next year was glorious about the B.A.A. Marathon was that it was a great event in which the finest professionals competed with the rankest amateurs for sport, for fun, and with no greater official inducement than the ancient symbol of civilized sport, the laurel wreath. Sure, the event attracted hucksters and shysters; and some winners surely became wealthy from endorsements while others inexplicably became "sore winners." And sure, the people who ran the Marathon had their foibles, all of which were reported to you in minute detail by those who go by the alias "sports journalists."

But as an institution, as long as the Marathon remained an amateur event, it remained apart from contemporary trends in sports. Almost alone it "carried the flame" of what is honorable in sport forward toward the day when sport in general recovers some sense of proportion about itself.

Prize money will not end that altogether. The 8,000 personal triumphs of the finishers of the "John Hancock Marathon" will continue to be personal triumphs. But as an institution the Marathon is no longer dedicated simply to spiritual improvement and fun. It is no longer apart. It will now dance to the tune played by its sponsors and its overpayed performers . . . just like the rest of the "sports" on your t.v. dial. The B.A.A. Marathon is no longer an anomaly; it has, as so many have been urging it to do for years, "joined the twentieth century."

The pity, however, is that come the 21st century, those of us who believe passionately in the ideal of sport are going to have to reinvent sport as we mean it.

RONALD H. RICE
CERTIFIED THERAPEUTIC HYPNOTIST

Will begin his 8th year of professional practice on October 1, 1985 and in appreciation will offer, with this notice, a one time office visit for "Smoke Cessation" at a charge of $25.00 (a regular $45.00 value) only for this month of October, 1985. Come with a friend and they will be charged $20.00. Please remember, nicotine is a drug! Smokers are drug abusers! Smokers fall into the same category as alcoholics and other types of drug abusers! Smoking is also a symptom! What is causing you to smoke? This will have to be dealt with as well. Recognize that you are a drug abuser and with the proper attitude will have a better chance of success. Like a reformed alcoholic you will go one day at a time. As the reformed alcoholic reaches out for that first drink and then is off and running again, so will you! If you doubt me or these hard core facts, call your doctor and ask him if the above is true. Or, call some other hypnotist and be promised a miracle. I do not promise miracles only scientific facts based upon FDA and AMA research. The choice is yours.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

'Aid concerts are only a beginning'

By Darrell Berger

If you are a fan of rock or country music, you surely have rejoiced at the rare opportunity for enjoyment provided by the recent Live Aid and Farm Aid Concerts. Yet the pleasure was tempered with appeals to desperate situations.

Live Aid, organized by a member of a rock band delightfully called The Boomtown Rats, was intended to help starving Africans.

Bob Dylan, who appeared at the concert, suggested the plight of American farmers was also dire. Country crooner Willie Nelson took the hint, and the University of Illinois played host to Farm Aid. Fittingly, Bob Dylan, who bridged the gap between rock and country in the late 1960's, played both gigs.

But the concerts had more in common than Bob Dylan. The immediate thought was how much these two groups needed each other. Obviously one great solution to starving Africans is the food produced on American farms. The connection isn't being made.

What stands between wheat fields and famine? From a geographical standpoint, what keeps them apart is the Atlantic Ocean, and most importantly, New York City and Washington on one side, and Europe on the other.

The barriers are more than geographic. They are also economic and ideological. Older readers will remember the sad scenes of the Depression when farmers were plowing crops under and destroying livestock because they couldn't get a decent price, while at the same time their urban neighbors suffered from empty cupboards.

Economics has never worked merely through the law of supply and demand. If it did, neither the Depression nor the current rounds of famine and bankruptcy would occur. What stands in the way is logistics, that is, how to get the food to the people.

The people administering the money given Live Aid are discovering this now. A representative of Oxfam, a group with long experience feeding the poor, said, "They are a bit naive, but they learn fast."

One thing they are learning is that giving food is only one part of the problem. Protecting airable native land so people can feed themselves is also necessary.

Meanwhile, the money raised from Farm Aid, considerable as it is, will not cover even one day's interest on the amount owed by America's farmers.

Perhaps people are learning that, as important as charity is, it cannot do all the work alone. The poor African and the economically distressed farmer require fundamental changes in the way nations do business.

Washington and New York are too remote from both Ethiopia and Nebraska to respond sufficiently to the calls for help. The concerts will ultimately prove more valuable by awakening voters to the situation than through any amount of money that is raised.

We need to understand that our national security requires more than unimaginably costly weapons systems. We need to remember that one of the main causes of past wars have been famine and economic despair.

Communist countries, on the other hand, need to admit they need help from western nations, and control the petty tyrants and bureaucracies that will starve their own people to remain in power.

There is much talk that America is now a service economy and an information economy. This is supposed to excuse the rapid decline in our agricultural and industrial capacity.

This obscures the reality that people have to be fed and clothed, perhaps because the people making policy never had to worry about food and clothing, nor even get close to people who do.

And if America is supposed to survive as a service and information economy, heaven help us. Good service and useful information remain the rarest of commodities.

All dollars or rubles or yen are not created equally, even if they look the same on a balance sheet. The money world markets make, and the money that continues to fund our local affluence, cannot come only from weapons, micro-chips and tourism. Somebody has to figure out how to make feeding starving people politically popular and a profitable enterprise.

If it doesn't happen, by the time we need a Suburban Aid concert, there won't be anybody left to play the music.

(Darrell Berger is minister of the First Parish Unitarian Church in Scituate.)

A look at last weeks sports at Cohasset High

By Lisa Shumaker

Cross Country

Last Monday, Cohasset lost to both Whitman/Hanson and East Bridgewater in a tri-meet. However, Coach Paul Narkiewicz was very happy with the way his team ran, especially with the terrific attitude Cohasset has taken.

Narkiewicz believed that this feeling of pride and comradeship among the runners can only make the season more enjoyable and help build a successful team for the future.

Narkiewicz was pleasantly surprised with the girls' first place finisher from Cohasset, Maureen Long. Though only a seventh grader, Maureen has shown remarkable improvement over the past couple of weeks and if she sticks with running, she should be a star to watch for in the years ahead. Cohasset's second place finisher was Stephanie Endris followed by Carine Mortiaux.

For the boys, co-captain Brian Leary finished first and 15th overall. Ned Thomson came in second from Cohasset, and Tommy Long picked up a third place. Narkiewicz also pointed out that co-captain Mike Greiner played a tremendous role in lifting the team up for the meet.

The cross-country team consists of many seventh graders. They include: Maureen Long, Kay Long, Rachel Snow, Barbara Lagrotteria, Jennifer Plante, Jonathan Mitchell, Doug Moe, Andrew Ross and John Manning.

Girls' Field Hockey

The girls jumped off to a good start last week defeating Abington 2-0. The Skippers really had a tough time getting the offense going but once it got started, it was unstoppable. The defense was quite busy playing exceptionally well and discouraging all of Abington's scoring attempts.

Cindy Spooner hooked a shot in from the left wing. Both Kara McDonald and Maria Cahill picked up the assists on this goal. Off a pass from Cindy Spooner, Lee Sullivan backhanded one in to insure Cohasset a victory.

Heather St. Onge had a fantastic game and showed outstanding intensity and hustle when she played. Fullbacks Jill Shockman and Sara Dickesman also turned in good efforts for the Skippers. Goalie Lisa Shumaker made a total of 20 saves and earned the 20th shutout of her varsity career. (Yeah)!

Thursday, the girls battled it out with East Bridgewater and ended up tying 0-0. Cohasset dominated most of the game, unfortunately the ball would just not go into the net.

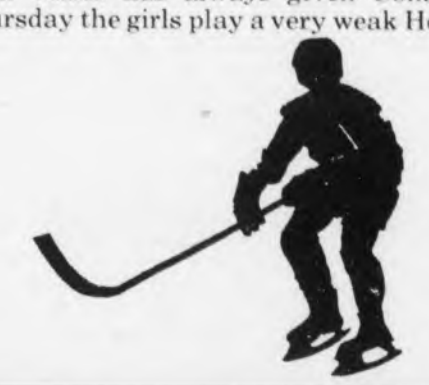
Cahill played very well on both ends of the field. Maureen Farren did a good job keeping the pressure on the East Bridgewater goalie. Anne O'Leary also turned in a valiant effort for the Skippers.

This week, the girls face Hull on Wednesday. Friday, Cohasset travels to Sandwich. This game is the biggest of Cohasset's season because they are tied with Sandwich for first place in the South Shore League.

The JV field hockey team has been doing very well as their overall record now stands at three and one. Michelle Cassalero, Sarah Hamilton, Sara Bishop, and Jan Peters have all had huge parts in the team's success.

Girls' Varsity Soccer

The girls had their first victory Wednesday as they clobbered Norwell 7-3. Coach Kennan Startzell felt Cohasset "rose to the occasion and capitalized on some of Norwell's mistakes." Startzell felt the key to the victory was in the fact that Cohasset played its own kind of game.



Caitlin Staunton had her first hat trick of her varsity career, and expertly controlled the ball upfront. Karin Anglin scored twice for Cohasset. Kerri Kirkendall and Melissa Shea both picked up one goal apiece.

On defense, Susan Riley provided the stability for the team.

Friday, the Skippers were defeated by a tough Rockland team, 4-1. Jennifer Coley in her first varsity game, scored Cohasset's lone goal in the contest.

Startzell was especially impressed with the hustle and playing of Maureen O'Leary. Susan Riley, Lyn Pompeo, and Erin Chase also turned in good efforts for the Skippers.

Tuesday, the girls take on Whitman/Hanson, a team which has always given Cohasset trouble. Thursday the girls play a very weak Holbrook team.

Edison president defends emergency plan

By Jane Lane

Gloria may well be remembered not for its indiscriminate and complete destruction of property, but as the storm that brought Eastern Edison to its knees.

For five, six days or more, customers throughout the multi-town region were forced into the darkness. As lights and power continued to fail throughout the week, customers became frustrated and angry.

Tales of residents waving down electric company work crews, pleading with out-of-state workmen to restore their electrical power, were commonplace. Crewmen working an average 16 hours a day were victims of the storm which had long since fled our shores.

It was, in the words of Allan Hamer, president of Eastern Edison Co., "probably the worst storm to hit our area in 30 years."

And one of the major reasons the cleanup in Gloria's path was so tedious, according to Hamer, is that this hurricane brushed every community within Eastern Edison's jurisdiction.

No one was spared. Adding to nature's destruction was the call from 11 communities, including Cohasset and Scituate, for Edison to kill all electrical power throughout the town. That, according to the Norwell resident, made the cleanup and restoration of power to homeowners much more complex and time-consuming.

"The cost of the storm will be passed on (to Eastern Edison customers). But it would have to be approved by the Department of Public Utilities and it would be amortized over a period of time. It may not necessarily be an increase in your bill because other factors such as a fuel cost decrease, could compensate for the cost of the storm."

Allan Hamer, president Eastern Edison

In an interview this week with the Mariner, Hamer presented his thoughts and explanations on the hurricane of 1985 and the hazards that impeded our return to life before Gloria.

According to Eastern Edison estimates, the hurricane which hit last Friday afternoon, will cost that company between $3 and $5 million. From a total of 110,000 customers, by the evening of Sept. 27, there were 101,000 customers without power. A survey made of the region indicated at least 200 electrical poles had been severed or knocked to the ground from the storm's force.

As Hamer explained, Gloria was a storm to be continually observed and reckoned with. And for several days, Eastern Edision, as well as all other public utility companies, eyed her projected path. Usually, he noted, electric companies in this state and others, share their crews. Trucks and men are dispatched to the area most in need of assistance.

"But in this case," he said, "we did not know Gloria's path. It was an erratic storm. No one was willing to give up their crews. Fortunately, we were able to get ten crews from Mass. Electric here on Friday morning. When we saw the havoc the storm

Feeling the fiscal punch of Gloria

The storm is over, but the effects of Hurricane Gloria have yet to subside.

While town crews continue to haul dead trees and broken tree limbs to the landfill, other departments are assessing the financial expenses incurred by last week's storm.

The highway department's five employees and Supervisor Harold Litchfield have offered their services for the past week and a half to the town's Tree and Park Dept.

According to Litchfield, his department worked in conjunction with the Tree and Park Dept. pushing limbs and fallen debris from the streets. The town's four-wheel drive front end loader was used in this capacity.

Beginning Friday morning, the five men began preparing for the storm along with Tree and Park Supervisor Peter Laugelle. The five Highway Dept. trucks were utilized through the week in to the front end loader.

"In my experience, this is really the first storm in which the town has been without power this long," Litchfield said. "The town was really a mess with all the wires down. Peter said it will be another week before all the streets are cleared."

According to the Tree and Park Supervisor, the cost of overtime salaries incurred during the storm is $7000 and climbing. "There'll be a lot more costs relating to the storm," he explained. "We will have to rent a bucket truck to help pull those broken limbs from the trees. This will take about a month to do, and one of those trucks cost about $350 a day. It's a dangerous situation with those limbs - they should be taken down before they fall. We need the extra bucket truck so we make every street safe within the month. The trouble is now we can't even find an available truck."

Laugelle said his department, along with the Highway Dept. employees, have been working an average of three hours overtime per day since Gloria struck. They begin work each day at 7 a.m. and finish at 6 p.m.

Thus far, Laugelle said, about two-thirds of the town's streets have been cleared of all debris left on the roads. He applauded the contributions of the Highway supervisor and his employees. "They have been great," he said this week. "Harold and I always cooperate with each other. In the winter I help with the plowing, and during emergencies like this, he helps me out."

A total of 14 town employees have been working under the Tree and Park supervisor during the clean-up efforts. All overtime expenditures are expected to conclude this week, Laugelle said.

The streets that have been cleared of all roadway debris include all of North Main Street and its adjoining streets, South Main and Sohier Streets and all adjoining roads, Forest Avenue, Linden

Status of contract negotiations

Police
Town offers 5 %

Representatives of the Cohasset Police Association were scheduled to meet Tuesday night with the Personnel Board.

In another effort to resolve their contract dispute, the police union agreed to meet with the town's negotiating team this week. The issue which has blocked agreement of a contract is "money," according to Association President David Pomerico.

"We are looking for something comparable to what the police departments in Norwell and Hull are going to receive. Their base pay will now be between $23,000 and $24,000. We'd like to be comparable - to be able to put food on our family's table."

Atty. Philip Boyle who represents the town in the contract negotiations, advised the union that as of October 21, the town intends to implement the terms of its July, 1985 proposal to the police. Saying the town has negotiated for the past year in good faith, Boyle reiterated the town's contract offer of a five percent salary increase.

It was standing room only at Monday's school committee meeting. More than 50 teachers crowded into the high school room, listening as the union president expressed the frustrations of the teachers during the year-long contract negotiations.

In a statement read to the committee, Cohasset Teachers Association President George Fortin echoed the feelings of the union members.

"We, the teachers of Cohasset are here this evening to demonstrate our frustration at the lack of an equitable contract settlement with the teachers.

"We believe that while you the school committee claim to be committed to having the best school system on the South Shore, your reluctance to settle the current negotiations suggests otherwise.

"We insist that you recognize the urgency of this current situation and demonstrate that, by helping us bring these negotiations to a rapid conclusion."

School Committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow stated he "wanted equal time," and was "willing to try and respond to any questions that the group might have."

Cohasset's week . . .

Art center approval

The Zoning Board of Appeals last week granted two special permits to the South Shore Art Center to relocate the facility further down the block on Ripley Road.

The art center purchased Tantillo's Auto Body shop last June, for use as its new headquarters. The only permit needed now is approval by the state Department of Water Pollution Control (DWPC). The state agency denied the center's application to connect to the sewer system at that site. The decision, which conflicted with the Cohasset Sewer Commission's previous approval, is being appealed by the center.

The appeals board granted approval to make $325,000 worth of renovations to the auto body shop building. A special permit was necessary because the building is located within the floodplain.

The board also granted a second special permit to enlarge and make alterations to the non-conforming building.

The center's attorney, Roberta Sawyer, is currently filing a comprehensive sewer permit application with the DWPC. The state agency must now advertise a proposed decision, and accept public comment.

In the meantime, Tantillo's will remain in the Ripley Street shop until the end of the year.

Fire chief search

The Fire Chief Search Committee will meet again Tuesday, Oct. 15 to discuss the results of this weekend's candidate interviews and examinations.

Chairman Stephen Bobo said the committee will have a prioritized list of five candidates to present to selectmen by Oct. 21. The candidates will be ranked according to their examination results, their interview with the committee members and their initial application questionnaire.

Five candidates participated in Friday's examination and Saturday's interviews. A sixth candidate from Kalamazoo, Mich. withdrew because of the problems he envisioned moving to this area, Bobo said.

The final candidates include: Captain and Acting Chief Daniel Brock of the Southboro Fire Dept., Captain David Firmin of the Worcester Fire Dept., Chief Ed Hartin of the Mashpee Fire Dept., Captain James Purcell of the Hanover Fire Dept., and Capt. Mark Trask of the Cohasset Fire Dept.

Whoever is chosen will replace current Fire Chief Martin Dooley after his contract expires Dec. 31.

Landfill praises

At their meeting Monday night, Board of Health members praised the employees of the Cedar Street landfill. The landfill was opened extra hours last Monday and Wednesday, and the employees worked hard during those overtime hours, they said.

Health board requests

The Board of Health will submit two articles in the December special Town Meeting warrant.

The first will request between $30,000 and $40,000 to renovate the interior of the Bates Building. According to plans prepared by architect and Building Inspector Edward Poskus, the interior health board offices would be enlarged with a conference room designed alongside the offices. A foyer would be built onto the front of the Elm Street building, and a separate room has been designed to accomodate persons waiting to talk with the health agent or board members.

The second article will request about $4000 in basic interior renovations. That article will be used as a back-up in case the other article fails to win Town Meeting approval. The $4000 appropriation would be used to paint and complete minor renovations to the interior of the building.

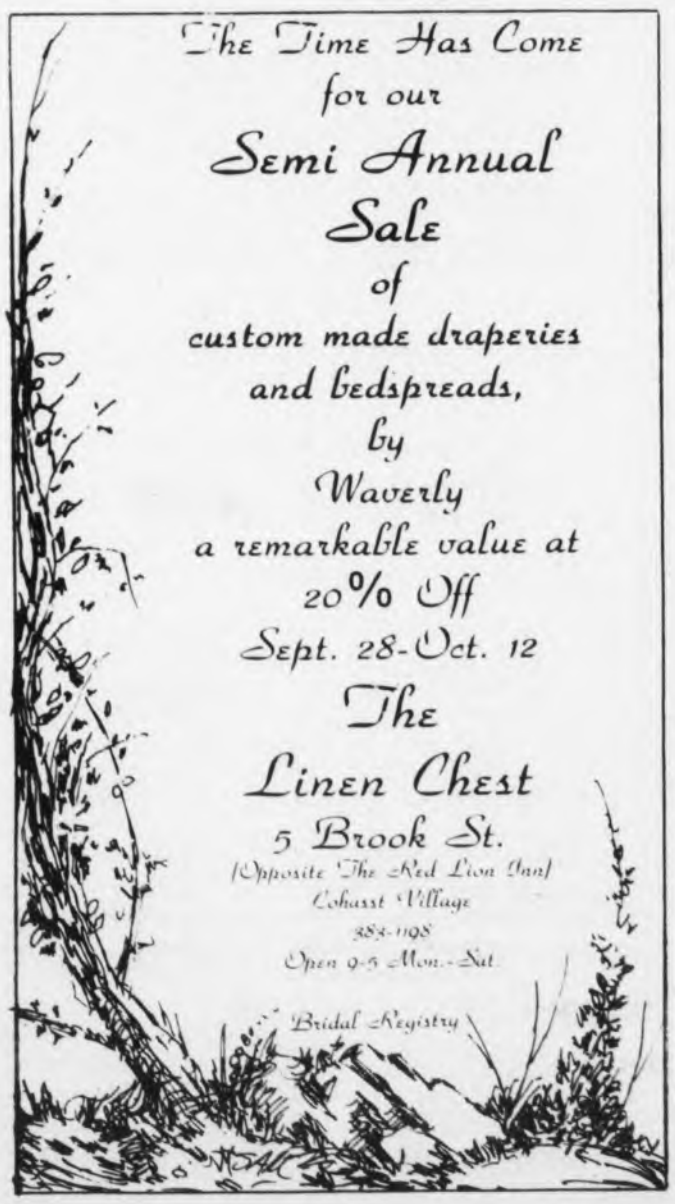
Town Meeting last June defeated a similar article presented by the health board. Some residents objected to completing extensive repairs at the Bates building since there are plans to house all town departments together if an addition is constructed at Town Hall. The health board was instructed to return with specific plans for the renovations. Building Inspector Poskus was assigned to that task and recently completed the plans.

Correction

There are a couple of clarifications we'd like to make regarding last week's article, "No Ice in Hull". The article related how families in Cohasset survived Hurricane Gloria.

The owners of Central Market want to emphasize they were not closed down by the Board of Health at any time during the storm. They were told not to sell their perishable items. But the Main Street store was never ordered shut by the health agent, as was stated in the article.

Secondly, School Supt. Eugene Crowell took exception to the comment that Cohasset residents are not sufficiently warned when the decision is made to order the schools closed. Supt. Crowell said he made the decision Sunday evening to close the schools Monday, Sept. 30. The announcement was made that Sunday night on the local radio and television news at 11 p.m.



The previous closing, Friday, Sept. 27, was made the night before by the school administrator. Plans were made Thursday evening to close school Friday, while preparations began to set up the evacuation center at the high school.

Throughout the storm and after it, Supt. Crowell said he kept in constant contact with neighboring superintendents and Cohasset town department supervisors. Their advise and updates assisted him in deciding when to close the schools, he said.

Selectmen explain their actions during storm

The following is a recap of the activities of the Town of Cohasset that pertain to Hurricane Gloria.

On Thursday, Sept. 26, a meeting was held in the Selectmen's Office of various department heads that would have work to do in connection with the storm. This included the Fire and Police Chiefs, Director of Civil Defense, Highway Surveyor, Tree and Park Superintendent, Water Superintendent, Wire Inspector, Harbormaster and Executive Secretary. Additionallly, the Chief of Police and the Superintendent of Schools had met previous to this meeting, the results of which were reported by the Chief. When the meeting was over, all in attendance knew what other departments would be doing and what they were capable of doing in the event the storm was as severe as anticipated.

On Friday, the day of the storm, the high school was opened at 9:00 a.m. to provide shelter for anyone requiring it. This was announced on the radio. During the day, eight persons registered there and 10 to 15 came in and out at various times. The purpose of registering was so that persons could be located by checking the registration list. Buses with drivers were ready in case anyone needed to be evacuated from their homes. The cafeteria was readied and by noon the staff was prepared to feed more than 200 people. A big screen TV was set up for people to be able to watch weather and advisory reports. A 200-bed sleeping area in the gymnasium was prepared and custodial staff was on duty through the night. The area was cleaned up and closed on Saturday.

During the storm, the Water Department crew was on stand-by. Generators were watched and tested in case they were needed. The standpipe was monitored so that it could be kept full. Calls were answered by staff from people worried about losing water.

The Civil Defense Director began directing storm activities from the Fire Department Office on Friday morning. The Board of Selectmen declared at 9:15 a.m. that a state of emergency existed in town due to the coming storm. This declaration was necessary to obtain help from the state and so that all emergency procedures could be put into effect.

Fire apparatus was dispersed throughout town so that no area would be shut off from protection due to impassable roads. There was a full staff on each piece of apparatus and a complete re-call of firefighters was made. Between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Sunday, 42 storm related calls were answered. The Fire Department assisted other town departments whenever possible.

In the course of the storm, because of the severe damage to trees and power lines, it was decided by the Director of Civil Defense, after consulting with all agencies and departments concerned, that for public safety reasons all electrical power should be shut off in the town, and remain off until it could be safely restored. Eastern Edison was directed by the Director of Civil Defense to shut off the power at approximately 3:38 p.m. This was done because many fallen trees and limbs had entangled with live wires and there was the danger of members of the public and work crews coming into contact with them. In total, ten towns in Eastern Edison's area of service were in this situation.

The Highway Department and the Tree and Park Department both worked long and hard clearing fallen trees and limbs on the roads and public properties. Preparations were made for anticipated flooding from heavy rains, which fortunately, never arrived.

The Waste Disposal Area was opened on Monday and Wednesday when it is normally closed.

The Wire Inspector has worked to inspect service re-connections due to downed wires and authorized resumption of electrical service for in excess of 100 homes and businesses.

The Police Department began emergency preparations on the day before the storm also. Officers were doubled up on patrols and patrols were increased. Emergency calls were answered as they came in. Traffic problems were minimal due to drivers keeping cars at home. The cooperation of the public was greatly appreciated and helped clean-up efforts. Traffic lights were out and extra caution was necessary.

At Town Hall, departmental efforts were coordinated through the Selectmen's Office. The Town Hall was closed just after 10 a.m. Friday so that personnel would be off the road and safely home before the storm arrrived, which was in keeping with the Governor's recommendations. After transferring all memory banks to tape, the town's computer system was shut down to prevent loss of files stored in memory and prevent an electrical damage from power surges. The phone system at Town Hall was out of service until Tuesday noon when electricity was restored.

The Board of Selectmen was in contact with Eastern Edison Company a number of times during this crisis and was assured everything that could be done was being done. Additional crews had been brought in to assist, and double shifts were being worked. The extent of the damage caused the delays we experienced. By Friday, Eastern Edison expected to have power restored to all customers.

We have no reason to doubt that Eastern Edison crews worked long and hard to restore Cohasset power. However, the end result of having power out in large parts of town for up to a week is simply unacceptable. In addition, there was too little information available during the crisis about the Drivem Deep Run, the Hillside project, including area streets such as Norfolk Road and Ash Street, and the Veteran's project including Pond Street. Brewster Road and its adjoining streets have also been cleared by the town, he added.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey estimated his storm-related overtime costs at $794. That was the only expense caused by the hurricane that blew into Cohasset last Friday.

In anticipation of the storm, Chief Kealey met with other town officials in the office of Executive Secretary Don Andrew. During that meeting, procedures to follow during the storm were outlined for the department supervisors.

All town departments coordinated their efforts with the police and fire departments assisting Tree and Park and Highway Department personnel in the aftermath of the storm.

The police department deployed 11 officers on Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. that night. Some men on the midnight shift were sent home so they would be able to return early the following morning, Chief Kealey said.

The Civil Defense Director was in charge of the town during the state of emergency declared Friday morning. Arthur Lehr operated out of the fire department and used their phones. "We learned in the 1978 blizzard that it is best not to tie up the police department phones," the chief said. "All the time we were in direct contact with the fire department. It all worked out very well. There was no particular procedure to follow. We just doubled up in the cruisers during the storm."

Chief Kealey credited School Supt. Eugene Crowell with setting up the high school evacuation center. "Mr. Crowell did everything to get the school in order," the chief stated. "He got the school buses ready in case of an evacuation, and the food was ready in the cafeteria. He did a fine job."

Health Agent Joseph Godzik said the cost of manning the landfill a few extra hours last week "will be minimal. We don't really know the costs at this point."

The Cedar Street landfill was opened a few extra hours Monday and Wednesday last week. The overtime involved will be for one landfill employee.

There will be additional overtime expenditures for the fire department, Dr. Godzik said, when the town burns the storm's debris at the landfill.

Per orders of Fire Chief Martin Dooley, one engine and and a firefighter must observe the burning at the landfill. Because one of the department's engines is out for repairs, the chief has asked that the burning be delayed another week or two until it is returned to the station.

"The chief doesn't want to risk having the department without a truck while we burn the debris at the dump," Dr. Godzik explained. "He wouldn't have a full compliment of equipment to respond to another situation in town or a call for mutual aid."

The health agent said there will be "an awful lot of burning" at the landfill when they are given permission to dispose of the debris.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has issued a statement allowing Cohasset to burn the storm's debris at the community landfills under certain conditions.

Fire Chief Dooley did not reply to the Mariner's attempts to contact him.

Police union to discuss contract in joint meeting

tive from July 1, 1984 to June 30, 1985, must be approved by the special Town Meeting in December. Atty. Boyle said the Board of Selectmen will urge its passage.

Pomarico described current contract negotiations as "precarious" and noted the Joint Labor Management Commission (JMLC) has requested meetings between selectmen and the union later this month. The first meeting is scheduled for Oct. 24, according to the union president. No attorneys will be present at this meeting, he said, although selectmen will be legally required to attend.

The police association has been without a contract for the past 18 months. An 11-year veteran of the force, Pomarico said that is the longest the department has been without a settlement.

"It's affecting the morale of the department," he said this week. "It's not just the contract business, but the department is not functioning properly. Hopefully, we can settle this thing and get things back to normal."

Teachers confident on contract . . .

There was no reaction from the teachers in attendance.

After the regular agenda of the school committee was completed, a closed executive session was called so that administrators could discuss contract negotiations.

CTA President Fortin said the union's negotiation team met throughout the day Monday with members of the school administration.

"We made substantial progress in some areas where we were stuck before, but we are still apart in several other areas," he reported.

A sixth mediation session between the two sides is scheduled for October 23. "Hopefully we will move forward again," the union president said. "In the last three meetings, we have moved forward each time."

The union and administration representatives met four times this past summer in mediation sessions. The teachers' association has been working without a contract since June despite more than a year of negotiations.

Regarding the appearance of the negotiating support team at this week's school committee meeting, Fortin added, "I hope the school committee saw it as a positive statement. We didn't mean anything aggressive by it. It was just a statement expressing our frustration. I hope it was taken well."

The union's negotiation team consists of several teachers from each school, Fortin, and a representative of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association. The administration's team consists of sub committee members Joseph Nedrow and Diana Kornet, Supt. Crowell and Attv. Allan Miller.

status of repairs and some indication that essential priorities, such as medical and elderly needs, were not followed. The Board of Selectmen will be attending the upcoming DPU hearing and will be issuing a subsequent statement.

We intend to learn from this experience and work with Eastern Edison to assure that better planning, more information flow, improved response to public inquiries and more concerted action will help to avoid a repetition of this crisis in the future. Any suggestions for improving emergency procedures are welcome. Please put suggestions in writing and forward them to the Board of Selectmen.

The Board would like to thank the many town employees and department heads for their extra efforts in cleaning up after this storm. We would also like to offer our sincere appreciation to the many, many volunteers who also helped, and particularly to our Director of Civil Defense, Arthur Lehr. But most important, we want to thank the public at large for cooperating with the town during this very difficult period. By working together, life under difficult circumstances was made a little more bearable.

The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

BANKRUPTCY

Bankruptcy is a legal proceeding in which individuals and corporations may be discharged from their debts by placing most of their assets in the hands of the court. It excludes taxes, alimony, debts created by fraud and exempts certain property. Through its officers, the court sells the assets, subtracts court costs and distributes the balance among the creditors on a pro rata basis. One of the primary advantages to declaring bankruptcy is that it permits a debtor to discharge his or her debts for less than their full value. A bankruptcy filing operates as an injunction against further legal action by any creditor to collect the outstanding balance of a debt. A primary disadvantage is that a bankruptcy can be filed only once every six years.

Sewer Bd. questions pumping switch puzzle

The sewer commission requested that selectmen order the immediate connection of the emergency generator switch to the high school pumping station.

Although town meeting appropriated money five years ago to purchase the proper equipment, the emergency generator switch has never been installed.

The most recent tests conducted Monday morning, Oct. 1, at the pumping station revealed fecal coloform counts of 17,000 per 100 mililiters, according to Sewer Treatment Plant Operator Manuel Salvador. The standard level of coloform allowed by the state is about 70 per 100 mililiter. The test was conducted Monday morning after the school had been closed for three days, and was used minimally as a storm evacuation center.

At their meeting Monday night, Board of Health members were not concerned with the high colorform statistics. The high concentration of water discharged from the water-cooled generator into the sewer lines caused the temporary situation, they agreed.

The power outage resulting from Hurricane Gloria shut down the pumping station which discharges sewage from the high school to the town's treatment plant on Elm Street. Neighbors complained through that weekend about the unpleasant odor eminating from the pumping station area at the school.

When Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis and Salvador inspected the manhole trench, they discovered the source of the odor. The pump had not been functioning since the power outage late Friday afternoon. The generator inside the school was discharging water coolant into the sewer line. The station's sewer lines were clogged with sewage.

If the emergency generator switch had been connected, the pumping station would have operated throughout the three-day outage, Salvador explained.

"It will take days to clear it out," he said this week.

In the meantime, the sewer commission is trying to find out why the emergency generator switch has never been installed.

In the minutes of the commission's May 1 meeting, the members are quoted as discussing that problem. It stated in the recorded minutes that Chairman DeSantis hand-delivered a letter to Wire Inspector Steve Wigmore, requesting he install the switch to the school pumping station. "He stated this was requested by the Sewer Commissioners three years ago, but the switch was never installed. He stated he told Mr. Wigmore that the installation is required under state regulations," according to the testimony within the minutes.

Salvador commented during that May meeting that $300 worth of equipment was ready for installation.

Contacted this week, Mr. Wigmore denied any knowledge of the request to install an emergency generator switch at the high school pumping station. "I don't know anything about it," he said. "All I know is what I have read in the papers."

A copy of an April 29 letter sent to Wigmore from the commission stated, "the Sewer Commission believes it important that the emergency generator switch be installed to allow pumping operations during periods of line power failure. Our Chief Operator, Manuel Salvador, has the stock and related materials on hand."

In a more recent letter forwarded to Wigmore from the commission, it was stated, "this matter is of great concern to the Sewer Commssioners, because inadequate warning of pump failure could lead to overflows. Additionally, the switch is required to run the emergency generator, if required. Please give this matter your attention as soon as possible." That communication was sent Sept. 10.

According to Salvador, a properly-functioning emergency generator is required under state regulations. The Division of Water Pollution Control requires that all pumping stations be provided with an independent generator-type source of electric power or a completely separate alternate source of power for emergency operations.

The high school pump station discharges the sewage up a hill toward the sewer treatment plant. Once the sewage reaches the crest of the hill, gravity allows it to flow into the Elm Street treatment plant.

Town insurance estimates dramatically increase

By Steven M. Ulfelder

According to cost estimates completed by the Municipal Insurance Advisory Committee, Cohasset's municipal insurance costs for fiscal 1987 may be $530,000. This price, which is merely an estimate and may change, would be a 445 percent increase over fiscal 1986 costs.

In a Tuesday night meeting, Thomas Sheppard and Galt Grant, representing the Insurance Advisory Committee, explained to the Advisory Committee that Cohasset's problem is far from isolated.

"The insurance industry as a whole lost $3 billion in 1984," explained Grant. "A lot of companies are in trouble. The industry is scared to death of the legal system in this country."

Increases in comprehensive general liability, umbrella, and "catastrophe" (general liability in excess of $500,000) coverage will be dramatic, said Sheppard. Worker's compensation, which is state-regulated, is not expected to rise significantly.

At least three firms are ready to make bids for the town's insurance. Commercial Union provides most of the coverage now. The Insurance Advisory Committee will meet with the Cohasset Selectmen "to prepare them for this," said Grant. The Selectmen must provide a warrant for the money, which will be needed by Jan. 30, 1986.

Some coverages may be difficult to obtain at all. Public Officials' Errors and Omissions coverage falls into this category. Ironically some of these coverages, if obtainable at all, will not be much more expensive in 1987 than in 1986.

In other business, Cohasset Treasurer/Collector Betty Ripley announced the town had served warrants to citizens who had not yet paid their 1982 and 1983 taxes. Forty-eight warrants have been served including six tax titles.

There is still $200,000 outstanding on 1985 taxes.

Ripley also made two transfer requests. The Treasurer/Collector's office was granted $617 for a second phone and phone line, and $648 for clerical salaries.

A Board of Health transfer request for $263 was denied. The money sought was for expenses incurred in the mandatory advertising of tanning salon regulations.

Auto driving school quits 1985-86 contract

Supt. Eugene Crowell informed the school committee Monday night that the owners of the Scituate Auto Driving School resigned their contract with the Cohasset school system.

According to one of the driving school owners who did not attend the meeting, the decision to withdraw the contract resulted from an article published in the daily newspaper last week. That article reported the events of the committee's meeting last week in which the board members discussed the driving program.

In a phone conversation Tuesday morning, the driving school operator stated, "The Scituate Auto Driving School has serviced Cohasset for 25 years. And, we have given hundreds of extra hours. We take great pride in our work."

In response to a committee member's concern that minimal instruction was given to the young drivers, the owner added that the format for the course is regulated by the state Registry of Motor Vehicles and is the same for all driving schools.

Dr. Joseph Nedrow, chairman of the committee, expressed his dismay at the negative tone of the article, and said his statements made last week related his desire to "have some dialogue with the owners of the driving school."

Committee member Barbara Bliss defended her remarks made last week, emphasizing that she " was not accusing."

As one parent at Monday's meeting noted, driver education is designed to help the student learn what they have to do in order to pass the state test. We as parents should give our kids the driving time for experience.

This statement coincided with what committee member Richard Conley said last week. "I think we're going beyond our realm here. The only way anyone really learns to drive is by experience after you get your license."

Supt. Crowell expressed his regret at the turn of events and stated that the "school committee will try and communicate with the owners of the Scituate Auto Driving School to discuss the matter. But at the same time, we will have to look for other resources if an applicable solution can not be found."

Toughlove movie on Ch. 5

A two-hour television movie, "Toughlove," will be aired over WCVB-Channel 5 Oct. 13 at 9 p.m. The movie stars Lee Remick, Bruce Dern and Piper Laurie in a drama that highlights the national Toughlove family support organization, a group which helps parents deal with troubled teens.

After the movie, during the 11 p.m. news on Channel 5, hotline numbers will be announced.

Further information about the organization may also be obtained by calling Betty, 878-3414; Tess, 878-8638; Pat, 871-1057 or Peggy Duffy, 545-0223.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

FITNESS AND BACK PAIN

The physical fitness boom galvanized 55 million Americans into regular fitness activities more than a decade ago. Since then, there has been a misconception that fitness alone will diminish the incidence of back pain. In fact, there are no statistics to show that the rate of growth of back pain has been slowed in this country. One need only to look at the sports pages. The evidence of physically fit professional athletes who lose playing time due to back pain is very apparent. Unfortunately, it is the "weekend athlete" who is probably most susceptible to back injury and pain. According to the Health Insurance Association, an estimated 20 million sports injuries (including back injuries) occur each year. A regular fitness routine is not a good reason to forsake the chiropractor.

Physical activity it seems is on the American scene to stay. However, many of us seem to "activate ourselves" on an occasional rather than regular basis. Thus the incidence of pain, discomfort and related problems are numerous. The science of chiropractic approaches the hazards that result in stress upon the spinal column. Through such chiropractic approaches the source, not merely the symptom, of a problem is addressed so that relief can be achieved. For attention to your needs, call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, today. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

☐ Belated best wishes to Eileen Kurtz on her 60th birthday, which was Saturday, October 5. Actually, if you happened to go by her house, you couldn't miss the balloons and signs surrounding it. Hope it was a very happy day, and that the rest of the year will follow suit.

☐ Okay, everyone, circle the calendar for the Boosters Club Dance. It will be held on the 18th of October (Friday) at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. The price is only $15 a couple, and is a guaranteed good time. There will be a disc jockey in charge of the entertainment. For more details and tickets, call Ruth Nedrow, 383-9292; Barbara Froio, 383-6616; or Janet Figueiredo, 383-1432. Whatever you do, don't miss it.

☐ Its too bad that Cohasset citizens can't vote for the city councilor in Allston-Brighton, I'm sure that several of us would cast our vote for Richard Izzo (the "conservative opponent"). As many will remember, Izzo was a teacher and the hockey coach at the High School last year. Here's hoping he wins, keep your eye on the Boston papers for the results.

☐ Mary Jeanette Murray wasn't the only one "thrilled and proud" to have a Deerhill School (constituent) be an award winner of the channel 5 sponsored program "Kids Can Make a Difference week" proclaimed by the Governor. The week is supposed to show the youngsters of Massachusetts that we are made up of many races, religions, and nationalities. Well, Elizabeth Good, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Good of Fairoaks Lane, won a blue ribbon for her poster on the subject and for that we are all proud! Congratulations to you Elizabeth.

☐ Those who went to see the football game last Saturday certainly weren't disappointed . . . our boys did an admirable job, and the win was a feather in their cap indeed! A lot of fans also got an opportunity to see a scrapbook of the 1950's team that played against Scituate, which was an added treat. Nice for the coaches too, that had to go to work on Monday (those that teach in the Scituate schools especially) I also heard whispers of the hair-shearers being sharpened, as a mohawk becomes more and more of a reality.

☐ An added bit of information was given to me concerning the Boosters Dance . . there is to be a "Secret Door Prize", a raffle, hors d'oeuvres, and a midnight snack of yummy clam chowder. There are several more reasons to contact one of the Booster members for tickets!

☐ About the Lottery Council of Cohasset. . .they have $1,014 to award this period. The Council would like to encourage artists and art groups to apply by noon on Oct. 28.

Applications are available at Town Hall or call Larry Fone, 383-0898. Our committee wants all Cohasset art groups or individual artists to get their share.

☐ For once someone pulled something over on Izzie Salvador! She really thought that everyone forgot her (big) birthday, and was she ever shocked when she walked into the Sons of Italy Hall and 100 of her friends and relatives surprised her. A super time was had by all that went, as is only fitting for an x-Scituate cheerleader on the day of "The Game".

☐ Too bad that the Patriots didn't get Paul Farren for their side, he certainly helped the Browns to win their game last Sunday. At least Patriot fans can take heart that another Cohasset boy has made it big in the "Big League"!

☐ Congratulations are in order for Robert E. Corkery, Heather Davenport, Jaqueline Fahey, Justin DeSantis, Michael Greiner and Brian Leary, whose efforts won them a Letter of Commendation in the 1986 National Merit Scholarship Program.

☐ It won't seem the same at the Joseph Osgood School once Mrs. Manna retires! She has been there since 1963, and no one has ever seen her without a smile and a kind word! She's everyone's favorite teacher, and we wish her lots of fun and good luck in her retirement. There is a party being held in her honor at Hugo's restaurant on Oct. 17 at 6 p.m., its sure to be a grand one!

☐ We hope Sgt. Richard Barrow had a wonderful birthday Wednesday. If you see him, give your best to the newest member of Cohasset's 60+ Club!

Health board orders new septic plans for store

While the planning board has until Oct. 22 to render a decision, the health board decided this week that septic plans for the proposed Stop and Shop will have to be resubmitted.

Town counsel will review that decision.

Reacting to the planning board's decision that the most recent revisions of Cohasset Plaza constitute a 'new plan', the health board members decided this week that the previously-approved septic system plans must be reviewed again.

Member John Burns disagreed with the vote, saying the septic system shown on the proposed plans submitted several months ago and approved by the health board March 14, were almost identical to the one submitted last month. The latest revisions made to the Cohasset Plaza plans were submitted to the planning board Sept. 28.

Originally, the plans called for a regulation-sized supermarket with several stores and a bank within a small mall. The current plans before the planning board show a single building containing a super-supermarket.

Health board members noted the latest plan will have to comply with the more stringent health regulations adopted by the town at the June special town meeting.

Although the location of the store's septic system has not been altered, initial plans to fill a wetlands area are not included in the latest plans. As Health Agent Joseph Godzik remarked, the septic system's storage tanks have been re-located, although the leaching field remains in the original location.

The latest revisions were submitted for the health board's review Oct. 2.

Health Board member Barbara Kern noted that the septic system is now located "near the new entrance" to the plaza. "This is an entirely different plan," she added. "For one thing, we have a wetlands where they originally said they would fill."

Burns refuted the members' testimony, saying the septic plans are in the same area, unchanged, and will now handle a much smaller building than originally proposed.

"If the planning board said this is a new plan, then obviously it is the same for us," member C. Michael Bliss said, adding that town departments must coordinate their efforts.

Kern agreed with his statements, as member Burns continued to object. Kern said the developer may have to seek a variance from their board in order to construct the system.

Depending on the ruling from town counsel, the health board voted 2-1 to declare the previous permit issued to the development null and void. The developer, Donald Staszko, will have to present the proposed system to the health board for its review.

In a hearing before the planning board last week, traffic engineers for the proposed development presented additional information to the board.

A separate study was made of the traffic count in front of the Pembroke Super Stop and Shop supermarket. The board requested the local study after member Robert Sturdy charged that the previous study was superficial. The results varied slightly with the traffic study submitted two weeks ago by the engineering firm of Vanasse-Hangen.

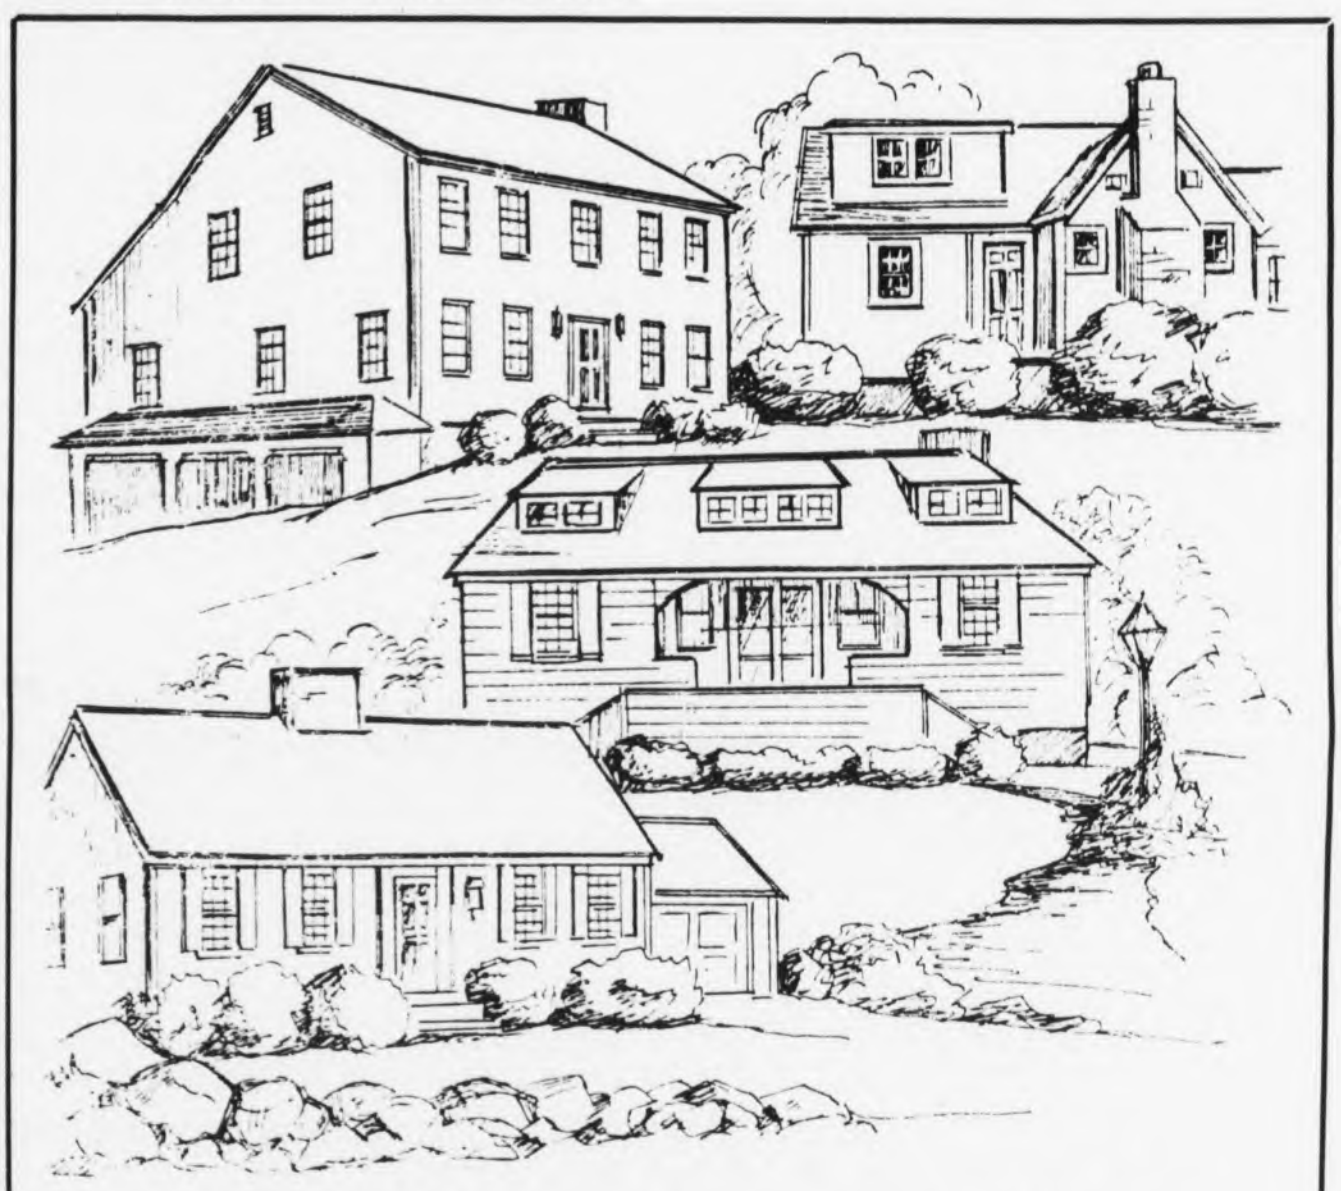
According to the study, 3000 cars a day enter the Pembroke store lot. The peak afternoon hour generated 526 cars. The estimate for the Cohasset store would be 607 in a peak hour.

Traffic plans for the supermarket include widening the roadway to allow for a left-turn lane for southbound traffic. The intersection of King Street, which is across the entrance to the market, will be rebuilt to form a better angle with Rte. 3A.

Residents from the Fair Oaks Lane and Sohier Street neighbors have registered their written and verbal objections to the plan. They have continually voiced concern for the increased traffic. The residents have suggested the project could pollute the town's watershed area and interfere with the drainage patterns there.

The planning board was scheduled to discuss the supermarket plans at its meeting Wednesday night. A decision will be rendered at the following meeting, Oct. 16.

Low bacterial counts along Glades



The latest tests performed last month at the Glades shellfishing beds indicates a very low bacterial count. This is in direct contrast to evidence recently presented to the Cohasset sewer and health boards by Glades resident Robert Thorndike.

The Scituate resident has campaigned for several months in an attempt to force Cohasset officials to stop the pollution of the clam beds. He claims pollution sources within Cohasset which culminate in Cohasset Harbor, are the contributing factors in the pollution of the Scituate Glades.

Cohasset Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis said the latest state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) tests in September resulted in low total coliform counts. According to DeSantis, on Sept. 11 and 25 the DEQE recorded total coliform at 40 colonies per 100 mililiter. That is below the state standard of 70 colonies, he said.

Another test conducted by the state agency May

A fair deal

Now that the storm and our tempers have subsided, we return to a more 'normal' routine of life.

As we emerge from the debris deposited from Gloria, we must resume the challenge of everyday life.

One of the challenges currently facing our town is the appointment of a new fire chief. We have known since March that Cohasset would be searching for a new administrator in the fire department.

By Oct. 21, the Fire Chief Search Committee will be recommending a list of five candidates to the Board of Selectmen. The board members will make the final choice.

The search committee is nearing completion of its responsibilities, and will make recommendations to selectmen. The names will be listed by priority, ranked in order of how they scored in a written examination, an oral interview and their original application form.

We again repeat that this committee, led by Chairman Stephen Bobo, is among the most professional and competent ever formed in this town.

It is very clear the town couldn't afford the services of these men, had they charged for the numerous hours they have served. They have met continuously since the summer. They organized quickly and got down to work without delay.

We express our gratitude to this committee once again in light of a letter to the editor submitted to the Mariner this week. In the correspondence, the wife of the current fire chief states the search committee is a sham. Her 'sources' have informed her that the next chief has already been selected and the committee was a cover-up by selectmen to appear they were making a sincere effort to select the most qualified candidate.

We couldn't disagree more. We applaud the selectmen for their wise choice of members for the search committee.

And even louder, we applaud the honest efforts of the appointed committee. We doubt they would ever stand for a 'set up' by anyone. The chairman stated repeatedly he would allow no politics to interfere with the proceedings of nis committee. They are capable men, not willing to accept deception.

We fully understand Mrs. Dooley's remarks and her sentiments toward the town's administration. But we vehemently disagree with her conclusions.

Her husband was not given a fair deal in this town. We implore not to do the same to his successor.

Gloria brought us many images

Letters

To the Editor:

Once again the calm. The aftermath of the storm -the third day.

A squirrel nibbles on an acorn, fluttering oak leaves as if he is eating them. Eleven mallards and loons dip under and around our weathered dock - the dock itself sturdy, in its place, after being pushed and beated and blown.

Only one pine side-board came loose and floated under the dock - and lodged there. A small snowy egret stands proudly on a rock, at the water's edge, as if to approve the pale grey-blue hazy day. Reflections of the early sun are everywhere. Two ducks swim idly near the bird.

Across the bay I can count seventy-four white egrets - one great white heron in their midst - and on a small sand bank near a long, putty-colored rock fifty loons parade like erect, grey soldiers. Even further across the harbor I can see forty or more egrets and gulls - white specks on the massive sand banks.

Branches, limbs, broken trees, debris, everywhere - wires downs, leaning telephone poles. A tree which fell across the road, out front, beyound our driveway, was sawed up by the workmen and moved to the side of the road. We are still without electricty: no hot water, no TV, no heat, no washing machine, no dryer, no refrigerator, no lighter, not even a radio. None of the dependents of this material age.

But what does it matter?

We have life, glorious life (no one was hurt).

We have time, priceless time: time to relax, to read, to be still, to talk to our friends - share stories, reminisce, appreciate.

We have "what is left."

Storms have a way of clearing away the clutter. Like anger, crying - the "scream" which dislodges the wasteful torments of the mind, releasing the cold tightness of the frozen "smiling" mask of the catatonic human. The storm can drive out illusions and put life in its proper perspective.

And "what is left?" The warmth of candle light and intimacy, the freshness of the clear air, and the beauty, peace, and tranquility of nature - we can enjoy.

Selectmen should take a stand

(This letter was written to the Board of Selectmen Chairman Frank England. Ed. note.)

Dear Mr. England:

As I write this letter, four days after Hurricane Gloria, the paper reports both that half the town of Cohasset is without power and that the Cohasset Selectmen "defended Eastern Edison as they met by candlelight . . . "

I would hope that the Selectmen would take a strong position on behalf of the citizens of Cohasset, especially those who have gone the longest without power.

Certainly many Eastern Edison employees have been working very long shifts, nearly 24 hours a day, to restore power to Cohasset and the rest of their large service area, and should be commended for that commitment of time, effort, and manpower.

But, as a citizen who went for 74 hours without electric power, I would hope that the Selectmen would ask Eastern Edison to attend their next meeting to answer a few quetions:

1.) What were their emergency contingency plans for such an eventuality? Should those plans be improved?

2.) Did the company do all that it could to prepare for the hurricane, since we all had ample advance warning?

3.) Did they effectively communicate with and coordinate with local officials—in restoring power, and priorities for restoring power?

4.) How will this extended period without power affect electric bills during the period of outage, and what will be the impact on future rates?

Also, I think that the citizens of Cohasset would be interested in how much the storm cost the town—in terms of overtime for the Tree and Park Dept., who should be commended for their long hours, and costs incurred by civil defense, fire, police, ambulance, and and other costs incurred by the town.

Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.

Delusions fostered by sewer board

To the Editor:

Neither the Tooth Fairy nor the Clean Water Act should be expected to provide public funds for repairs to septic systems on private property. Nor does the Clean Water Act mandate such inappropriate innovations as 2" sewer lines and on-lot holding tanks. However, despite being warned several times by former sewer commissioner Gwinn, by DEQE, and by EPA, these delusions are still fostered by the current sewer commissioners.

The current sewer commissioners have been uncooperative with the regulatory authority, but are supported by a cohesive group whose primary interest is preventing undesirable growth." The minimum possible sewage treatment system is one of the means to that end. Other residents have been frightened by misrepresentation of costs of a proper system or who have only a short-term interest in this upper income bedroom town before they move on, are in favor of any tactic which does nothing as long as possible, or which provides a "solution" at least personal cost to them. The appeal is such a delaying tactic, and it is to be hoped that it will be disposed of quickly.

The Cohasset sewage problem is not just a minor infraction of discharge quality from the overloaded small treatment plant, it is numerous failing systems and unhealthy conditions in the more densely populated and older part of town. Because of small lots and soil conditions on-site systems can't ever be satisfactory and the only proper solution is a collection system which delivers sewage to a treatment plant. The existing plant is unsuitable for expansion; it is necessary therefore either to build our own or connect to a neighboring town.

Building our own expandable plant is the correct answer both for quality of service and long term economics but the current plan is to connect to Hull, whose plant is currently underutilized. Unfortunately, it is properly designed and located, the town of Hull is beginning a massive condominium building boom along its extensive waterfront, and the capacity available to Cohasset is far less than could be provided at about the same cost from our own plant, after funding, and would result in water use restrictions.

The sewer commissioners are maundering about reducing the size of the sewered area, so as to avoid requesting more town funds to replace the state funding we've been repeatedly warned we couldn't get. Even if that switch will be approved by the state, such cheap solutions inevitably end up costing more in the long run. And note that the area to be excluded is suspected of polluting streams that run into Boston Harbor, and therefore is an area where on-site systems should be replaced by a larger collection and central treatment system. There's also talk of a town fund to repair the on-lot systems not served by the sewage collection systems. Better not include a means test in the protocol for selection for repair; that could exclude some of the strongest supporters of the current sewer commissioners.

Thanks Edison!

To the Editor:

The wind blew hard,
And the lights failed.
Some people blew hard,
to little avail.
Our people worked hard,
And the roads were cleared.
Edison worked hard,
the lights reappeared.
Thanks guys.

Defense of Eastern Edison 's storm response

caused to the trees, we were able to get 13-14 crews from Ohio by Saturday morning."

By Monday, more crews arrived as adjacent utility companies realized the vast extent of damage to the Eastern Edison district. On that day, there were a total of 36 crews working the region; Tuesday, 49; Wednesday, 63; Thursday, 78; and Friday, 124 including 24 of their own crews which included bringing in retired employees.

Together, these crews worked an average of 16 hours to restore power gradually to 300 square miles of residential and business property.

There was a leading priority in the restoration of power, Hamer explained. Hospitals and medical centers were the first to receive their power. Local medical emergencies were referred to the community's fire and police departments for immediate assistance.

Water departments were also a priority for the electric company, although most were operating on emergency generators.

Some critics charged that Eastern Edison did not have an adequate emergency response system. Hamer explained the one utilized during Gloria's aftermath.

"It was four-part. The first thing was to get the tree crews out and clean up the trees. The second was to get the pole crews out, then the overhead crews and then we dispatched crews to check the individual lines to the homes. There is a logic to this system," he said. "We work from the beginning, forward.

But no system is infallible, he noted, and the destruction caused by this storm seemed to wreak havoc throughout the region. Billing department employees were redeployed into the company's 'storm center' where they answered about 14,000 calls each day. A total of 17,000 "quick calls" were received that first day of the storm. By the end of the week, as consumers' frustration and anger expanded, fewer calls were answered because of the greater length of conversation, according to Edison public information officer Ruth Stetson.

According to Hamer, a total of 2000 wires were felled by the hurricane's gusts. "Despite that, unbelievably there were a number of people walking the streets. The Governor said not to walk the streets during the storm, and he also warned that power restoration would take a considerable amount of time."

He explained the process of returning power to the communities was made more complex by the towns' request to kill power Friday afternoon. He agreed with the municipalities' decision to stop the flow of electricity into dead wires and transmitters, but said the restoration work was slowed because of the fight to generate power from the original feeder location.

A total of 17,000 "quick calls" were received that first day of the storm. By the end of the week, as consumers' frustration and anger expanded, fewer calls were answered because of the greater length of conversation, according to Edison public information officer Ruth Stetson.

According to Hamer, a total of 2000 wires were felled by the hurricane's gusts. "Despite that, unbelievably there were a number of people walking the streets. The Governor said not to walk the streets during the storm, and he also warned that power restoration would take a considerable amount of time."

He explained the process of returning power to the communities was made more complex by the towns' request to kill power Friday afternoon. He agreed with the municipalities' decision to stop the flow of electricity into dead wires and transmitters, but said the restoration work was slowed because of the fight to generate power from the original feeder location.

Helicoptors were deployed though the weekend following the storm so that company officials could more closely observe the widespread extent of damage. Later, crews were assigned to each electrical sub station where work began to restore electrical power.

"It was a real problem trying to handle all the crews, and to me the way we handled these men was the only logical way. Some people complained the men were sitting around waiting for assignments. Logistically, it was difficult keeping seven times the normal number of crews going every minute. And we would rather have had them waiting for an hour at the most, than not there at all" Hamer stated. "As we realized the extent of damage, people from every operational department were sent out as 'birddogs' - leading a crew to a particular location."

Hamer defended the particular electrical system designed in this area, noting that some of the outside crews voiced criticism of the Eastern Edison system. "I feel we have a very strong system," he said, adding that the company is in the process of a major project in which all systems will receive higher voltage capabilities and newer poles.

Another reason for the slow process of restoration, according to the company president, was the thick forest of trees which overgrew the electrical wires in every community.

"I've said this before, but the trees have never been so lush as now," he said, noting that the company spends "hundreds of thousands of dollars" each year to trim trees. Residents move to this area because of the vast greenery, he added, but such a habitat impedes work on the overhead wires entangled into sprawling limbs.

Hamer explained the complicated logistics of bringing outside crews into the area to help with the post-storm clean-up. Housing and feeding the hundreds of out-of-state men was a difficult problem which eventually was solved. Each crew worked an average of 16 hours per day. They are paid time and a half for all overtime hours, and double time for Sundays.

Hamer said the cost of bringing these outside crews into the area, and providing their accomodations has not yet been finalized. The total bill (they were housed in local motels such as Kimball's By The Sea and the Clipper Ship), included their meals (they had a running tab at Friday's restaurant in Norwell). The bill will be forwarded from the out-of-state utility companies to Eastern Edison. Until that time, no clear total of the storm costs can be calculated by the utility company.

Regarding the upcoming investigation of the utility company by the state Department of Public Utility, Hamer said he welcomes it. "We will cooperate to the fullest and will let them know everything. Hopefully, we will come up with an improved system. But because of the shut-off ordered by 11 communities, our (future) plan will have to be designed around that particular situation," he said.

Eastern Edison's plan, he added, had been worked out over a period of time. "I can't say what else we should have done," Hamer stated. Reacting to a suggestion that one person could have been stationed in each community, responsible for daily communications with local officials, company spokesperson Stetson commented, "that would be another kink in the system."

Hamer said he understood the frustrations voiced throughout the week as the power failure continued. "If we are without power," he said, "our lives are changed and tensions build up. I know, I was without power in Norwell until Tuesday night. And I wasn't around to appreciate it when the lights came back on."

Chief's wife says search committee a waste

To the Editor:

After months of following the articles and editorials regarding the Fire Chief's Search Committee and their processes, I thought it only fitting as the wife of the present fire chief, serving under the pressures of the office along with him for two and a half-plus years, to state some of my feelings about the going's on with the committee to find by husband's replacement. To begin with, I think that the committee is doing a lot of work for nothing. It's merely for show. The committee is doing a good job, but they should know that there's a shoo-in standing in the wings. All of your efforts gentlemen, more than likely, are in vain. There is however, one member on the committee that knows who the next chief is already, as well as I do. The process you're following—testing, and interviewing, etc., is good, but a waste of time and money. Four people showed up last Saturday, that amounts to $250 per man just to test. What a waste of taxpayers' money.

It is my understanding (from my sources) that the next fire chief was chosen last September (1984) during some "special meeting" between the board and the lads—"behind closed doors." So I cannot understand why the board has chosen a fire chief's search committee to go through this whole process when it's so unnecessary. Being the person I am, and having been in the middle of all the prejudice, harrassment and pressures that the present chief has had to endure, I feel it only just and right to offer you what I feel are the only right qualifications for the next chief.

They are the following simple qualifications; (1) Needs not be a firefighter—only a "paper pusher"; (2) Needs only to sit back, stay unnoticed and unavailable to the public: (3) Keep a black book on whatever dirt he might need to know to insure himself a new contract; (4) Do nothing to increase the daily activities of the lads, thereby having them "earn their keep"; (5) Check the payroll and of course, sign it: (6) Play golf; (7) Be a fast learner at how to "cow-tow" to the "whims" of the selectmen and the lads; (8) Allow the lads to do whatever they want when they want (look the other way—always); (9) Live out of town so that you can continue to be unavailable to the public—work only 9 to 5, Monday through Friday; (10) Be un-reachable nights and on weekends; (11) Be a "Yes" man; (12) Do not be a professional! (You'll need the qualifications on paper however); (13) This is most important . . . Never, never be an "outsider"!! That's tabu. For a fire chief it's the kiss of death. There's much prejudice within the fire department against "outsiders"; (14) Important also, do not be opinionated—the selectmen do not like things done right, and never want to hear the truth; (15) If you are an "outsider," never be in the limelight—for any reason—the lads and selectmen don't like that. You might look better

Letter

Good attendance

An enthusiastic crowd of parents attended the second session of the seminar "Chemically Free" last night at St. Stephen's Church. Over 100 of their children had been present at the opening session the previous week.

Helen Hooper, chairman of the Family Service Committee of the Social Service League, sponsors of the seminars, introduced the panel of speakers. These were Bill Spinks, Director of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism; Michael Gill, Health Coordinator of the Cohasset public schools, and Michael Rosati, Health Educator of the Prevention Resource Center in Newton.

The purpose of the meeting was to explore the parents' role in influencing their children's choices regarding the use of alcohol and marijuana. A film was shown, "Sons and Daughters, Drugs and Booze," which served as a springboard for the discussion that followed.

Refreshments were served at the end of the meeting.

The final session of the seminar has been postponed to Wednesday, Oct. 23 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. It will be held in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset. Both parents and children are invited to attend. The purpose of this final session is to increase the levels of communication and understanding between parents and their children on these vital issues.

Science courses

With the changing leaves, cooling temperatures and flocking of migrant birds, we are constantly reminded that winter is approaching. As nature's creatures busy themselves storing food, the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell helps you prepare to feed the birds this winter by offering its autumn bird seed sale. As winter deepens and their natural food sources diminish, birds will flock to the man-made feeders, providing you with enjoyment and learning opportunities.

Attracting a variety of birds requires different kinds of food. The most popular seed for many species is sunflower seed. Cracked corn is a favorite with ground feeding birds such as quail and cardinals while mixed seed, containing sunflower, corn and millet, is used to attract chickadees, juncos and sparrows. If you want to lure finches, use thistle. Don't forget to provide suet for protein and water for drinking and baths (brrr!).

Orders must be placed by 4 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 11 and can be picked up on Saturday, Oct. 19, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 20 noon to 4 p.m. only. Visa and Master Charge orders may be phoned in at 659-2559 or 659-7525. Otherwise stop by the Science Center for an order form.

Seed available: 25 lb. black sunflower; $8; 25 lb. striped Sunflower, $8.40; 50 lbs. striped sunflower, $15.75; 25 lb. regular Wild Bird Mix, $5.35; 50 lb. regular Wild Bird Mix, $10.40; 20 lb. regular Wild Bird Mix, $5.80; 40 lb. special Wild Bird Mix, $11; 25 lb. Cracked Corn, $4.30; 50 lb. Cracked Corn, $8.35; 10 lb. Sunflower Hearts, $6.75; 50 lb. Sunflower Hearts, $32 and 10 lb. Thistle, $12.95.

Also to be found at the Science Center are bird feeders, books and guides. The funds raised by Bird Seed Sales help support the educational programs of the Science Center.

The South Shore Natural Science Center is located on Jacobs Lane, Norwell, just off Route 123. It is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays and 1 to 4 p.m. Sundays and most holidays.

Note: In order to assist in ordering lunches, please call the Deer Hill Office, 383-6115, prior to 9 a.m. on the day that you are scheduled and let us know if you plan to attend. Cost of adult lunch is $1.40. As I am sure you are aware, the portions and quality of this year's lunch program should be to your liking. Bon appetit!

School opening at Deer Hill

From all indications, our opening has gone smoothly and we are pleased with our current level of enrollment. Last November, we anticipated 240 students, and, at this time, we have 250.

A great, big welcome

Deer Hill School extends a sincere welcome to students new to our school this year:

Grade 4: Megan Bruns and Jessica Sammon, in Mrs. Cassiani's homeroom; Ann Senechal and Herbert Jones, in Mrs. McDonald's homeroom; and David Zadel in Mrs. Chase's homeroom.

Grade 5: Steven Harrington, in Mr. Deakin's homeroom; James Cedarstrom and Timothy Herzog, in Mrs. Hibbard's homeroom; and Claudine Johnson in Mr. Levine's homeroom.

Grade 6: William Bruns and Scott Lavalle, in Mr. Becker's homeroom; and Jason Hunter and Adam McNamara, in Mrs. Cisneros' homeroom.

Walk-in art classes

Walk-in art classes have been offered Period 2 all days and Period 6 odd days. They have been very well received and extremely well attended.

Projects being worked on in the classes have included textile design, sketching, cartoons, charcoal drawing, watercolors, lettering and photography. Average number of walk-in students per week is 40.

The procedure is this: if a student has a study hall during the walk-in class time, he or she can get a pass and come to the art room. They bring ideas, we supply help and materials.

High school nomination

Supt. Eugene Crowell announced Monday that Cohasset High School has been nominated for election to permanent membership in the College Scholarship Service Assembly.

The announcement came in a letter addressed to Richard Streeter, principal of CHS, from the College Scholarship Council. Elections will be held Oct. 24.

This will be the first class of permanent secondary education members of the College scholarship Service Council. Election results will be available in early November.

In other school committee business this week, Dennis Walsh, a math teacher at the high school, was appointed varsity ice hockey coach. James "Benji" Watson was appointed the JV hockey coach.

South Shore Art Center news . . .

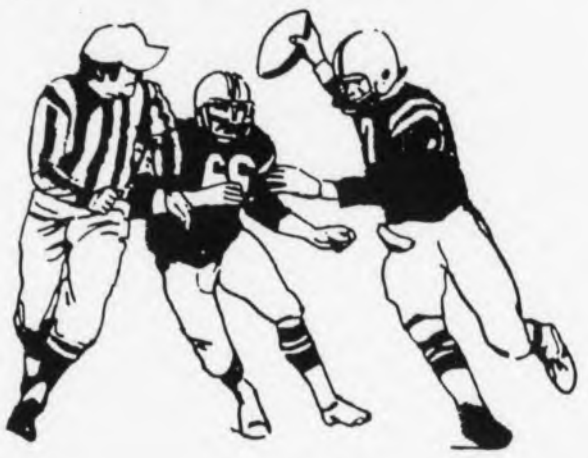
Works by gallery artists will be featured in the South Shore Art Center's annual Blue Ribbon Exhibit open to all artist members of the Center.

The exhibit will hang in the Center, 103 Ripley Road, from Oct. 16 through Oct. 31 with a formal reception on Friday, Oct. 18 from 5 to 7 p.m. The reception coincides with the Center's general membership meeting and "pot luck" suppers in the studio cafe. Members need to call the Center at 383-9548 for reservations and food assignments.

The Blue Ribbon Show represents a variety of media and style with blue ribbons awarded in various categories. This annual exhibit gives the gallery artists and members a chance to show their work in a comprehensive exhibit and for the general public an opportunity to see the quality of work created by the Center's artists.

The Center's artists come from a wide geographical area and represent a major portion of the Center's activities. The Center has become widely recognized as a facility that encourages diverse artistic expression.

The show offers an excellent opportunity for first time as well as serious collectors to see what is available from the South Shore Art Center's artists.



Hours for viewing the exhibit are Monday through Friday noon to 4 p.m., and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. A donation of $3 will be requested at the opening reception; the donation is used to help fund the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship Fund.

New copying machine

The South Shore Art Center was recently given a Dennison copying machine from a local business.

Topaz Engineering Supply Inc. of Hingham has made a generous gift of this copying machine to the Center in Cohasset. With an in-house machine such as this one, the South Shore Art Center will not have to rely on using outside copying machines to duplicate its correspondence.

The Center and its staff is most appreciative of TopazEngineering for offering this machine to the Center.

Skippers bounce back after storm respite

By Lisa Shumaker

Varsity Girls Field Hockey

The girls had an unbelievable week and remain and will remain the only undefeated team in the South Shore League!

Furthermore, with their victory Friday over Sandwich, the girls took sole position of first place in the League!

"Gloria" seemed to have pumped some of her life into Cohasset as they clobbered Norwell Tuesday, 6-0. The Skippers dominated the entire game and exhausted Norwell's defense with their repeated offensive attacks.

Playing with incredible intensity, Lee Sullivan picked up a pair of goals as well as an assist, and gave everyone in the league something to worry about.

Maureen Farron matched Lee's efforts with two goals herself and an assist on another. Cindy Spooner chipped in one goal and two assists, and Julie Bowdoin added another goal and an assist to Cohasset's list.

Although the game was mostly played at the Norwell goalie's feet, fullback Jill Shockman and halfback Maria Cahill were strong defensively for Cohasset and kept goalie Lisa Shumaker idle throughout the entire massacre.

Thursday, the girls traveled to a soggy Duxbury field and tied 1-1. Cohasset was leading the entire contest until a lucky Duxbury forward scored with a mere two minutes remaining in the game. Although the Skippers were devastated by the tie, they were somewhat consoled to see Duxbury ecstatic over tying Cohasset. Usually the opposite of this situation occurs.

Lee Sullilvan scored Cohasset's only goal with assists coming from both Cindy Spooner and Maureen Farron.

The entire team played so well it is hard to single any one player out. The girls played with the poise and confidence of a championship team. However, Kara McDonald played an incredible game on defense shutting down Duxbury's talented wing.

Friday, the Skippers journeyed to Sandwich for the game of the season. As of Friday at 3 p.m., Sandwich and Cohasset were tied for first place. By 5 p.m. the Skippers had pulled ahead of Sandwich in the standings with a 2-0 victory.

Starting off slowly in the first half, the girls poured it on in the second and maintained control over a surprised Sandwich team.

Early in the second half, Maria Cahill rifled one in from the top of the 16-yard circle off a pass from Maureen Farron.

Sandwich came back, however, and started banging at Cohasset's net. The Skippers' defense hung tough, and with little time remaining Maureen Farron took the ball in from the 50 yard line and insured the win with a fantastic unassisted goal.

Colby Mantel had an excellent game at midfield, and made a significant contribution to the victory. Defensively, Jill Shockman made a few great plays which spoiled any of Sandwich's attempts to score.

This week the girls face Middleboro on Wednesday. The Skippers are looking forward to this night game which begins at 7:30 p.m. and hope to see many fans rooting for them. Friday Cohasset plays Abington away. The girls beat Abington the first time around and hope to repeat their performance once again.

Varsity Boys Soccer

The boys made history two weeks ago as they tied Duxbury, 0-0. Cohasset has never tied or beaten Duxbury in boys soccer.

Coach Jon Anderson was pleased with this landmark and believes they could very well have beaten Duxbury.

Strong defense was the key to his team's success, according to Anderson which was led by John Reidy who shut down the Dragon's top scorer.

Offensively, Bobby Shultz came close to capitalizing on a few scoring opportunities, unfortunately the ball would just not drop in the net for him.

Sunday, the boys romped over Sandwich, 4-1. After getting off to a slow start, the Skippers were unable to score in the first half and the teams were tied at 0-0. However, in the second half, according to Anderson, the boys showed a vast improvement and passed their way onto victory.

Bobby Shultz popped in Cohasset's first two goals and got his team going. Rob Leonard and David Caffrey each had a goal apiece as well.

Thursday, the Skippers beat Whitman-Hanson decisively, 4-2. Cohasset's David Caffrey picked up a goal to make the score 1-0 at the half. Whitman-Hanson pulled ahead at the beginning of the second half with two goals.

However, Bob Shultz came back and answered with the next three goals to put Cohasset ahead for good. Incidentally, with these three goals, Bobby Shultz surpassed the old Cohasset soccer record of career goals with an amazing 33 overall.

Anderson cited Chris Kirkendall as having a good game at midfield. Todd Trautwein also turned in an excellent effort on defense. Anderson praised David Caffrey and said this was one of his best offensive games.

Saturday, Cohasset pulled out yet another victory as they beat Hanover 2-0. The boys controlled most of the game according to Anderson.

Chris Kirdendall picked up the first goal, followed by David Shultz.

Goalie Billy McKenna had one of his strongest games in net. Billy was helped out by Kurt Weisonfluh, John Riedy, and Chris Kirkendall who dominated the middlefield.

The boys remain undefeated with an impressive record of 7-0-2. Far ahead of all the other teams in the Small School Division, Cohasset hopes to keep their record unblemished as they take on their two toughest opponents this week. Monday the boys play Scituate, and on Wednesday, they face unbeaten and untied Rockland.

Varsity Girls' Soccer

Monday, the girls were defeated by Abington, 3-0. However, according to Coach Kennan Startzell, the score is very deceptive. Abington led by a mere goal the entire game until they scored twice with five minutes remaining.

Although disappointed with the loss, Startzell feels his team played tough, especially on defense and shook up Abongton.

Friday, the Skippers made history and beat East Bridgewater, 5-3. At the half the girls had a comfortable lead, 4-1, and seemed to have the game wrapped up. However, they decided to make the contest interesting and let two more goals pass by to make the score 4-3. But with two minutes left, Caitlin Staunton came back and insured the victory by dribbling through a couple of defenders and finally slipping the ball behind the goaltender.

Kerri Kirkendall picked up the first goal, assisted by Maureen O'Leary. Maureen then passed to Karin Anglin who popped in Cohasset's second goal. Liz O'Leary had the third goal with an assist from Maureen. Melissa Shea singlehandledly scored the fifth goal followed by Caitlin Staunton.

Startzell also pointed out that Katie Lord did an excellent job this week shutting down both Abington's and East Bridgewater's leading scorers.

This week the girls face the dreaded Duxbury Dragons on Tuesday and play Hanover on Thursday at Milliken Field. In a make-up game on Friday, the girls will try and beat a very weak Scituate team.

Cross Country

The cross country team lost to both Sandwich and Rockland last week in a soggy tri-meet.

Coach Paul Narkiewicz was pleased with his team's efforts and especially those of Maureen Long. Only a seventh grader, Maureen finished fifth overall for the girls.

Other team members who have yet to be mentioned include: Paul Wilson, Kenny Sargent, Bill Walsh, and John Holier.

Friday, the team hopes to be competitive against Abington. This should be a good meet for Cohasset. Wednesday, Oct. 16 the team faces Middleboro in their only remaining home meet.

Narkiewicz has also scheduled a JV meet for Wednesday, Oct. 23 for all the sophomores and younger kids on the team.

Democrats net $5K at fundraising auction

By Claire McDonough

Past political differences were sublimated when area Democrats gathered for a fund-raising auction at the Jewish Center in Hull Saturday.

United States Congressman Gerry Studds assumed the podium to auction James Taylor concert tickets. The Cohasset resident looked slightly startled when Sheriff Peter Flynn, his former opponent in the race for the 10th Congressional District, bid $40.

"A faintly familiar face," the Congressman mused.

The bidding accelerated until Flynn had bid $100.

"I have $100," the guest auctioneer intoned. "Do I have $105? Do I have $105?"

"By the way, is Mrs. Flynn here?"

The Sheriff's wife jumped to her feet, hand raised.

"Thank you, $105," Studds continued. "Do I have $110?"

Amid general laughter, Flynn was awarded the tickets at his original $100.

Flynn himself had earlier served as a guest auctioneer, raising $38 for the last remaining "Sheriff's Bear" in the state. The stuffed animal was purchased by Scituate's Bob Thorndyke (for his baby), and helped to fill the coffers of the Democratic Town Committees in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Other public figures donated time and food, and Marshfield's Bunny Iovinelli will enjoy breakfast with House Speaker George Keverian, Nancy Comperchio, also of Marshfield will have lunch with Senator Jerry D'Amico, Chairman of the Joint Legislative Committee on Education, and Hingham's Eva Marks will join Secretary of Economic Development and Manpower Affairs, Evelyn Murphy at a restaurant of her choice for dinner.

MDC Commissioner Bill Geary served as guest auctioneer for "Coffee for Two with the Governor." tongue in cheek, Geary pointed to a lamp.

"See that lampshade?" he asked. "Michael Dukakis wore that shade at his last wild party. Bring the bidding up to $50 and he'll wear it for the breakfast."

When bidding reached $90, a deadpan Geary swore that the Governor had told him he would lose his job if he didn't bring in at least $100, and promised that for $100 Marshfield's Norma Fenochietti, Director of Scheduling for Dukakis would wear the lampshade.

Evidently, Hull's Dick Levitan found the offer too tempting to resist, and for $100 he purchased what promises to be a fascinating breakfast with the state's chief executive.

Geary also, on the spur of the moment, auctioned four front row seats to the next July 4 Esplanade concert, and once again Nancy Comperchio was the high bidder.

The top bid item was a week on Lake Winnipesaukee, which went for $220, and the second was a weekend on Nantucket, purchased by Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald and his wife Libby.

Non-celebrity auctioneers included Scituate's Mary O'Connor and Marshfield's Jim O'Gara—a fact that evidently confused one attendee.

Confronting Jim in the lobby, she asked, "Are you anyone?"

"I'm Jim O'Gara," he replied.

"Yes," she persisted, "but are you anyone important? Politically?"

When he admitted he was not, she sighed, "then what are you doing on the stage?"

Other bids items included a piece of the Southeast Expressway, purchased by Dodie Klayman for $10, lobsters, days of sailing, an herb basket, many gift certificates, painting, gutter cleaning, various works of art, firewood, days of beauty, dinner by the Catered Affair, legal services, shopping sprees, Celtics tickets, a weekend at the Glades, desserts, hors d'oeuvres, car wash, and a complete horoscope.

When the committee had totaled the receipts the following day, they were delighted to learn that the event had cleared approximately $5,000, to be divided among the six towns, a sum that left event chairman Nancy Comperchio and Coop 6 chairman Sue Phippen smiling through their exhaustion.

Cablesystems promises credit for service loss in storm

American Cablesystems Corp., serving more than 85,000 cable TV subscribers in 25 eastern Massachusetts communities, will give customers credit on their bills for service lost because of damage done by Hurricane Gloria, officials from the company announced.

Senior Vice President David Keefe, and Area Managers John King and Thomas Walsh said today that with a few isolated exceptions, full cable has been restored to all American Cablesystems Corp. subscribers in Masssachusetts.

Those customers who lost cable service during Hurricane Gloria will receive credits on their November cable bills. The credits will be issued on a per diem basis, with those who lost service for one day receiving a credit equal to one-thirtieth (1/30) of their monthly bill. Those who lost service for longer periods will receive appropriate credits.

"We have decided not to wait for any ruling from the state cable commission to issue credits. It seems appropriate to us to issue credits for lost service because of the extraordinary circumstances of the hurricane and the tremendous support and cooperation shown by our subscribers during this difficult time," said King, whose responsibilities include supervision of American systems in Quincy, Milton, Randolph and Dedham.

"People were inconvenienced in our communities because of Gloria and we intend to make it up to them as best we can," said Walsh, who supervises American systems in Scituate, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Norwell, Hanover, Orleans, Brewster, Eastham, Provincetown, Wellfleet, Marion, Wareham and Mattapoisett.

While American also serves cable subscribers in Arlington, Marlboro, Newburyport, Newbury, West Newbury, Rowley and Ipswich, and will issue appropriate credits for any lost service in those towns, King and Walsh said the South Shore systems were hardest hit by Gloria.

On the South Shore, the company used 31 regular maintenance crews and 24 outside contractor crews to replace an estimated 2,100 to 2,400 cable lines from the street to homes as well as repair extensive damage to trunk lines.

King said most service on 550 miles of cable plant in the Quincy area was restored by Sunday while Walsh said that most service on 500 miles of cable plant in the Scituate area was back on line, with a few exceptions, by Wednesday. In each case, cable repairs were made as soon as local electric companies had restored electric power they said.

In some cases, in areas where power was not restored, the cable company used more than 30 portable generators to power cable service to areas not affected by loss of electricity.

"Our technicians and contractors worked around the clock after Gloria passed to restore service as quickly as possible," said King. "They deserve a lot of praise for their hard work," said Walsh of American employees.

American Cablesystems Corp. of Beverly, is an 8-year-old, privately-held cable operator with more than 300,000 subscribers in seven states.

CHS fall sports: Gridders win again after storm

Varsity Football

After a 34-year lapse, the Skippers rekindled an old rivalry with Scituate and came out on top, 14-0. Coach Phil Pisano had a mere three words to describe the game and called it simply, "A great win!"

Pisano believed strongly the win was entirely a team effort and that everybody who wore a uniform was a part of the victory.

Bobby Durkin, who gained 150 yards rushing scored Cohasset's first touchdown on a 20-yard run in the second quarter and then went on to kick the extra point. In the third quarter, Floyd Hardwick ran 45 yards to score Cohasset's second touchdown. Bobby again kicked the extra point, and Floyd had 126 yards rushing for the day. Philip Mahoney blocked excellently the entire game and picked up 25 yards as well.

Pisano feels the key to the victory lay in the tremendous blocking of the offensive line which opened up gaping holes for the backs to slip through. The line consists of Jamie Roy, Jeff Lydon, Jeff Lloyd, Jeff Soltesz, Patrick O'Connor, and Liam Stanford.

Cohasset's defense had its second shutout of the season and showed tremendous improvement. John Hall had his best game ever with 12 tackles and a key interception which took all the fire out of Scituate's offense.

The defensive line, consisting of Bobby Durkin, Liam Stanford, Jeff Lydon, Patrick O'Connor and Dereck Lacks prevented Scituate's offensive line from completing their blocking assignments.

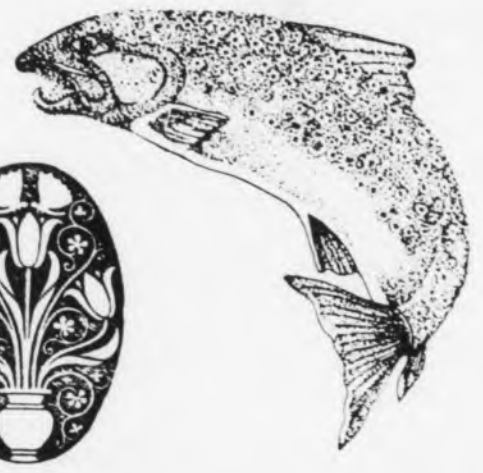
Overall, Pisano was proud of his team and felt they gained a great amount of respect from the league with this victory.

This Saturday the boys travel far to Weston. Weston's record is also 2-1 and should provide some stiff competition for the Skippers.

Construction ban of septic systems extended

The Health Board voted at its Monday night meeting to extend the construction ban of septic systems within the watershed until June 30, 1986.

The moratorium, approved by the health board Oct. 15, 1984, was scheduled to conclude January 1, 1986. The board originally envisioned that a zoning bylaw would be in place by that time and the moratorium would be included in that legislation.



Town meeting did approve a watershed construction moratorium at the special Town Meeting in June. However, the state Attorney General's office rejected the proposed bylaw, saying that the proper statutory requirements were not precisely followed by the town.

Health board member Barbara Kern noted that the Watershed Protection Area Committee is expecting to receive a completed engineering study of the watershed from Camp, Dresser and McKee. After a series of public hearings, a formal delineation of the watershed along with a proposed bylaw will be prepared and presented to town meeting for its review in April.

The moratorium prohibits the construction of a septic system in a proposed development within the watershed area, or within 1000 feet of the town wells at Elms Meadow and Sohier Street.

Herbert Maynard of King Street asked the board what effect this moratorium would have on his plans to eventually construct another home on the two and a half acres he owns in the watershed. After advising him to observe the watershed committee's proceedings, health board member John Burns said the moratorium does not entirely restrict all construction within the area. "But, you will have to follow certain rules," he warned.

The board decided to extend the moratorium until July 1, allowing town meeting to vote on the permanent bylaw and watershed map, and time for the Attorney General's office to review it.

Children's art course

Several children's classes are scheduled to begin in mid-October at the South Shore Art Center.

The Center, at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, offers an extensive selection of courses for young children and teenagers. Three courses are slated to begin the week of October 14 and run for six weeks. Advanced registration is required for these as well as all courses at the Center.

A special Moms and Tots course taught by Serena Brundige begins Monday, October 14, from 10 to 11 a.m. and is designed for mothers and their three and four year olds. This course teaches creative projects that can be repeated at home. Projects include batik dip, magic color circle, plastacene and others.

Gil Coyle's How to Create Workshop for ages seven to eleven begins Wednesday, October 16 from 4 to 5 p.m. The course begins with two short art films designed to stimulate children for the art activities that follow including clay, collage, monoprint, music making and box construction.

A third course, Junior High Workshop taught by Brundige is slated to begin Friday, October 8 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Designed for ages 12 to 14, the course will explore various techniques including 3-dimensional work with clay and painting with acrylics on canvas.

For additional information and registration call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Hunger Seminar Oct. 26

Hunger, both in Massachusetts and around the world, will be subject of an all day seminar at St. Paul's Cathedral in Boston October 26. It is sponsored by the Bread for the World, a citizen's advocacy organization whose members urge Congressmen and Senators to support legislation which will help the "poorest of the poor" to help themselves become more self sufficient.

The Boston seminar has been planned by a committee of BFW members living in the Greater Boston area, including Chester and Eleanor Smith of Cedar Street, who are handling the registration for the event.

Heading the list of speakers for this all-day event is Rev. Arthur Simon, Executive Director of Bread for the World, who will discuss, "Causes of Hunger, Facts and Myths." Later in the program he will be joined in a panel discussion entitled, "Elimination of World Hunger - Some Avenues of Hope," by Albert Cennerazzo, formerly of Catholic Relief services and John Maher of Oxfam-America.

The seminar will also include an opportunity for participants to choose one of the following eight workshops to attend; local hunger; economic growth and hunger; women and hunger; Congress and hunger; famine in Africa; impact of U.S. Government Policies on Hunger in Central America; the Phillipines: The Coming Crisis; and Theological/Biblical bases of justice. Each of these workshops will be led by an outstanding leader of considerable experience in the subject.

In addition to these issue workshops, the seminar will also include the following skills workshops; campus organizing; network/coordinating; publicity and the media; affecting the political process; maintaining hope and humor; organizing and maintaining a group; and developing a hunger ministry in your local church.

The cost of the seminar is $10, including lunch. To register, call Chester or Eleanor Smith, 383-1517.

State park clean

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R), 3rd Plymouth District, has reported that the waste materials have been removed from Wompatuck State Park in Hingham.

"The liquid chemicals consisting of paint thinners, solvents for cleaning equipment and grease, and weed killers will be disposed in a chemical landfill," said Murray. This type of material cannot go into a regular landfill.

Rep. Murray said that there are transformers and insulation materials still to be removed.

"There is a strong suspicion that these transformers, because of their age, contain PCBs and the insulation material contains asbestos. I have been informed that these latter items will be sealed in containers and removed," Murray said.

Annual Cohasset Riding Club class results

The Cohasset Riding Club enjoyed a beautiful sunny day for their ninth annual horse show despite Hurricane Glora's visit two days earlier. Both riders and spactators turned out in large numbers. The highlight of the show was an impromptu "lead line" class, where horse owners led their horses around the ring as several brave volunteer spectators rode. All riders in the class were awarded blue ribbons for their enthusiasm and good sportsmanship.

Jill Hamilton and Derel Lee Twombly, both of Side Hill Stables, each put in outstanding performances during the day, capturing several division championships. Jill and her pony, Moshe, were champions in the Pony Division, the Pleasure Division, and the Equitation Division. Derel Lee captured the top honors in the Maiden Hunter Division and the Maiden Hunter Equitation Division with her pony, Gabriel.

In the 4-H Fitting and Showmanship Division, first place in the senior section, for riders 14-17 years of age, was won by Lori Marshall and her Arabian gelding, Gae Sur. The winner in the junior section for riders 13 years or younger was Jill Hamilton with Moshe. The overall championship in this division went to Lori Marshall for the second consectuive year.

A complete listing of all division standings are as follows:

Walk-Trot Division:

1. Victoria Grady, 2. Abby Barrett, 3. (tie) Brenda McDuff and Meg Cosman, and 4., Luke Liberty.

Maiden Divison:

1. Derel L. Twombly, 2. Julie Nussdorfer, 3. Suzy Baker, and 4., (tie) Stacy Cullinane and Cindy Spooner.

Pony Division:

1. Jill Hamilton, 2. Julie Nussdorfer, 3. Suzy Baker, and 4., Colleen McGovern.

Maiden Equitation:

1. Derel L. Twombley, 2. Julie Nussdorfer, 3. Suzy Baker, and 4., (tie) Cindy Spooner and Kathy Crowley.

Adult Division:

1. Chris McDonald, 2. Derel L. Twombly, 3. (tie) Betty Cisneros and Sue Pipenbrink.

Hunter Divison:

1. Jean Garvey, 2. Jill Hamilton, 3. Julie Nussdorfer, 4. (tie) Lori Marshall and Erin Powell.

Pleasure Division:

1. Jill Hamilton, 2. Julie Nussdorfer, 3. Renee McDuff, 4. (tie) Jen Powers, Suzy Baker and Colleen McGovern.

Equitation Division:

1. Jill Hamilton, 2. Suzy Baker, 3. Erin Powell, 4. (tie) Julie Nussdorfer and Jean Garvey.

The division standings are determined by points accumutated by the riders for placing in certain classes in the show. The competition was tough and all riders earning awards should be congratulated for a job well done.

Cohasset's George Upton aids United Way

Every year around this time, the United Way of Massachusetts Bay accepts a "loan" worth millions—local residents join the United Way as loaned executives helping raise millions of dollars toward the annual campaign.

George B. Upton of Cohasset is one such person who is helping his community through the Loaned Executive (LE) Program, in which he is lending his services full time to the United Way for three months.

Upton, sponsored by a special United Way LE fund, is helping corporate and community leaders design and implement United Way campaigns.

Many of the health and human service agencies benefitting from United Way funds serve Cohasset residents.

At the So. Shore Science Center

Autumn in New England—glorious foliage, migrating birds and creatures preparing for winter! This is an ideal time to visit the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell. Explore 28 acres of old farmland and forest. Meander any of the five trails with self-guiding maps available at the desk. Investigate the natural world through a variety of programs presented by the Center.

Birds and Botany

October is the perfect time to spot shore birds and learn about fall migrants and specialized plants of the sea. Explore the Gurnet barrier with naturalist Barbara Devine and expert birder Bev Litchfield during a fascinating Birds and Botany walk on Wednesday, Oct. 16 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Bring your lunch and binoculars on this delightful four hour tour. Carpool from the Science Center. Pre-paid registration is required (members/$8; non-members/$10). For further information, call 659-2559.

Close Encounters

Have a close encounter with a feathered night stalker! Join naturalist Bill Perkins and expert birder Bev Litchfield for a Nighttime Adventure on Oct. 17 and 24 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The world of darkness, its inhabitants and their ways will be investigated through a night walk, talk and demonstration. Wear comfortable dark clothing. Pre-paid registration is required (members/$14; non-members/$16). For further information, call 659-2559.

Eyes in the Skies

Turn your eyes to the skies. Double stars, distant galaxies and the moon's first quarter phase will be viewed on Friday, Oct. 18. Rolf Egon, president of the South Shore Astronomical Society, will introduce your family to the wonders of the fall skies at the observatory from 8 to 10 p.m. A slide lecture on Halley's Comet and deep sky objects will also be presented. Pre-paid registration is required (members/$3; non-members/$8). For more information, call 659-2559.

Parents and Tots

Led by naturalist Barbara Devine, parents and tots share learning experiences in an exciting program offered both Tuesdays and Fridays from 10 to 11:15 a.m. The wonders of nature will be discovered as children develop sensory awareness and parents learn to help their children understand the world around them. Sign up for three Tuesday sessions (Oct. 15, 22, 29) or three Friday sessions (Oct. 18, 25, Nov. 1).

The fee (members/$20; non-members/ $25) includes parent and one tot. Additional children may be reigstered at $7 for members and $8 for non-members. Papooses free! Pre-paid registration is required. Call the Science Center at 659-2559 for more information.

After School

Space is still available in both the Tuesday and Thursday after school science clubs. Benefit a success for local Democratic committee

The "Gala Auction Party" held Saturday, October 5, to benefit South Shore Democratic Town Committees was a rousing success.

"Everyone had a terrific time," said COOP-6 Chairman Susan Phippen of Scituate. The event, held at the Jewish Community Center in Hull, was organized by COOP-6, an association of Democratic Town Committees from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

"People enjoyed the many unique items and services up for auction, and helped us raise funds for the local Democratic Town Committees," said Phippen. "These funds will help us strengthen the local Democratic party organization in this area," she noted.

The event was highlighted by cameo appearances, as 'celebrity auctioneers', of Congressman Gerry Studds, Senator William Golden, State Representative Frank Hynes, Sheriff Peter Flynn, District Attorney William O'Malley, MDC Commissioner William Geary, and Senator Gerard D'Amico, a candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Also, the event was assisted by contributions from Governor Michael S. Dukakis, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Senator John Kerry, House Speaker George Keverian, State Secretary Michael Connolly, and Economic Affairs Secretary Evelyn Murphy (also a candidate for Lt. Governor).

Over 300 local Democrats attended the events. Organizers of the benefit, while unable to state a final figure yet, expect the party to be a big financial success as well.

"The organizers of the event did a great job," said Phippen. "Local Democrats should thank Auction Party Chairman Nancy Comperchio of Marshfield and the entire organizing committee, and especially our amateur auctioneers, Jim O'Gara and Mary O'Connor, who did such a terrific job."

The next COOP-6 event, according to Phippen, will be a brunch at Hugos Lighthouse in Cohasset, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., Sunday, November 3. The brunch, sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will be $10 a ticket and will feature Senator D'Amico as the speaker.

Tickets for the brunch will be available soon from the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. For information, please call Vice-Chairman John McNabb, Jr. at 383-1818.

That amazing group of magic-makers from Beverly, "Le Grand David and His Spectacular Magic Company," has created an all-new stage show, and the Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are organizing a trip to see it, Saturday, November 16. The show begins at 1:30 p.m. The cost of tickets and the bus is $15 per person.

The magic bus departs from Scituate Town Hall at noon to return by 4:30 p.m. Destination is the newly restored Larcom Theatre in Beverly, the Second Turn-of-the-Century Playhouse to be renovated and filled with magic by the spectacular magic company acclaimed in Time, Smithsonian, Yankee, National Geographic "World" magazines. Their new production "Le Grand David—In Concert" is headed by the same three magicians and features the same troupe as can still be seen at the nearby Cabot Street Cinema Theatre, but the Larcom production offers all-new illusions, curtains, costume and variety entertainment, blended with a veritable concert of magic.

Marco the Magi, Le Grand David, 13-year old Seth the Sensational, and company have been making magic at the Cabot Street Cinema Theatre in Beverly since 1977 and are approaching their 1000th performance there. Together with their huge supporting cast, this trio of tricksters now presents a pair of wonder-making spectacles in the colorful style of singing, dancing, comedy, beautiful costumes, dazzling settings and dozens of mysteries.

In February, 1984, the troupe bought the Larcom Theatre, built in 1912 and named for 19th century Beverly poetess Lucy Larcom. They spent more than a year renovating the stage, the lobby, and the gracious pressed-tin appointments so characteristic of the turn of the century.

To make your reservation, please call Cohasset Recreation at 383-6791. Deadline for reservations is Thursday, October 31.

Plymouth orchestra opens 70th season

By Karen Cubie

Something old and something new were celebrated at the opening concert of the Plymouth Philarmonic Orchestra's 70th "Birthday Season" Saturday, October 5. It was also the world premiere performance of a Robert DiDomenica composition, Dream Journey's.

Dream Journey's performance was made possible by a birthday present received by the orchestra last year. It was the sole orchestra to be granted a new works grant of $20,000 from the Mass. Council of Arts and Humanities New Works Program.

"It was given over a two year funding program split between the '84-'85 and '85-'86 season," said managing director Roberta Johns Otto. "We will receive the grant money this year because that's when the performances are."

The grant was used to engage two composers to write works specifically for the orchestra.

"Since we are a regional orchestra, the works would be appropriated by other regional orchestras interested in performing them," Otto said. "Both works will be published."

The second work, Symphony No. 3 by Daniel Pinkham, will be premiered at the February 8 concert.

"We're very thrilled by it," Otto said. "It makes it very prestigious for us."

The 75 musician orchestra contains representatives from 35 towns. Some musicians travel from as far away as Jamaica Plain, Harwich, or New Bedford.

"They rehearse on a weekly basis," Otto said. "Rehearsals begin four weeks preceding each concert. The group rehearses twice the week of the performance.

Interested musicians can audition at any time.

"We hold auditions in the summer, so by Labor Day we're ready to go," Otto said, "but the music director will hear players throughout the season."

Marilyn Ameduri has played clarinet with the orchestra for ten years.

"A friend of mine was involved, so I came down," Ameduri said. "I was a clarinet major in college, and I taught instrumental music in Brockton for eight years. I don't think anybody practices enough."

Katherine Nissly has also been involved with the orchestra for ten years; however, she doesn't play an instrument.

"I'm involved with the Friends of the Philharmonic," she said. "We raise money to support activities. Usually we have a specific goal. Last year we bought music stands for the orchestra."

This year's season has been bolstered from five to six concerts in honor of the orchestra's 70th season.

The next five performances will be held Nov. 2, Dec. 14, Feb. 8, March 15, and May 3.

"We will also have a symphony ball in January," Otto said, "and a raffle trip at our Irish Pops concert in March."

Single tickets to the performances may be bought for $9, $8, or $7. Children, senior citizens, and students may purchase them for half-price.

Season tickets can be purchased for $40, $30, or $25; however, no more season tickets will be available for this year's performances.

Senior citizens and students are granted a 15 percent discount and a special children's subscription is available for $6 when accompanied by an adult.

Eleven towns asked to join regional council

By Eric Francis

Representatives of 11 South Shore towns met in Hingham last week and heard State Sen. William Golden (D-Weymouth) discuss how their towns would benefit from closer association with 10 other area towns.

Golden and a panel of state officials proposed to combine 11 local towns into a voluntary association called "Metro South" which would effectively represent the South Shore interests at a state and federal level.

The goals of the Metro South Council would be to obtain state funds for balanced growth development, to organize technical assistance programs on a regional basis, to provide a mechanism for the development and implementation of regional programs such as transportation, and to deal with multi-town problems, disputes and projects.

The meeting was held to invite communities to participate and to answer questions from town representatives.

The towns proposed to form Metro South in Golden's proposal, are Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth.

Any town wishing to voluntarily associate itself with Metro South must have its selectmen pass a resolution to that effect before Oct. 16 when a representative from each town should attend the first Metro South meeting.

According to Golden, the real thrust for Metro South is to organize and refine a proposal to the Executive Office for Community Development (EOCD) in order to obtain funds for all 11 communities.

A deadline of Dec. 15 has been set to find if funds of $50,000 are available from the state to institutionalize the Metro South Council. At that same time, an idea of the needed extent of assistance should be complete.

Edward Bates, selectman for the town of Ashland and member of the Metro West group, said "all our boards hold sacrosanct that each town remain autonomous." This was to address the concerns of some town officials that Metro South would usurp local authority.

The president of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), William Sawyer, pointed out that because MAPC serves 101 communitiesit sobviously a benefit to apply for grants as a block of 11, rather than as one individual town.

He also said that today's selectmen must have a better understanding of what is happening at a state and federal level to be effective.

Golden said the main motivation to form Metro South was to retain "quality of life." He said towns on the South Shore have a potential of being one of the largest problem areas around.

"There seems to be a lack of perception on Beacon Hill that the South Shore needs attention," he said, "but if there is a feeling of unity from a region it makes an impact on the Hill."

'Flowers for Algernon' on

Rehearsals have begun for Cohasset High School Drama Workshop's first production of the '85-86 season, "Flowers for Algernon."

This dramatization of Daniel Keyes' widely acclaimed novel will be presented November 8 and 9 in the newly-refurbished Cohasset High School auditorium. Many will be familiar with the work through the film Charly, which won an Oscar for Cliff Robertson in the title role.

Members of the cast by grade are the following:

Twelfth grade—Erin Browne, Cynthia Conklin, Jacqui Fahey, Andrew Glasfeld, Glen Hochkeppel, Jen Hynes, John Kuntz and John Perreira.

Eleventh grade—Karin Anglin, Jenna Emmons, Philip Mahoney, Mary McElroy and Jill Shockman.

Tenth grade—Michelle Casolaro, Lauren Kalita, Peter Kasperowicz, Laura Kuhn, Mary Beth McNamara and Heather St. Onge.

Ninth grade—Felecia Bartow, and Eighth grade—Liz Buckley.

Art applications

It is time for applications for the Cohasset Arts Lottery fall funding period.

The Council has $1,014 for the awards. Our committee urges all artists, art groups and organizations to apply by Monday, October 28. Applications can be picked up at town hall or call Larry Fore, 383-0898 and an application will be mailed. All applications are carefully considered by the committee and those that will benefit our town now and in the future are always approved. Not always the total amount requested but at least a fair share of our few dollars. In the last three years almost $6,000 has been awarded. Not much, but if you look at the paintings and prints restored at the Cohasset Historical Society or have been to Scott Ketchums and Mary Lou Scotniks exhibits, you will know the dollars have been well spent.

All applications must be in by noon Oct. 28 at town hall or at Larry Fore's home, 17 Reservoir Rd. Please do apply or encourage a friend to apply.

Benefit fundraiser at Abbey

Saturday, Oct. 12, Glastonbury Monastery will host an auction for the benefit of the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens at noon at the Abbey, located off Route 228 in Hingham.

For those who are interested, inspection of the rugs will be possible at 9 a.m. The auctioneer, John Rosselli, will have hundreds of oriental rugs ready to auction. There will be a wide selection to satisfy all who attend. Refreshments will be served.

Funds also will be earmarked for residential and community services. Some noteworthy projects include the Rust House in Hingham which is currently in the planning stage and social-recreational services for persons with disabilities.

Cohasset Harbor may be closed for shellfishing

Robert Thorndike, who has single-handedly fought to clean up the pollution problem in the Scituate Glades area, brought his argument to the Board of Health Monday night.

During his discussions with the board members, Health Agent Joseph Godzik revealed that the latest testing conducted by the state may result in a closure of the entire harbor for shellfishing. An official of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) informed Godzik last week that until a source of the pollutant is found in the outer harbor, the state may decide to close the entire area for shellfishing.

Sampling of the harbor is being conducted this week by the state. Based on the results of those tests, the DEQE will decide whether to shutdown the entire shellfishing area.

Thorndike, a Scituate resident, has repeatedly claimed that various sources throughout Cohasset caused the closure of clam flats in his Glades neighborhood. After talking with the health board members this week, Thorndike said he would offer his assistance to help solve the problem.

He brought his case before the Cohasset Sewer Commission two weeks ago. At that meeting, commissioners disagreed that polluted outfall from the sewer treatment plant, along with various other sources, combined to form the pollution found along the Glades shoreline.

The DEQE recently informed the health agent that the Glades clamflats have been permanently closed since 1966.

Health Agent Godzik added that he completes fecal coloform testing at several points throughout the harbor area, and the only persistent problem appears to be a leak in a sewer pipe connection along Border Street. The Border Street culvert has shown varying high degrees of fecal coloform contamination, he said, adding that one recent count was above 1300 per 100 milliliter.Godzik said that when the count rises above 1000 "we become concerned."

A check of the homes along that street revealed no leaks in the connection. But two homes have not responded to Godzik's inspection request.

In the meantime, he explained, the sewer commission may inspect the sewer pipe there with a special television system. The inspection may reveal a leak within the pipe, perhaps caused during last year's blasting work there.

Godzik further explained that fecal coloforms are deposited into James Brook from the sewer treatment plant, however the natural dilution process results in a lower coloform count by the time to extends to the inner harbor.

The health agent said one test revealed high fecal coloform counts across from Kimball's near Stockbridge Street. All but two of the homes are sewered in that area, he said, resulting in "the possibility that the high counts are due to homes not connected to the (sewer) pipe."

In his presentation to the board, Thorndike expressed appreciation of the efforts being made by the members to eliminate a number of pollution sources within Cohasset. He named the Border Street culvert and Koko Island catch basin as two areas being reviewed by the board.

He requested the board continue to locate and eliminate other sources within the town.

"You assume we don't ?" Health Board member Barbara Kern questioned. "You don't take enough action," Thorndike replied, noting that raw sewerage has seeped from the septic system at the Bellarmine house.

"My complaint," he added, "is that there are many, many problems that combine to form a large health problem in the (Cohasset) harbor. It comes from private systems and from tributaries along Rte. 3A. What can be done about the boats that flush their chemical toilets (into the harbor)?"

Board members noted the harbormaster is responsible for prosecuting such action.

Kern replied, "this town has been devised on subsurface septic systems that have always had problems. We are trying to deal with that."

Thorndike responded that he didn't want to initiate legal action to force the town to act."I just want clean water," he told the board members.

In response to his request, Kern assured Thorndike the health agent would begin to test the foam that forms along the inner harbor. Thorndike charged the foam, which flows from the harbor onto the Glades shores, is highly contaminated.

In a heated exchange with the Scituate resident, Bob Booth of Joy Place said the contaminated foam originates in Scituate. He also noted testing of the foam will be inaccurate if it is completed after heavy rains when the foam is at a high level. Thorndike disagreed with Booth's statements.

There you have it. Simple isn't it? Good luck to the Search Committee. I wouldn't want your job. It's thankless to say the least, and don't be surprised at what you still might have to go through with the board. They are not easy to deal with. They forget they are there because the people put them there, they can be removed just as easily, however, I doubt that will happen. Too many people are awake to the situations going on, not only in the fire department, but other department's in the town as well, but they are all too lazy to get out of bed and do something about it.

One last item. To those of you who insistently ask us where we're going to be living after Dec. 31, the answer is, Right Here in Cohasset! My medical problems do not allow me the luxury of moving two or three times in a row.

My husband may be on unemployment and for all we know, welfare in order to survive, but we'll still live here in Cohasset until he finds himself another

Glades testing . . .

14 at the Briggs Harbor flats area were 3.6, also far below the state standard.

In other words, the shellfishing areas within the Glades during the last three testing periods (another low count occurred May 14), have had bacterial counts well below the state allowable standards.

Thorndike had produced evidence for the health and sewer boards that a test conducted this past summer resulted in a coliform count of 7000. But DeSantis has refuted that test, saying the high bacteria was likely the result of the release of untreated sewage from Deer and Nut Islands.

The Glades in Scituate have been closed for shellfishing since 1966. According to the DEQE, a town must initiate administrative procedures to have the clam beds reopened.

Although unaware of what procedures must be enacted, DeSantis said the fact the Cohasset now treats its sewage in a treatment plant, may help the situation. Prior to the closing of the Glades clam beds, Cohasset Harbor was literally "an open sewer" with untreated sewage flowing directly into the water.

"Perhaps Scituate could emphasize the fact that we in Cohasset now treat our sewage. Perhaps that will help the state decide to reopen the closed Glades flats," he said.

Hurricane Gloria Questionnaire

Dear South Shore Neighbor:

I am deeply disturbed about the prolonged Power outages which followed the impact of Hurricane Gloria and which caused tremendous hardship and financial loss to residents throughout the South Shore.

It is important to get the facts and to demand detailed answers from the electricity companies which serve our South Shore communities. Your personal experience is an important part of this investigation.

I urge you to complete the following questionnaire so that I can insure that state officials obtain accurate information concerning the impact of the power outages on you, your family, your community and your business.

I will personally present your responses to the Governor, to the Department of Public Utilities and to the Special Legislative Commission so that your views will be considered in their investigations into the impact of Hurricane Gloria.

Sincerely,

Bill Golden

Recreation Dept. offers creative drama course

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a creative dramatics program to be taught by Mrs. Barbara Elliott.

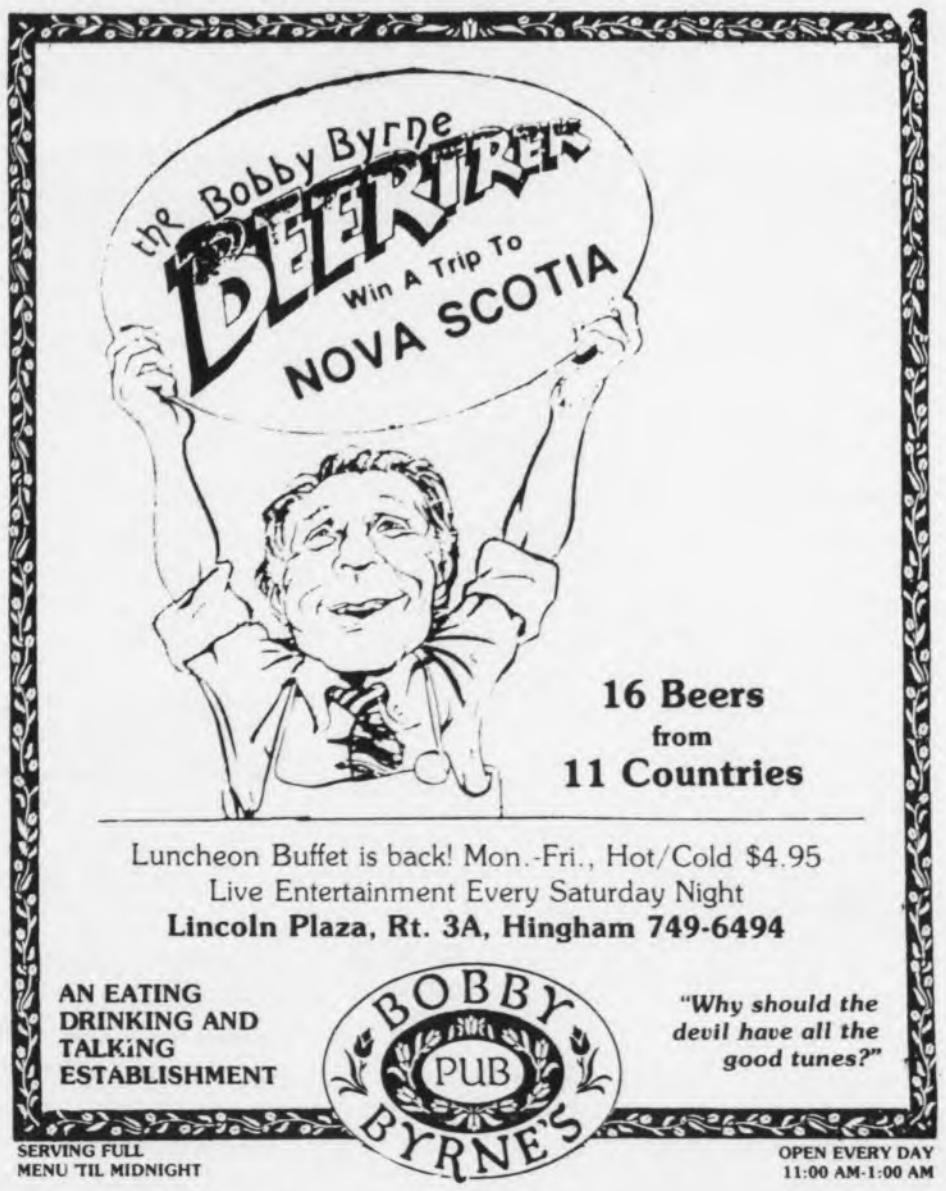
Programs will be held for grades K-3 from 3 to 4 p.m., Tuesday afternoons, and from 4 to 5 p.m., Tuesday afternoons for grades 4, 5 and 6, beginning on Tuesday, Nov. 5, at the Town Hall auditorium. Sessions are six weeks in duration and the fee is $12 per participant.

Mrs. Elliott has directed senior and junior member plays for the Cohasset Dramatic Club and has appeared on various TV and radio guest shows throughout New England. She has been a member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club for 25 years and is a past president of the Club.

The program format will include the teaching of acting through improvision, mime, speech, and movement. The program is ideal for both non-experienced and experienced students.

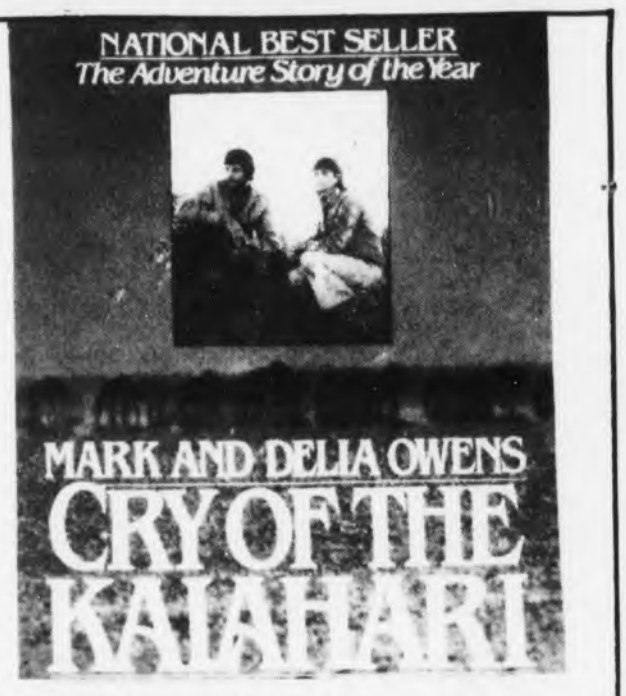
If interested, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, for registration. Classes will be limited in size.

'Private Lives' extended



The Nickerson Theatre will add another performance of Noel Coward's "Private Lives" Sunday, Oct. 13 at 2 p.m. to accommodate audience demand and ticket exchanges.

Performances were cancelled Friday, Sept. 27 at 8:30 p.m. and Saturday, Sept. 28 at 4 p.m. due to Hurricane Gloria and resulting power outage.



Exchanges will be honored for all performances, subject to ticket availability.

"Private Lives" opened the second season of Norwell's professional theatre Friday, Sept. 6 and was originally scheduled to conclude its run on Saturday, Oct 12 before the addition of the Sunday, Oct. 13 performance.

Those wishing to make exchanges should call the Nickerson Theatre at: 871-2400.

It's a Great Time to Refinance a High Interest Mortgage Loan.

If a mortgage loan is two percent or more above prevailing rates, then it may be a good time to refinance, according to Isabel Dole, executive vice president of Northern Mortgage Company.

"For example, monthly payments of a $80,000, fixed-rate, 30 year mortgage charging 15 percent would be $1,011.56. Monthly payments on the same mortgage at 12.5 percent would be $853.51," Dole said.

Savings may ;not be immediate since points and closing costs have to be paid for a new mortgage. Someone who is planning to move soon may not want to refinance, she noted.

Points are assessed to cover the lender's loan-processing and selling costs. Each point is equal to one percent of the amount financed. Closing costs cover a new appraisal of the home, mortgage recording expenses and a new title policy.

Residential mortgage consultants from Northern Mortgage can help determine refinancing savings at the customers' conveneince in the the customers' home or in one of the Northern Mortgage offices which are located in Sandwich, Bolston, at 180 Belmont Street, Brockton, and on route 53 in Norwell.

Cohasset Business news . . .

Charlotte's goal-to provide one-stop personal care

It's been about four months since the relocation, and for Charlotte Hair Etc., that move has meant more spacious accomodations and more specialized customer services.

Charlotte Phinney made the decision to move from 1 Pleasant Street to the former Greenhouse Restaurant on Stagecoach Way for one reason alone. She wanted to provide the most necessary, most unique and most individualized services to her expanding number of clients. Larger facilities allowed her to increase the services while continuing to provide personal attention to each customer.

Along with the expanded space, Charlotte has added staff members to her salon. There are now ten trained employees at Charlotte Hair Etc., 7 Stagecoach Way.

Hair care is only one of the services offered at the new facility in Cohasset Village. Skin care, personal colorizing and all facets of hair coloring and styling are now available in this one-stop beauty salon.

Decorated with a taste of Victorian elegance, the new location is pleasing to the eye. Antique, comfortable furnishings surround the ground-floor salon. Shades of warm-toned velour armchairs and loveseats have replaced the traditional beauty shop motif. Instead of sitting in uncomfortable naugahyde upright chairs, clients here sit atop plush cushioned furniture while their hair is drying under hooded machines.

A Marshfield resident, Charlotte started her career about 17 years ago working for another beauty firm in Cohasset. She began her own salon on Pleasant Street and remained there for the past ten years.

"I became established here and got to know a lot of people in Cohasset. I decided this would be the best place for me to start my own business. I think now we have something a bit different from anywhere else," she said.

A client entering Charlotte Hair Etc. may be treated to a manicure or pedicure. Waxing is also available from trained personnel, Charlotte explained.

Another speciality of this shop is a personal colorizing analysis. This process is completed by another specially-trained staff member who helps the client determine which colors look best for the individual. Recommendations of colors which enhance the client's features and skin tone are made during the analysis.

Joanne Rinehart of Marshfield is the shop's certified color analyist. She has a long background in color training in Redkin and other lines of cosmetics.

Charlotte explained, "A client may call us and ask for a special colorizing analysis. Joanne would help the person decide what colors bring out the best in that person. The client would leave with certain suggestions regarding cosmetics, and swatches of cloths that they both decided best suit the individual."

Another feature of Charlotte Hair Etc. which has enhanced Charlotte's goal to provide one-stop service is a specially-manufactured line of cosmetics. The product is called - Charlotte's.

This personalized namebrand includes a full line of cosmetics and skin care products. Rainbow shades of nail polish and lip stick as well as make-up are included in this service which began three years ago. Since that time, Charlotte said, they have expanded and will continue to add more varieties of colors and products.

"The cosmetics have been very successful," Charlotte commented. "We will soon be adding more colors of eyeshadows, mascara, lipstick and nail polish."

Individuals may also request a special and personal "Day of Beauty" at the salon. Often these days are offered prior to and during the holidays, according to the shop's owner.

These 'days' are offered at different times through the year and often contain various services provided at the shop such as a color analysis, lash and eyebrow tinting and perhaps a hair perm.

Each of the salon's ten staff people are extensively trained in their craft, Charlotte added. They all regularly attend major national style shows including a semi-annual New York International Style Show. "Some people are always left behind though," Charlotte noted, "so we can keep the salon open."

Charlotte's Hair Etc. is open six days a week and three nights. Persons desiring an evening appoint-

FROM THE GARDEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

October generates the pumpkin frost and Harvest Moon

You can almost taste the frost on the still night air when the temperature dips into the 40's. Then you know your tomatoes are not going to get any riper and your flower beds will gradually fade away. Even now, in these first weeks in October, the foliage is turning a fiery color, the Virginia creepers a brilliant red and the cranberry vines a dark russet. Beautiful though this may be, it's a sad time of year, as another summer passes. However, perhaps it's just as well the air is becoming a little more brisk, for much remains to be done in the garden. Try to remove all late-season weeds from the garden. Give the lawn a final mowing. Do not permit leaves to accumulate, for if they become wet and freeze, they will smother your lawn. All evergreens should be thoroughly watered if nature doesn't do it. Any tender shrubs or newly planted trees should be staked or have wind screens for winter protection.

The Milky Way and Harvest Moon will be riding high in the sky at night while we await Indian Summer and the first frost. There are only 195 growing days here on the South Shore and so I asked some of our garden enthusiasts how they plan to indulge their hobby now that outdoor gardening will become "in." For Sara Freeman of the Norwell Garden Club, restoring their old farmhouse has been time-consuming, so her free time of late has gone toward the club's fall sale held last week at Kathleen Hillman's Main St. home, her English perennial gardens providing a perfect setting for their annual money-making effort . . . Alicia Warner is repeating her winter garden of kale planted outside of their breakfast room window. The handsome purple plants of the cabbage family bloomed until February last year, providing a splash of color in their backyard . . . Phyllis Burns visits her favorite nooks and crannies for sumac plumes, golden rod, sea lavendar and Queen Anne's lace and has her "weeds" drying in the attic, the makings of wreaths and dried arrangements for holiday gifts and decorations. Last year's wreaths made of hydrangea blossoms were easy to make and very effective . . . Mrs. Edmund Fitzmaurice of the Hingham Garden Club interrupted her planting of 150 springtime bulbs long enough to collect "a mountain of weeds," to arrange in what her children said must be the world's largest dried flower arrangement. Gracing their harvest table now is a huge basket filled with grasses and weeds that she joked took five or six extra trips before the container was finally filled . . . Kathy Wolff's hobby of flower arranging has developed into a little business she calls "Floral Creations" and with her lecture series for the North River Arts, she has just about enough leisure time and space at home to fill a growing number of requests for her naturalistic arrangements.

Roosting in the tall oaks surrounding our home are those noisy birds of irridescent plumage known as grackles. Some days their flock must surely run to a thousand and their squeaky "wheelbarrow chorus" fills the air. In colonial days they were known as "Maize Thieves" and in some Cape Cod towns a young man was forbidden by law to marry until he had turned into the town clerk a certain quota of grackle heads. Farmers hate to see them assemble in the autumn, for they ruin apples and pear trees by pecking at the fruit, as well as damaging corn and grains.

Like the California swallows who leave for Capistrano on the 23rd, flying wedges of Canada Geese and their familiar "onk" sounds are forerunners of our winter. When the last great flight passes southward, we know that frost has closed the northern waters and that winter is at hand. Daylight Savings Time ends the 27th at 2 a.m. and the days are ever shorter. Other bits of information gleaned from the Old Farmer's Almanac explain that one cord of firewood equals: 12 dining room tables, 7 1/2 million toothpicks, 1,200 editions of the National Geographic, or 30 Boston rocking chairs.

Hiring a launch at King's Landing on the North River was a fun way to spend an autumn day, going upriver to the old shipyard at Brick Kiln Lane. With Danny Lincoln, part-owner of the marina, at the helm, our little group spotted hawks circling over the marshes and came home with grasses and cat-o-nine-tails plucked from the shores. All were reminded by Danny that when picking sea lavendar for dried arrangements, the roots should be left intact. Crossing under the Union St. bridge we passed the site of the North River Boat Club opened June 18, 1894, destined to be abandoned just six months later when flooded by high tides. Members danced by the light of Japanese lanterns on the platform ringing the boathouse, canoed, rowed and drifted with the tides on rubber tire tubes.

October is the time to take cuttings of your geraniums, before Jack Frost destroys these colorful blooms. Non-flowering branches will root most readily and a convenient length for cuttings is about four inches. With a clean, sharp knife, cut through the stem just below a leaf node. Pull off all leaves from lower half and trim any that are too large on the top part. Roll them lightly in newspaper, leaving ends open for ventilation. Lay this in a cool place and let stems dry. This may take anywhere from three days to three weeks, depending upon temperature, humidity and air flow. When cuttings are "cured," set to root in a sandy, humusy loam that drains easily, or root in a glass of water on a sunny window. As each one shows roots, it is then potted up. Come March, what is a more welcome sight than a mass of bright geraniums blooming on a windowsill?

(Fake) Crab Fondue and Cranberry Delight Pie

Our readers often ask how one dreams up a weekly column such as this. One source is through much reading — as you will see in today's paragraph about lobsters. Another very important fountain of information comes from our readers — contributions such as today's from Johnna Albi and, as most of our friends and relations know by now, I'm very apt to ask our hostess for a recipe for a dish she sets before me. So it was that Ethel Rich and Eleanor Cuff shared this tasty dish served at a Community League luncheon called

(FAKE) CRAB FONDUE

1 lb. crabmeat or seafood salad
8 slices bread, diced with crusts removed
1/2 c. mayonnaise
1 c. each chopped celery, green pepper, medium onion
1/2 tsp. salt
3 c. milk
4 eggs, slightly beaten
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1/2 c. grated cheddar cheese

Put 1/2 of diced bread in bottom of large, well-greased baking dish. Mix crab with next five ingredients. Spread over bread. Place second half of diced bread over this layer. Mix eggs and milk and pour over ingredients. Refrigerate overnight. Bake in 325° oven for 15 min. Remove from oven and spoon soup over casserole. Sprinkle with cheese. Return to oven and bake one hour. Serves eight.

NOTE: Fake crab we refer to is the seafood salad sold at deli counters, made of pollock cut into squares and colored to look like the real thing — cheaper and awfully good.

Johnna Albi of Marshfield is a busy young wife and mother who has been studying natural foods cooking, microbiotics and holistic health practices with a series of well-known teachers in the field of natural gourmet cooking. Now she is offering cooking classes with freshly prepared vegetarian foods, helping with menu planning for specific diets, catering and private consultations. Her brochure includes classes to be offered in December in "Healthy Holiday Treats," featuring the following pie. For want of space, I'll just use the recipe for the crust now, with the filling to follow next week for

CRANBERRY DELIGHT PIE

1/2 c. almonds or filberts
1/2 c. rolled oats
1 c. whole wheat pastry flour
Pinch sea salt
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
2 T. 100% pure maple syrup
4 T. water
3 T. unrefined sunflower oil or unsalted butter.

With processor fitted with steel blade, process nuts to mince. Add rolled oats and process until somewhat broken up. Add flour, sea salt, cinnamon and process just to mix. If using butter, cut into dry ingredients. Measure liquid ingredients together in a cup. With processor on, pour in liquid ingredients, running only until dough clumps together. Press into 9" pie plate and bake at 350 for 20 min., or until nicely browned. Cool. NOTE: If using butter in crust, more water may be required.

I guess when your column runs in the New York Times, one has access to a wide variety of sources. Marion Burros (De Gustibus) wrote of a doctor who suggested hypnotizing lobsters as a humane way of steaming them while alive. The letter from a Dr. Daniel S.J.Choy of NYC was accompanied by a picture of the poor lobster standing on its head and said his method was also certain to produce a better-tasting lobster. Dr. Choy's method is this: "Turn the lobster upside down, yoga fashion, bend its tail inward, then stroke the dorsal surface of the tail. After eight to 10 strokes, legs stop waving about, the lobster quiets down in the most uncanny way and one can leave it alone until the water comes to a boil. Lobsters prepared in this manner can be dropped into the pot without struggling. The resultant improvement in taste is amazing. My personal theory is that the adrenaline secreted by a frightened, struggling lobster changes the taste. The tranquilized lobster is devoid of adrenaline." I don't know if the technique works or not, but the mere thought of stroking a lobster may be more humane for the lobster, but stroking it would certainly get my blood pressure shooting skyward. If our readers ever try it, please let us know the results.

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Anatomy of the AIDS scare

The hubris of the left is laid bare by the AIDS scare scare. When I say "AID " I refer of course to the dread disease called "Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome." To say it has been in the news is to say that Rome no longer rules Gaul. When I say "AIDS scare," I refer to the fear of the spread of the disease, and of the spread of the fear, among the public.

But when I say "AIDS scare scare," I mean something else. I refer to the panic button being pushed by the left and by segments of the media when they suggest that the American people are in an irrational, irresponsible uproar over AIDS.

Such a view fits nicely with both the historic prejudices and elitist tendencies of the left in America. According to their historic mythology, the American People (a pretty unreliable, hostile crowd they reckon) have a tendency toward Red Scares, McCarthyism, racial bigotry and other abhorrences only properly diagnosed and excised by the political physicians of the left intelligentsia. Thus, a population of homophobic rednecks working itself up to any hysterical frenzy by AIDS dovetails with the left's view of the world. The left, you see, loves injustice. They collect it.

In my view, the behavior of the left in castigating those who are worried about AIDS is the only bona fide irrational "scare" going on around the AIDS issue. Sure, alarmed mothers in Queens, New York, don't come across very well on national television when they protest the presence of AIDS patients in public schools. Sure, there have been cruel and tragic cases of AIDS patients being shunned by friends, employers, etc. And sure, real attitudes about homosexuality are being exposed in this crisis whereas they have been under an unnatural act of constraint in our recent past.

But the fact remains if we simply test the fear of AIDS against reality, we all have a great deal to be concerned about. Consider the indisputable facts.

. . .As far as we know this is an always fatal disease.

. . .There is no cure.

. . .There is no effective treatment.

. . .There is no medical prophylaxis (e.g. a vaccine).

. . .We don't know for certain and in all cases how the disease is spread.

There is plenty of evidence that it is spread by sexual contact, but our leaders do not know or will not say precisely what forms of sexual contact. It is suggested to homosexuals that they refrain from "exchanging bodily fluids," which can mean a lot of things and therefore means nothing. One suspects that our leaders have made an educated guess as to precisely which forms of sexual activity will spread the disease, and are unwilling to be quite specific on the subject not out of deference to the sensibilities of polite society, but out of deference to the sensibilities of the gay community enforced by the threat of being called homophobic. But the vagueness of our political and medical leaders on this subject can only undermine public confidence in their assurances of our safety. The public safety demands graphic details in this instance.

. . .There is a growing but still partial knowledge as to which bodily fluids the AIDS virus exists in. Blood and tears but not sweat. Sperm but not usually saliva (they think). Excretions and some secretions but not other secretions. And so it goes. We knew more last year than we knew five years ago, and we know more this year than last year; but we don't yet have a single definitive prophylactic or therapeutic answer.

. . .Perhaps most alarming, we know that the incubative AIDS victim is more contagious than the manifest victim, yet we do not know the length of incubation. From studies of American soldiers and others, we are just beginning to understand how many people there are who have been exposed to the disease and may be spreading it.

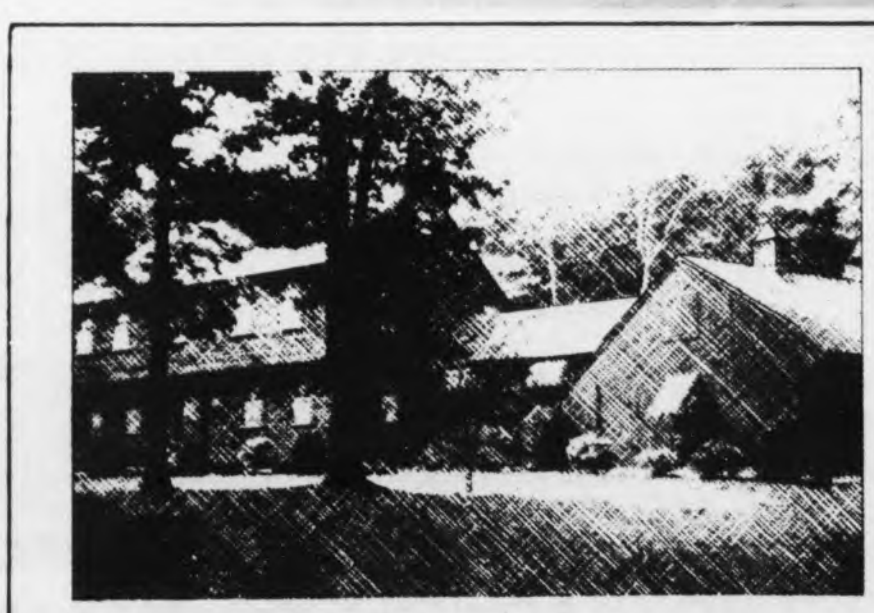
I believe it is obvious that if this were any other disease great or small, our "big government" types would be coming down on us with prophylactic plans, as they did in the case of the swine flu threat of 1974-75. Of course the swine flu threat was nothing compared to AIDS, yet our leaders tiptoe around the AIDS problem and suggest that public concern is a naughty and unacceptable form of panic. Their less than candid behavior reveals their panic, not ours; and it promotes our panic, it does not alleviate it.

I would be ever so pleased if the Boston Globe would quit giving me chances to cite its dissembling, but its recent coverage of AIDS is a perfect example of what I mean by the "hubris of the left."

Recently Secretary of Human Services Philip Johnston called a press conference in which he announced a new state policy that, with certain precautions and exceptions, would allow AIDS patients to attend public school. This was an event of national significance, for it was the first instance in the country of a state's permitting AIDS victims to go to school. It led the local television news that evening, and it got its due in news media across the country.

But insofar as I am aware, Johnston's nationally important press conference was not reported as a news event by the Globe. I searched for it fruitlessly the next day both in the early editions that comes before dawn in Marshfield and in the later edition I get in Boston. The Globe did report that day that a Swansea boy with AIDS had entered school according to state-approved guidelines, but it did not report Johnston's press conference, and it did not report the obvious major story that the boy's school enrollment came about because of a new and nationally significant decision by the Dukakis Administration. (I fear that Johnston, the rather courageous point man at the press conference has been used; it is he who will be finished if the policy results in contagion.) The Globe's first intimation of the new policy that I could find was a mention-in-passing in an approving editorial several days later.

I think I know what happened here. The Globe decided to do a little news-managing so that ignorant mere citizens like you and I wouldn't "overreact." They think they know what is best for us, and like all forms of big brother they are mighty dangerous when they are in a panic. As I suggested at the top, it is they the left elite, not you and I, who are in a panic with their "AIDS scare scare." They are scared of our being scared; therefore, they aren't telling the truth about a critical public health problem.



Homosexuals, of course, are in a panic, too; but their panic is one which I find highly understandable. They are in a panic because they are presently the primary victims of the disease and because the disease threatens their always precarious position in society. But there is no excuse for the panic of the left in this matter. Their panic only holds a candle to their prejudice and their hypocrisy. What they are saying and thinking about the general public applies to them more than it does to the public!

Speaking at Marshfield High School in 1983, Congressman Studds was asked by an unfriendly face if AIDS were not but the wrath of God. In response Studds thundered: "I cannot imagine any devout person asking anything more about a deadly disease than 'What is the cure?' " Studds was right, and his mighty answer holds when applied to the prevention of the spread of this disease.

If we merely ask ourselves: "What is the cure for this disease and what do we have to do to stop its spread?" and let the answers take us where they may, without regard to sexual preference or other extraneous factors, we will be on the right course and may hope to get through this tragic period. As to the left, when AIDS is laid low they will take their essentially snobbish opinions on an ambulance chase after other issues. Good riddance.

☐ Since the fad has even hit that government-owned bistro in Washington, D.C., our bylaws should be more specific about topless waitresses. Our protective bylaws should also take note of massage parlors before it is too late. Our bylaw doesn't even mention the word parlor.

☐ I wouldn't want to take a Rohrshach test, either.

☐ The toughest job teenagers have today is learning good manners from adults without seeing any.

☐ Have you heard about the man who read recent reports claiming smoking was bad for health? He immediately gave up reading.

☐ It's time we heard from the sage: Confucius say, when one has clear conscience, it often means he has bad memory.

☐ Jim Farley seldom forgot a name or a face. One story that circulated about his faculty: He met a politician who bet him he couldn't remember him as a member of a reception committee in a little Pennsylvania town which Farley had visited three years previously. Farley remembered the name of the politican and the first and last names of the other 14 men on the committee. He also recalled the name of the hotel, exactly what was on the menu, the names of the speakers at the luncheon and the topics they discussed.

☐ Why don't medical and dental patients charge doctors and dentists who keep them waiting? Our hourly rate is $50. What's yours?

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

What's in a name?

"I need a title for my column," I announced to my family. "It's being moved from the editorial page to a supplement."

My daughter Breida looked startled. "How come? I always thought there was a certain prestige to being on the editorial page. Are you being demoted?"

"Hardly," I told her. "I'll be joining such luminaries as Darrell Berger, Dave Mittell and Joan Pinkham. To say nothing of Gary Trudeau's Doonesbury.'

"Yeah," my son Skip nodded. "and Jack Conway and the 'help wanted' ads, and ads for 50 gallon used steel drums."

"It will also, " I sniffed, "be read in more towns. Like all 10 of the Mariner newspapers, that's all. It's almost like being syndicated."

Patrick looked impressed. "Great, Ma," he approved. "Does this mean you get paid 10 times?"

"I said almost like being syndicated," I stressed. "Are you guys going to help me think of a name or not?"

"Well," Breida mused, "everyone knows you call Daddy your Dragon. If your readers are going to find your column, you should have the word 'Dragon' in the title."

Skip nodded. "How about "Dragon Breath?"

Larry shook his head. "I vote for "Thousands of Nuns and Orphans in Peril."

We all looked at him. "That doesn't have anything at all to do with anything Ma writes about," Breida protested.

"No," Larry agreed, "but you'll have to admit it's a grabber."

"Ma mostly writes about us," Pat interjected. "How about "At Wits End."

"Erma Bombeck already used that," I told him.

He smiled happily. "See? I told you it was good."

"I think it should be 'Read the Lies a Mother Writes About Her Children Each and Every Week,' " Skip suggested.

"How about asking the people on your van?" Breida asked. "They have opinions about everything else."

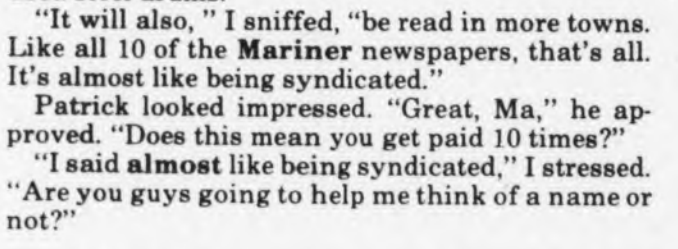
"I already did ask them," I admitted. "See what you think.

"Terry suggested 'Dragon Droppings.' Joel and Shirley and Ann batted around 'All's Claire' and 'Claire-Voyant' and 'Claire's Draggin' , but Shirley really wanted me to name the column 'Pengi' after her dog. Joel preferred 'Samuel' for the author of 'The Old Oaken Bucket,' but Bernie thought 'The Old Jokin' Bucket' would be better.

"There were also votes for 'From the Dragon's Lair,' 'Claire's Draggin,' 'Crab Corner,' 'Cliffside Achers,' 'Corn from Cobb Lane' and Claire d'Loon.' "

Various people suggested "Native Corn," but we weren't sure whose definition of "native" we'd have to use.

Ann also suggested "Laugh Lines" and "Baloney on Wry," and we all thought they were pretty good.



They really would like us to hold a contest to "Name that Column," but I told them I didn't think the Mariner would go for another meal at Angelo's.

"Those are good," Breida mused, "but I think I like 'Mother Tells All.' "

"Never!" Skip gasped. "If you use that, all my friends will read it every week and then they'll rank me.

"Call it "Guide to Improved Study Habits and the Maintenance of Your Paramesium" and no one will ever read it.

"That's a hard suggestion to pass up, Skip," I admitted, "but it's my column and I get to make the final choice. Since over the years you've told me that living here is like being in prison, and since a man's home is supposed to be his castle, I think I'll call it "The Dragon's Dungeon."

Charlotte's goal-to provide one-stop personal care

ment should call the salon. The salon will remain open on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays for those requesting evening appointments.

Charlotte of Charlotte's Hair Salon.

The shop's hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, and on Wednesday and Thursdays the salon will remain open until 8 p.m. and until 7 p.m. on Fridays.

According to Charlotte, the staff is trained in hair styling for all ages. Men are welcome, as well as children. And although it is not the most requested styling, several local teens have had their punk looks sculptured by the experts at Charlotte Hair Etc.

Although Charlotte's clients are typically from Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate, with the new expanded services and elegant surroundings, she expects a greater clientele from throughout the South Shore.

"My hope is to continue to add more services and products for our customers. Hopefully, very soon, this will be the most unique personal care salon in the area," she said.

Guilfoyle project director

Dr. Richard A. Guilfoyle, formerly of Cohasset, has been selected (from a number of candidates) by the University of California Medical Center at San Francisco to recruit and supervise a staff of bio-scientists to undertake a special advanced cancer research program.

The initial objective of Dr. Guilfoyle's group will be to isolate the specific components within the biochemistry of the human immune system which appear to prevent the growth of cancerous cells. Guilfoyle and his staff hope to be able to focus on an entirely new approach to cancer prevention based on the science Immunology. The project is being funded by the Howard Hughes Institute.

Dr. Giuilfoyle first became interested in biology and genetics during his senior year (1971) at Cohasset High School. He received both his undergraduate BS degree and his PhD. in Molecular Biology from the University of Pennsylvania. In 1984, he completed a three-year post doctoral program at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratories in Long Island, N.Y., the research center which is considered by specialists to be the major forerunner in cancer research during the last decade.

For the past year, Dr. Guilfoyle has been attending lectures and conducting private study in the field of Immunology at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif. After his new research project is fully operational and is progressing on schedule, he plans to join the faculty at UCSF.

Dr. Guilfoyle is the son of Richard and Barbara Guilfoyle of Nichols Road.

New friends program

The New Friends of the Social Service League of Cohasset believe that people of all ages benefit from new friends and social experiences. The New Friends program introduces lonely or handicapped or socially-isolated people to new friends.

The primary purpose is to offer friendships through regular one-on-one visits. Visting time is an opportunity for conversation - listening and sharing.

Sometimes New Friends participants offer assistance with shopping or errands, share a meal at a restaurant or take part in some other recreational activity - whatever feels mutually satisfying and apropriate to the visitor and the person being visited.

Volunteers are given a brief orientation before making their first call. On-going training is provided.

Age or financial means are not factors in determining who will receive a visitor.

The Social Service League welcomes you as a new friend. The program is seeking visitors, as well as those people who would like to have a visitor.

For further information, please contact the Social Service League office at 383-0771.

Dispute over Cedar Ledge

Original buyers locked out of condo purchase

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

Cedar Ledge is a troubled development, built under the burden of soaring interest rates, climbing construction costs, and lawsuits. While developer John Lanata realizes the project has attracted nothing but heartache for some potential owners, he defends himself against attacks that he "took the money and ran."

The owner of Lanata Development Group, Lanata has been a resident of Cohasset since 1971. Since that time, he has constructed at least 20 homes in Cohasset - homes that passed planning board approval and have been occupied since their construction.

Lanata and his family currently reside in one of the nine completed units within Cedar Ledge. Located on Cedar Street, nestled in the forested area adjacent to the landfill, this project was the second cluster development approved by the planning board after the enactment of the zoning bylaw amendment.

"It's not the fault of the town. And it's not the fault of the bank. Obviously, it's my fault. The bottom line is that Cedar Ledge was a project that went bad. It was a bad business deal for me, and I am paying for it. This is a very emotional time for me and my family," developer John Lanata states.

Currently, five persons have filed suit against Lanata and the Hingham Institute for Savings, saying the developer failed to complete nine condominium units at the agreed price. To avoid foreclosure and construction shut-down, the Hingham bank took back the deed to the incomplete project and is attempting to sell the units for about $50,000 more than the original price. The five persons, represented by Atty. Richard Henderson of Cohasset, signed purchase and sales agreements with the original developer and are now asking the court to honor the documents.

"It's an emotional issue for these people, and also for myself. These people are in an unfortunate situation, and I have also lost $100's of thousands of dollars. Frankly, I sank my money from other projects into this and I lost it all," he says.

The only parcel of good news he can deliver to the potential purchasers is that the deposit money they gave Lanata, some in excess of $10,000 per unit, has been held in escrow throughout the construction.

"Thank God, they are able to get their money back in total," he says. "The bank has held that money in escrow, and I think all of them have their money back now. It was never one of those situations where the developer took the money and ran."

The property which he purchased in 1979 was approved for an 18-unit cluster development by the planning board in 1982. As Lanata explains, "it was one of those projects that went bad from the start. Once the project was approved by the board, an abutter filed suit against me to halt construction. While that delayed the development, construction costs soared as did the interest rates. All these

Unofficial word: SEMASS is no go

The town has yet to receive official notification, but there is an indication Cohasset will not be accepted into SEMASS, the trash-to-energy solid waste disposal system.

According to Selectman Diane Sullivan, who talked with SEMASS President George Mallin at last Monday's meeting of the Norfolk County Selectmen's Association, there is no room for Cohasset in the regional program. Sullivan said she was informed that all 32 original communities have affirmed their involvement in SEMASS, thus eliminating any chance Cohasset had to participate in the regional solid waste disposal program.

Sullivan told selectmen this week that the price offered to Cohasset was $19 without the tipping fee and transportation.

There are plans currently being reviewed to expand the future Rochester headquarters, according to Mallin. Therefore, Sullivan said, there may be an additional chance for Cohasset to participate, although Mallin explained the cost would be increased to about $37.50 per ton.

Sullivan emphasized that Cohasset's elimination from the program was not caused by "dragging our feet." After checking with members of the local Disposal Area Study Committee, she was confident they had taken the proper time to review all alternatives before they recommended SEMASS almost two years ago.

Selectmen said the disposal committee should draft a letter to SEMASS, indicating the town's willingness to participate in the future expanded program.

Police will not accept salary offer

The Cohasset Police Association and the Board of Selectmen are scheduled to meet Oct. 24 in a meeting to discuss the current contract negotiation impasse.

The Joint Management Labor Committee (JMLC) for municipal police and fire departments has requested the meeting. The contract discussion will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall.

Police union representatives met last Tuesday night with the Personnel Board to discuss selectmen's latest contract offer. At that time, the board reiterated the selectmen's decision to implement a five percent increase retroactive to July 1, 1984, and a five percent salary increase July 1, 1985.

In a letter to the police association two weeks ago, selectmen's attorney Philip Boyle said the pay raise will be implemented Oct. 21. Saying that the selectmen and the personnel board "feel that all meaningful efforts to resolve the contract dispute have been exhausted," Atty. Boyle added that the special Town Meeting will be asked to vote on the five percent pay increase.

"We were informed by the personnel board that selectmen had decided on the five percent raise. We had thought there was a chance to continue negotiations, but there wasn't. They wouldn't negotiate any further with us," Association President David Pomarico said.

In the meantime, the JLMC has forwarded a letter to selectmen requiring their attendance at the Oct. 24 meeting. If selectmen do not attend the session, subpoenas may be issued to the town officials.

JMLC official James P. Costello informed selectmen and the police association that "an impasse (in negotiations) does not exist at the present time." He added that further progress could be made through further negotiations or mediation sessions.

Pomarico added that if selectmen decide to implement the five percent wage increase Oct. 21, the union's attorney, Joseph McParland will file an unfair labor practice suit against the board of selectmen.

"All we are asking for is something fair and equitable," Officer Pomarico said. "The bottom line is that we are not being paid what we are worth."

Cohasset's week . . .

Federal deficit study

Thursday, October 24, the Cohasset League of Women Voters invites the public to attend a meeting on "Financing the Federal Budget." They will study some of the key issues relating to the Federal Deficit problem.

The meeting will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on Main Street at 9:15 a.m. Coffee will be served. Babysitting is available, but please RSVP to Jeannie Schneider at 383-6140.

Early release day

Thursday, October 24 will be an early release day for the Cohasset Elementary Schools only. There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sesions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

School	Buses Depart
Deer Hill School	12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served.

This early release day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee in order to allow the staff members at the elementary schools to take part in a health education program.

Food training session

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health passed new regulations for food establishments effective Oct. 1, 1985.

Training sessions for Boards of Health and food industry personnel were held throughout the Commonwealth by the Division of Food and Drugs. Mrs. Barbara Kern, chairwoman, Dr. John Burns, health board member, and Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent of the Cohasset Board of Health, recently attended these day-long sessions. All felt they were most worthwhile with the Division of Food and Drugs giving an excellent presentation.

The Cohasset Board of Health will be offering training sessions for management and supervisory personnel of Cohasset food establishements on Monday, Oct. 21 from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home and on Wednesday, Oct. 30 from 2 to 4 p.m. at Hugo's Lighthouse.

School pump problem

Since the problem of the high school sewer pump station came to light again during the recent power outage, town officials have decided that a back-up emergency system may be necessary.

Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis will request an appropriation to purchase a multi-use portable generator. After Hurricane Gloria, it was discovered the high school pump station was not connected to the school's emergency power system. The generator's water coolant discharged into sewer along with raw, untreated sewage.

DeSantis informed the school department and health agent that the commission is investgating the purchase of a portable generator which could be used to operate the pumping station's water coolant discharge system. It could also be used by other town departments in an emergency, he said.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik has expressed his concern that if the high school is to be designated an emergency evacuation center, the pump station must be connected to an emergency power system. He requested that procedure be completed immediately.

Wiring Inspector Stephen Wigmore, in a letter to selectmen, said that in order to connect the pumping station to the school's emergency power system, the existing service equipment must be replaced. The cost of replacing the electrical service conduit at the pump station will be about $450, he said.

Wheelwright Park complaint

The state Secretary of Public Safety has advised selectmen to take "any remedial action your honorable board may find warranted" regarding a complaint issued by a Red Gate Lane resident about harrassment she's received from horse owners in Wheelwright Park.

Jacqueline Wirth wrote to the state official, outlining the incidents she claimed occurred since selectmen allowed equestrian activities in the park in 1978.

"The safety aspect is becoming worse each year," Mrs. Worth wrote. "I certainly will fight to be able to use the park without getting hurt by horses, for myself and also for my grandson."

Meeting on permit process

The Conservation Commission will host a meeting in which town board members will discuss the town maps, building permit process, and other items of mutual interest.

The meeting, which will be attended by members of the Board of Health, Sewer Commission, Drainage Committee, Zoning Board of Appeals, Planning Board, and the Building Inspector, will be held Oct. 29 at 8 p.m. at the Bates Building.

No site plan needed

Town Counsel Richard Henderson informed the planning board that no site plan of the South Shore Art Center's proposed relocation is necessary.

Citing a precedent-setting legal case, Henderson said that because the art center is a non-profit, educational corporation, it is exempt from the site plan review process.

The town counsel stated that a site plan review would not be required for the educational use of a condominium unit. Therefore, he said, it would be unwise for the planning board to request the art center to fulfill the requirements relative to a site plan review.

Town meeting warrant

The Board of Selectmen have set Monday, Dec. 9 at 7:30 p.m. as the date for the Special Town Meeting.

Any proposed articles for the town meeting warrant must be submitted to selectmen by the close of business, Oct. 18.

Private limousine license

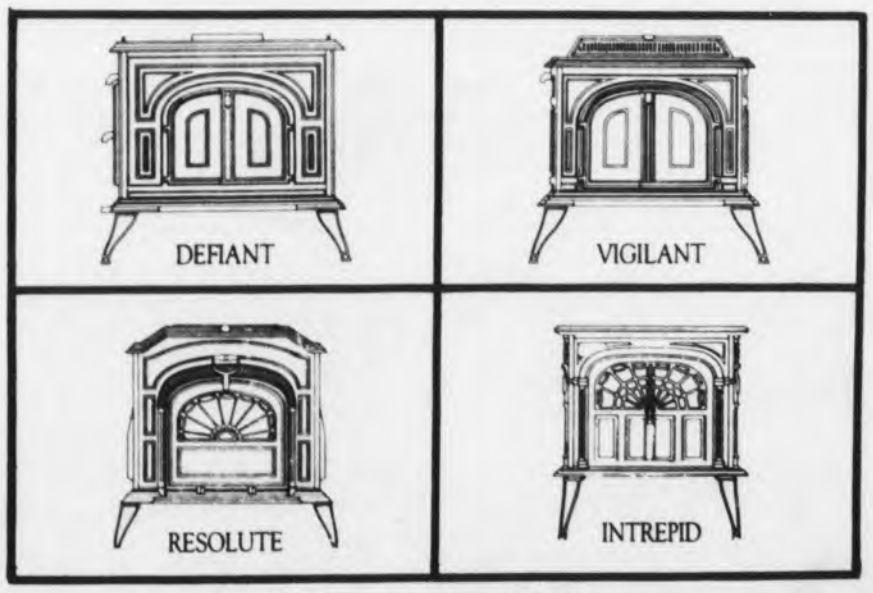
At their meeting Tuesday night, selectmen granted a license for the operation of a private limousine service to Richard Stilphen of With Richard's, Inc.

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle remained opposed to "another limousine service" established in town, the remainder of the board agreed with the issuance of the license.

The restaurant owner will now be able to provide limousine service for personal use to private functions. In addition, the restaurant will use the vehicle to transport customers to and from his facility, With Richard's. That service did not require a license from the Board of Selectmen.

The board accepted a bid of $6000 from Lot W. Bates to complete structural work to the Bates Building on Elm Street.

Selectmen granted approval to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce to hold the second annual White Christmas in Cohasset on the Common.



The day's events will be similar to last year's celebration, with Santa landing by helicoptor at Cushing Plaza. There will be a Santa Land created across the Common near the Veteran's Memorial. There will also be a petting zoo on the Common. More lights will be added to the trees surrounding the duck pond, and there will be carol singing around the pond as the lights are switched on. The event will conclude at 4 p.m., before it becomes dark, a Chamber spokesperson told selectmen.

In other action, selectmen decided to join the newly-established MetroSouth regional grant-planning agency. Selectman Diane Sullivan said her interpretation of the agency is that it would seek information from each community concerning the issues of importance to that town. Grant money which would assist to develop and study these issues would be applied for by the regional agency, she said.

A proposal supported by Sen. William Golden, MetroSouth "would give us more clout in obtaining grant money as a region, rather than applying for the money as a single town," Sullivan said.

The board voted unanimously to join the organization.

Town searches for best insurance rates

Despite the bad news predictions, Muncipal Insurance Advisory Committee Chairman Tom Sheppard declared this week the town would never pay insurance premium rates estimated to increase by as much as $400,000 next year.

Citing a "worse case scenario," Sheppard warned selectmen this week that costs estimates were being presented in preparation of an anticipated jump in premium rates. He repeatedly emphasized the town's unwillingness to pay exorbitant rate hikes, and said the committee will be searching for the best coverage at the best prices.

These rate hikes are affecting all municipalities, he stated, and are not a reflection of the town's insurance standing. The town, Sheppard said, has a "very good record" of liability claims.

A bit of good news announced this week to selectmen was that Commercial Union, the town's largest insurer, has stated an intent to renew its contracts. "This is a very positive step," he told selectmen Tuesday night. "As of last week when we met with the advisory committee, we didn't know this. We're very pleased about this."

Sheppard stated that the town would avoid paying exorbitant rate hikes for premiums by increasing the town's deductible payments. He remained confident that most of the town's insurance coverage can be placed, although there will likely be rate hikes.

In his presentation to selectmen, Sheppard and insurance committee member Galt Grant reviewed the projected costs of the insurance contracts. Payments of the premiums will need to be paid sometime between Christmas and New Years, he added.

The town currently pays about $131,000 in premiums. If that "worse case" comes true, the town will be asked to pay an extra $400,000 in premiums for 1986.

Workmen's Compensation, currently covered by Commercial Union, costs about $41,179. Sheppard said that the same company will likely provide the same coverage at a slightly higher cost.

Another category, Comprehensive General Liability, which protects the town against third-party damages, "could possibly go as high as $160,000" next year as compared to $14,000 this year for a half-million dollars in coverage.

The higher rate, he warned, would also include restrictions in the coverage. Sheppard said alternatives such as larger deductibles, will have to be studied in that category.

Commercial Union, the contracter in this category, may ultimately determine a "vastly lower" increase is necessary, he said. Vehicle liability, another category carried by Commercial Union, is an area where the town has had an excellent track record. The same insurer will provide coverage, at an approximate 50 percent increase to $30,000, he predicted.

Umbrella excess insurance protects the town in the event of a catastrophe, such as a bus accident. The town currently carries $10 million in coverage which costs about $10,000. It is Sheppard's projections that the premium rate will increase next year to $200,000.

"I am also very concerned that the $10 million coverage will not be available at all," he said this week. He suggested the town may have to decide to reduce its total liability amount, although that could result in a feeling of insecurity. Sheppard said the town will likely spend at least $100,000 in the two umbrella excess contracts.

The town's property insurance from the Fireman's Fund, is projected to increase from $30,000 to $90,000 next year. The deductible could be enlarged to diminish the expected rate increase.

The public official's liability insurance is provided by an insurance company which has "lost its best rating" according to Sheppard. It is the committee's feeling, he added, that the town will be unable to secure this type of insurance in the future. The same criteria applies to the police professional liability insurance.

Sheppard also warned selectmen that insurance underwriters are unwilling to devulge premium prices until a couple of weeks before the contract expires. He expects the new prices will be officially declared by Dec. 22. That means selectmen and the insurance committee will have to decide what actions to take between then and the expiration date of Jan. 1. Premiums must then be paid by Jan. 30.

Town Accountant Don Andrew said the town could pay the premiums from free cash, as long as the money was appropriated at the April Town Meeting. "But if we repeat this next year," he warned, "we're talking about Prop. 2 1/2 all over again."

Opinions on the letter

Bob Davenport, who attended Tuesday night's selectmen's meeting, asked selectmen if a letter written to the Mariner last week by the fire chief's wife would influence their decision concerning selection of a new chief.

In the letter, Mrs. Joyce Dooley charged that selectmen have pre-determined their choice of a new fire chief. She stated there was a secretly-held meeting last September in which the next chief was named.

"Does any member feel that the letter might influence their decision or their thinking?" he asked.

"Not one iota," Mary Jane McArthur quickly answered. "Not in any way," Selectmen Chairman Frank England added.

"It (the fire chief search committee) is a super committee doing a super job," Diane Sullivan said. "There was certainly no secret meeting."

Selectman Cliff Mitman admitted he hadn't read the letter.

When asked by Davenport how he felt, Selectman Rocco Laugelle responded by saying, "I don't have to answer to anybody."

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

THE PREGNANT PAUSE

Pregnancy is surely a blessed event. However, it generally causes some mechanical derangement of the spine. The pregnant woman's increased bulk shifts her center of gravity forward. To maintain equilibrium, the lumbar spine (lower back) must carry heavier than normal stresses. As a result, pain or actual damage can occur. A pregnant woman also releases a hormone called relaxin which loosens the pelvic ligament as an aid to delivery. Unfortunately, this hormonal release also alters the mechanics of the lower joints of the spine. It is no wonder, then, that even a previously healthy spine can suffer symptoms that outlast pregnancy. Consider this after delivery. Back problems are not needed to complicate one's life after giving birth. Take time for regular chiropractic examinations.

Chiropractic exams address such back ailments. For the pain and discomfort resulting from any number of causes that produce stress on your spinal column, we suggest you call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12, for an appointment. By utilizing chiropractic techniques the point of interference is addressed, the misalignment corrected and thus relief achieved. In this fashion the normal healing process of Mother Nature can resume and natural healing processes take place within the entire body. We provide chiropractic care for the entire family. Sewer Dept. will install shed on Elm Street

By Steven M. Ulfelder
Mariner Correspondent

The Cohasset Sewer Commission will be allowed to build a shed behind the Sewer Commission building at 43 Elm Street.

In a Tuesday night meeting Charles DeSantis, Sewer Commission chairman, appeared before the Conservation Committee to present a Request for Determination of Applicability for the shed.

The shed, which will be seven feet by eight by ten feet, will house both a 55-gallon drum of chlorine solution and a pump for the solution. The shed will be "within a few feet" of the main building, according to DeSantis.

The pump, in use for several months now, must be covered to keep it and the chlorine solution from freezing. The shed, pre-fabricated of pine, will cost about $900.

DeSantis said seepage of the chlorine is not a problem. According to the Sewer Commission chairman, "Ten feet down from this tank you've got no chlorine."

Conservation Commission Chairman Merrill Brown reported that Cohasset resident Cliff Jones, who lives on Rte. 3A near Mendell Road, has been putting fill on his property without the commission's permission

"We've had a complaint," said Brown. "He's filling right around the river. He says the water comes off 3A, goes down his driveway and causes a mosquito-breeding area."

Brown added, "To me it's wetlands and it's not a place he should be filling."

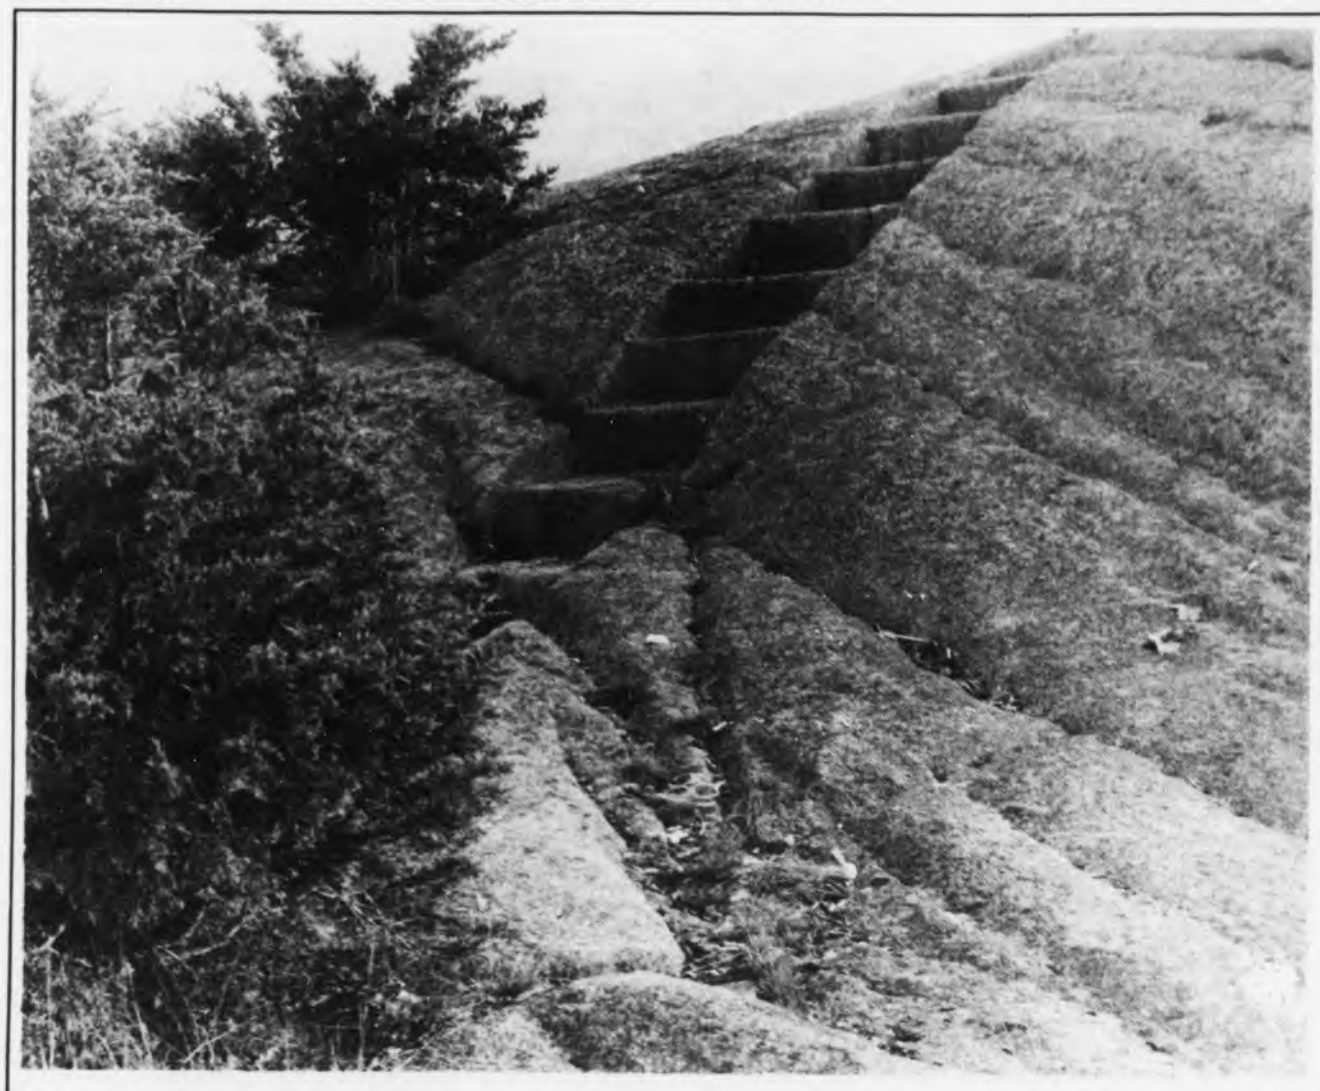
The Conservation Commission resolved to write Jones a letter instructing him to stop filling and come before the commission with a Notice of Intent.

Theresa L. Williams, represented by her son Frank, sought "to grade existing piles of gravel, retsore (a) drainage ditch, maintain existing roads, and construct a fence" on about 17 acres of land south of Rte. 3A and west of Crocker Lane.

The commission told the Williamses they must file a Notice of Intent regarding the grading and filling they desire.

The Williamses want to build a fence because, according to Mrs. Williams, "Instead of going to the town dump and paying, trucks come on our property at night and dump (brush and refuse) on our land."

Frank Williams attested that he had found tar dumped in a drainage ditch on the property adjoining Rte. 3A. This has kept water from draining properly.



M. James and Sandra Theriault requested a Determination of Applicability for a family room to be added to their house at 42 Stockbridge Street.

"We have three children getting larger and they need the space," said Mr. Theriault.

The Theriaults must have a plan drawn up showing elevations as well as where the drainage will go. Once this is done, they will appear again before the Conservation Commission.

The commission will meet with the Planning Board on Oct. 29.

Beginning next month, the Conservation Commission will meet on the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Walls of First Parish uncover strange secret

Representatives of the First Parish congregation met with selectmen this week to discuss the ambitious renovation project begun at the historic Meeting House.

Rev. Edward Atkinson also explained the unusual discovery of a musket ball in the opened walls of the Meeting House.

Two weeks ago, workers found the heavy iron ball dropped atop one of the sills within the building. It must have been secured within the walls of the Meeting House when it was built in 1747, according to Rev. Atkinson.

"The sheathing of the structure is original and the musket ball was inside the walls, so I assume it is as old as the building," he said this week. "We have no carbon date, but it's at least two hundred years old."

In answer to selectmens' questions as to how the musket ammunition found its place within the Meeting House walls, Rev. Atkinson answered, "maybe it was fired at an unpopular minister."

The First Parish congregation is beginning a major fundraising effort to restore the Meeting House and its famed picturesque steeple. The restoration work will cost about $106,000.

Max Pounder, a congregation member who is working as the project architect, said the south wall has been stripped of all siding. The structure has been stiffened with plywood and some sills have been replaced. Clapboards will be replaced in a duplicate pattern, Pounder explained. Work will be completed on the interior truss and the steeple where two rotten columns on the west side will be replaced. The entire building is being stripped and will be re-painted with a water-based paint.

In his report to selectmen, Pounder praised the efforts of the fire department in helping workers at the site to secure the staging around the steeple, and blocking off the grounds below the structure before Hurricane Gloria hit the area.

Resigned town employee will receive vacation benefits

Selectmen superceded an order of the executive secretary and decided that a resigned town employee should be entitled to two weeks vacation at the FY 86 salary scale.

Although Acting Town Accountant Kay Conte resigned effective June 28, selectmen decided this week in a public hearing, that she should be paid at the higher rate which took effect July 1. Saying she was not counseled adequately on the method in which to resign, selectmen determined the time of her resignation should be moved to July 1, and thus she would be paid at the increased rate.

Conte requested the hearing before selectmen after she appealed her final paycheck to Town Accountant Don Andrew and the personnel board. Andrew and personnel board members agreed the correct procedure was to give her the two weeks earned vacation time at the FY 85 rate.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson affirmed that was the proper method to follow, Andrew told selectmen Tuesday night.

Although Selectman Diane Sullivan and Chairman Frank England refused to oppose Andrew's actions and go against the ruling of town counsel, the majority agreed the employee resigned under stress without considering the consequences of an early resignation date.

Noting that the board previously allowed another town employee, former Accountant William Signorelli, to change the effective date of his resignation, the three selectmen agreed that Conte should be given a final paycheck reflecting the increased salary rate.

After listening to Andrew's account of the employee's termination, Selectman Cliff Mitman stated Conte "is being nailed. It seems to me that if someone is leaving, she should be counseled. The issue is not that he (Andrew) acted incorrectly. He did the right thing. But this is the way we treat our employees. They are not being counseled in areas we need to."

Town Accountant Andrew said he was not opposed to giving Conte the increased salary rate, if selectmen so decided. "I would have rather given her the money in the first place," he said, "than going through all this." Andrew stated he had checked with the state Bureau of Accounts before he issued the check this summer, and they reaffirmed his decision.

Conte explained to selectmen Tuesday night that she repeatedly gave her verbal resignation to Andrew throughout the month of June. She submitted her final written notice of resignation June 28, which was effective that day. "If an employe resigns under stress, do they have a right to be counseled on how to resign?" she asked selectmen.

Selectman Sullivan answered that Conte was a valuable employee of the town, but she disagreed with the timing of the resignation. "I feel very badly you were under stress, but Don was also under a lot of pressure at that time. I do not see how Don can pay you the extra amount after July 1 and do his job as town accountant," she said.

When selectmen voted 3-2 to change the effective date of Conte's resignation to July 1, Sullivan noted, "we are going to allow an employee who resigned without notice to submit a new resignation so she can be put at a higher rate?"

Selectmen Mitman, Mary Jane McArthur and Rocco Laugelle agreed the town accountant should "take whatever steps are necessary to make the resignation legal at the FY 86 rate."

Lanata says Cedar Ledge 'bad business'

delays had an effect on the workers who figured they were working on something that wasn't going well. They had a sense things weren't right and their work slowed down.

"We were plagued with slow sales for the first few units. We ended up selling them for bargain prices. It eventually took four years to sell the 18 units. It's all a shame," Lanata says. "It really is a very beautiful development."

Wilfred H. Creighton, president of the Hingham Institute for Savings, explained the bank avoided a foreclosure on the property by taking back the deed to the property. He said this is a procedure used frequently to eliminate foreclosure and possible incompletion of a housing project.

The bank, which is named along with Lanata in the lawsuit filed by the five potential purchasers, is planning to sell the nearly-complete units for "somewhere between $185,000 to $200,000," according to Creighton. The price originally offered the residents by Lanata was about $140,000 for the single-family detached units.

Creighton explains that construction is being completed on the nine vacant units and is expected to conclude soon.

The incomplete units at Cedar Ledge may be constructed within 90 days. (Carol McCann photo)

"We are making progress," he states. "Hopefully the nine units will be completed within 90 days."

The bank has made an attempt, Creighton says, to offer the units at the higher rate to the original purchasers. They will have the first option to buy the properties. The bank is attempting to offer some interest rate concessions in lieu of the higher purchase price, he says.

Atty. Richard Laine, representing the Hingham bank, says the purchase and sales agreements were signed by the potential purchasers and Lanata more than a year ago. "Most, if not all the agreements have since expired," he explains.

The bank, he says, as the new property title holder, may offer the units at a new price since it was not a party to the original sales contract.

The purchasers' deposit money, he adds, is not an issue. It has been held in escrow and has been offered back to the purchasers through Atty. Henderson.

"To my knowledge, none of the families has taken back their deposit money," he says.

The dispute between the purchasers, the developer and the bank, has now reached Norfolk County Superior Court. The five families, represented by Atty. Henderson, asked the court last week to enforce the original purchase price and require the bank to honor their original purchase and sale agreements.

The Law and You

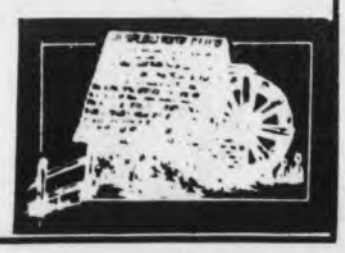
by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

THE "STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS"

The "statute of limitations" pertains particularly to the procedural part of the law which controls the time within which a lawsuit may be started. When an individual breaches a contract or commits a tort, his liability may be the basis for legal action. The legislatures of the various states require the person affected to bring his lawsuit seeking relief within a reasonable time. This makes the defendant aware of the claim against him. It enables him to assemble available facts and witnesses to construct an adequate defense. These periods of limitation have been determined by the type of situation involved.

Law is a complicated field that is best left to a professional. In today's world it is even more important to know and understand your legal rights. After all, they exist to protect you. If you have legal questions, need advice or representation, don't hesitate to consult with an attorney. Very often, the most important action you can take when faced with a problem is to consult an attorney. LAW OFFICE OF RICHARD PRICE, SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P.C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660. We are available daily by appt.

HINT:



Suits must be brought within the specified by state law. Otherwise, the right of recovery will be lost forever.

Community Center programs . . .

Homecoming dance

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a Junior High Homecoming Dance, for grades seven and eight, Saturday, Oct. 26 from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

The dance will be held at the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are $3 per person.

Music will be provided by the DJ from Last Dance, Greg Tutty.

Halloween Fair

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a Halloween Fair for children "On the Common," Sunday, Oct. 27 from 1 to 3 p.m.

Decorated pumpkins should be left at the Center by noon, Oct. 27, for judging.

The children will meet in costume in front of the Center at 1 p.m. for the traditional parade around the Common.

This will be followed by the Halloween Fair with balloons, face painting, white elephant table, photos, bobbing for apples, cupcake decorating, a penny candy store, and an animal exhibit from the N.E. Wildlife Center.

In the event of rain, all activities will take place in the Community Center.

Adult costume party

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor the second annual Halloween Costume Party for adults.

The party will take place Friday, Nov. 1 from 8 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at the American Legion Post at Cohasset Harbor. Tickets are available for $5 per person.

Music will provided by DJ Jay Fiori.

This will be your one chance to be someone else or something else for a night. Or, you can come as you are.

around town

Guess who celebrated a BIG birthday last week? And it wasn't the one with the makeup. Sgt. Barrow accepted the fun in good humor—we think! (Paula Brackett)

☐ Received a call from Charlotte Leland last week, who was most distressed . . . seems she put her favorite cane on top of her car and then drove off with it there a while later. She knows it was lost between Margin Court and Cedar St., and would love to have it back (it's the only one that seems to fit her perfectly). So, if you find a cane with an alligator head, please give her a call at 383-0509.

☐ The food table committee of the Historical Society is a happy crew! Their table was very successful at the Yard Sale, and they wish to thank all of "the good people who donated both time and food."

☐ How about that John Hall last week . . . his defensive prowess against Scituate earned him honorable mention in the Boston Herald, Player of the week in the Boston Globe, and Defensive play of the week in the Patriot Ledger! That's a feat that hasn't been accomplished in a long time (if ever) in Cohasset, and it took the end of the long line of Halls to accomplish that!!

☐ Bragging about CHS athletes cannot stop now . . . hope that everyone watched the Bruins game last Sunday, when they played the Montreal Canadiens . . .did you see number forty for the Canadiens? None other than our own Dom Campedelli, who had everyone in the South Shore watching him . . . now they can tune in to the Canadiens game to see him begin what we're sure will be a wonderful career. Good luck to you, Dom.

☐ Congratulations to John H. Dean, who was appointed vice president, sales and marketing, of the Stone Company. The Stone Cmpany is a planning, engineering and building firm in Wayland, and Mr. Dean has been a sales engineer for Stone for five years.

☐ Must take time out to wish a huge, giant, big wish for a great gal . . . A Happy Birthday (BIG) to Lauraine Hoy, real happy day to you (on a real big birthday.)

☐ It's with pleasure that we report that rehearsals for the High School play are underway! The Drama workshop is going to present "Flowers for Algernon" and they always work real hard to give a very professional performance. Every grade is represented, and the performances are slated for Nov. 8 and 9. Set aside one of those dates right now, you won't want to miss it.

☐ And, speaking of dates to remember, you know I can't let you forget the Booster Club Dance, to be held this Friday (Oct. 18) at the Hingham Sons of Italy Hall from 8 p.m. to midnight. At $15 per couple (with complimentary hors'doeuvres and chowder), it's the buy of the month! Go, and support the group that supports your kids and their sports teams. Call Janet Figueiredo (383-1432) or any member of the Cohasset Booster Club for tickets.

☐ We all want to wish Floyd Hardwick a speedy recovery and hope that the injury that he suffered last Saturday mends rapidly!

☐ Downtown will certainly have a new look with the Art Center moving and the Bicycle shop building up . . . can't wait to see the finished products.

☐ One good thing about the PSO calendar being delayed is that everyone will realize how much they rely on it now that they don't have it! When it comes to your home, now you will appreciate it (and donate accordingly, right?).

☐ During the next Bruins games, watch for the mini-one-on-one to begin. Some of our local hockey stars are going to be on, and it should be a great treat to watch. Hard to believe that they could be future NHL stars, too, or is it! After Campedelli's success story, we know that talent will out!

☐ Good luck to Mike Mahoney as he begins his new assignment with the Army. Understand he has a large group waving him goodbye.

☐ Next week is the final session of Chemically Free (Weds., Oct. 23 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Stephen's Hall) and is for both parents and children. This final session is to increase the levels of communication and understanding between parents and their children on the use of alcohol and marijuana.

☐ That's the news for this week. Keep us informed with your news, everyone likes to read about the latest!

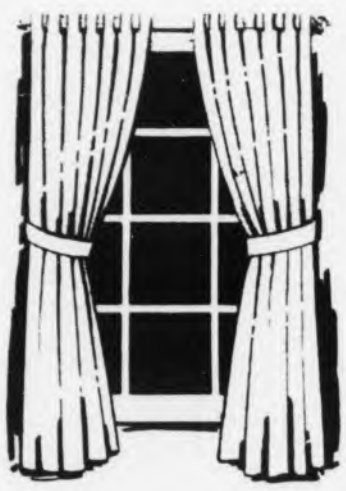
Be 17 to 25 lbs. thinner for Thanksgiving



I kept gaining and losing the same 20 pounds. Then I said, this time it's going to be different.

I tried every pill, every gimmick to lose weight. Only to feel miserable when I gained it all back. Finally I said no, never again—this time I'm going to Diet Center. I lost the weight, without hunger. And I'm keeping it off.
My only regret? Not going sooner!

Where are the parents?

There's an interesting program about to conclude in Cohasset. The name is "Chemically Free," and it is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset.

This is their effort to deal with issues important to the youth of this community. Most frequently associated with numerous programs and services for the elderly, the League decided the kids of Cohasset at last deserved their attention.

With help from some professionals, the League established a three-part program to help kids and their parents deal with perhaps the most serious issue facing our children today - the use of drugs. Kids today are not under the same pressures as past generations. Adolescence is not simply a period of rebellion now. It is a time of increased social pressure which demands heightened levels of maturity.

Where teens of years past marched against the injustice of segregation, or demonstrated their defiance of the Vietnam War, today's youth is continually lured into an unknown world of drugs - an unexplored path of chemical use.

We as parents have no reference to fall back upon. These are new and dangerous chemicals unheard of in our youthful years, but are now available when and wherever there are vulnerable kids.

Part of the problem surely is that we as parents do not know how to deal with drug use. We had our alcohol, some experimented with marijuana. But we do not know the why's, the how's, and the ways to help our kids avoid the catastrophe of drug use.

When the Social Service League decided to establish the program, they received immediate affirmative responses from private and public health professionals. Mike Gill, director of health education in Cohasset, was unsure of how successful it would be, but was more than willing to give it his best shot.

It has been very successful, at least on one level. About 100 "very enthusiastic" students attended the first session where they spoke openly, without fear of reprisal, about their fears and ideas on drugs.

What is curious is the response on the other level. The second night of the three-part program was held just for parents. Here, they would be allowed to talk with the health professionals, and ask questions in confidence.

Only 68 of a potential 200 parents attended that session. Why? We must only conclude that the kids of this town are more seriously seeking answers to their questions and fears than their parents.

Perhaps their parents already know too much. They realize they don't want to know the truth - that we must be aware, be scared, and react to the fact our children are using drugs.

We must not continue to turn the other way. Drugs are available to the children of Cohasset. And our children are attempting to deal with that precarious situation.

While they are studying the issue, asking questions, making decisions, where are the parents?

We must not hide from the truth. We must be prepared to confront it.

High school students and their parents are invited to attend the final session of the program Oct. 23. We owe it to our children to be more aware, to help guide them toward the best direction -to be chemically free.

NEWS ITEM—Despite continuing strong support, the mandatory seat-belt law passed earlier in separate versions by House and Senate is sent back to a joint House-Senate conference committee for re-draft to include a non-binding referendum on the question for the 1986 ballot. The House action follows Senate approval without the referendum question.

"...Then at the very last second . . . BAM! . . . too late I realized I was for the seat-belt law and that non-binding referendum thing. . . ."

Judy's glow is tragically dimmed

To the Editor:

Tragedy is non-discriminating. It can strike without warning any time, anywhere, or anybody.

It struck Hingham Mariner editor, Judy Gilman, last June as she drove down Main Street. Traveling at 30 miles per hour, she hit a tree, suffered horrible multiple injuries, and some brain damage.

After considerable time in a coma and in intensive care, she is currently making "steady" and apparently sure, progress at the "Greenery" rehabilitation hospital in Brighton.

However, compared to the Judy that was ever-present around Hingham as Mariner editor and previously as Hingham Mirror editor, the effects of the accident have been devastating.

Recovery will be a long, painful haul — at least eight months at the Greenery, afterwards is still a question — the extent of recovery is uncertain.

To those who know Judy, there is little need to remind them of the vivacious, caring and intelligent person.

To those who may recognize the name but not know her, rest assured that as editor of one of our local papers, she whole-heartedly devoted her considerable professional talents to bringing you the news of the town each week, both good and l ad.

She vigilantly monitored the actions and words of town officials on your behalf, and did not shy away from unpopular editorial positions, when she felt your rights may be threatened.

Her favorite kind of story was one that highlighted the efforts and achievements of children, and those not in the public eye.

Judy glowed with good humor and enthusiasm. Her glow has dimmed. Hopefully, that glow will, in the future, sparkle just as brightly as before.

An evening to benefit the Judy Gilman Fund has been arranged for Oct. 26 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. at the Vogue in Nantasket Beach.

Continuous music will be presented by the Pete Collins Dixieland Band, D.J. Jake Manning and the South Shore Drive Band.

A good time is guaranteed, and for some who celebrated graduations, weddings, birthdays, etc., at "The Surf," as the Vogue was known, or spent a great time at "Uncle Sam's," as it was more recently known, it could be an evening of enjoyable nostalgia.

Tickets for the event are available at various locations around the area at a requested donation of $15 per person.

Tickets can be purchased at the Marshfield and the Hingham Mariner offices, the Hingham Community Center and Greg Hall Associates, North Street, or through fundraising committee members, Hilary McCarthy, Larry Stein, Tom Wallace, Nick Kokinos, Don Thompson, Charlene Vandini and Moira McCarthy-Stanford.

Tickets are also available at Poopsie's in Pembroke, Osborne's in Duxbury and Noble's Camera Shop in Hingham Square.

Won't you buy a ticket, come to the party, enjoy yourself and help rekindle that glow that has been tragically dimmed?

Thank you,
Hilary M. McCarthy

A few thoughts on mooring rules

(This letter was sent to the Board of Selectmen from Jospeh McElroy of Windy Hill Road. Ed. note).

As regards Cohasset Harbor Mooring Police:

-During the Spring of 1985, you announced June 1, 1985, as the deadline for reaffirming positions on the mooring list. After the fact, you extended the date to June 20, 1985. Please advise me of the firm deadline for 1986. Be advised that I will take legal action if the publicized date is extended.

-Also, please advise me:

-- How many of the 354 permanent moorings were physically unoccupied during the 1985 boating season (June 1 - Sept. 30) by their designated permanent users? Are their mooring privileges being terminated?

-- What is the policy for assignment of temporary moorings?

--Is the use of stern lines a practical approach to increasing the number of moorings?

Letters

--What percentage of the 354 moorings are for Cohasset residents and can this percentage be increased?

-Also, please consider:

--That April 1, as in some other towns, is a more realistic cut-off date for reaffirming positions on the mooring list. April 1 will permit the Town to sort-out disputes before the boating season and will allow time for the unfortunate (those who won't have moorings) to make other arrangements.

--That current policy which permits individuals to retain their position on the waiting list, despite turning-down a mooring offer, is unfair. Just as in most elderly housing, turn-down of an offer should

It's been a year of change for Winter Garden

It was last year when Warren Hoban and his son Jim purchased the Cohasset Winter Garden. Since that time, some physical changes have been made to the rink and programs have been expanded.

It has been, according to Jim, "a very successful and profitable year" for the Rte. 3A indoor rink.

Since he purchased the business, Hoban and his family moved from Marshfield to Cohasset. A native of Hyde Park, he had lived in Scituate for many years.

For the past year Hoban has spent nearly every day, all day, presiding over the many activities taking place at the rink. He has installed new glass around the rink where wire once stood, and the popular snack bar has been expanded and updated.

As he explained this week, there are programs for all ages and all levels of skill.

For young children, there is a new Little People's program where children aged three to seven years learn the basics of single-blade skating. That takes place from 5 to 6 p.m. each Saturday.

An Ice Skating Institute of America (ISCA) - sanctioned rink, there are classes for all levels of figure skating. Mondays there are badge lessons from 3:40 to 5:40 p.m. for ages four to 16 years. Skaters are awarded different badges as they complete required skills in each level. The badge ascends from Alpha to Beta to Gamma.

Wednesdays there are more badge lessons from 3 to 4:30 p.m. and on Fridays from 3 to 5:40 p.m.

These lessons are sponsored by the Winter Garden rink. Participants pay $49 for each ten-week session that runs throughout the year.

As Hoban explained, "I'm still learning a lot about much of these programs. But the badge lessons bring along three year-old kids to 16 and 17 year-old competitors. Once they reached the highest level, they have gone on to other competition and programs in preparation for the Olympics."

The Seahawks, the youth hockey organization, is also based in the Cohasset rink. Children from Hull, Scituate, Cohasset, and Norwell play in this recreational league. The new addition this year is Marshfield.

"I really pushed hard to get Marshfield into the Seahawks," Hoban explained. "They were part of Pembroke and Plymouth. They were getting so small, I thought they would dissolve. I'm really happy they joined the Seahawks. There are now 400 in the program. It's growing by 80-100 kids every year."

The Seahawks sponsor beginner lessons for children aged three and over every Saturday night from 6 to 7 p.m. They move up in league competition as their skills increase.

"The program is increasing every year. I really support it," Hoban stated.

The Winter Garden is also the site of home games for Hull, Scituate and Cohasset high schools. In December, the rink hosts the annual Lobster Pot Tournament, a local version of the holiday hockey tournament between South Shore high schools.

Scituate, Hull, Cohasset, Marshfield, Rockland, Abington, and Sandwich high schools are scheduled to compete in the competition Dec. 26. Finals for the tournament will be held Dec. 30.

The high school hockey games occupy the rink through the winter on Wednesday and Saturdays from 4 to 6 p.m.

There is public skating every Friday night from 8 to 10 p.m. and from noon to 2 p.m. daily. The cost of $3 per person for the free skating sessions.

The South Shore Kings, another youth hockey league, holds classes at the Winter Garden every Saturday and Sunday. This recreational organization is based in Weymouth.

Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., the South Shore Conference, of which the Seahawks are members, are allowed ice time. Sundays, they can occupy the rink from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Pre-schoolers are given lessons each Tuesday from 10 a.m. to noon, and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to noon.

The Winter Garden is the home of the Silver Blades Skating Club. This is a private figure skating club where parents hire private teachers to instruct their children. The Silver Blades sponsor classes for adults Monday through Friday from 8 to 10 a.m. Marcia Breen is the instructor for the two-hour sessions.

Two of the adult participants who were good enough to compete in Monday's ISCA state competition were John Landry and his wife Ann Healey of Hingham.

John competed in the freestyle competition, level three. His wife competed in the freestyle one level. He was awarded first place and Ann won first place in her competition.

John began competing five years ago when he was 65 years old. Now 69, he has no plans to give up the activity he perfected just six years ago. "I always skated on ponds when I was a boy. But a few years ago, I thought this would be fun. And it's very healthy," he said.

His wife, whom he would only reveal as "being over 16 years old," participated in lessons with him. Together, they travel with the Cohasset team to the state and out-of-state competitions.

The first time he skated alone in competition , Landry recalled, was "like being at the bottom of a volcano." Although he was competing against 20 year-olds, and he forgot his entire program, Landry returned home from Lake Placid with a second place medal.

"It's turned into a fun thing," for he and his wife to participate in each week, Landry said. Every Thursday and Friday they attend lessons at the Winter Garden.

"They're a good bunch here," he said. "We have a lot of fun, and we like to travel to the competitions with them all."

Local participants from the Cohasset rink who were awarded medals at this week's ISCA's competition include the following:

Anne Healey, first place, freestyle one, adult; Ariel Styles, first place, freestyle four, adult; John Landry, first place, freestyle three, adult; Jenny Fischer, second place, freestyle, 7 and under; Jenny Fischer, first place, interpretative, 7 and under; Bethany Quintin, first place, Kara Hagan, fourth place, freestyle two, 8-10 yrs.; Kim Ward, fourth place, Arianna DelGallo, first place, and Katie Waterhouse, second place, freestyle one, 9-11yrs.

Cathy Robinson, third place, freestyle two, 13-15 yrs.; Katie Leeder, fourth place, freestyle three, 11-12 yrs.; Kerri Williams, first place, Laura Haley, second place, freestyle three, 13-14 yrs.; Leslie O'-Grady, second place, interpretative, 14-16 yrs.; Julie Rizzotto, third place, interpretative, 12-14; Erin Singleton, first place, Alpha, 4-5 yrs.; Jennifer Parent, third place, Jessica Parent, second place, Alpha 6 yrs.; Megan Lindholm, third place, Michelle Ward, fourth place, Alpha 7-8 yrs.; Marisol Perry, first place, Jenny White, second place, Beta, 9-10 yrs.

Jackie Hoban, first place, Trudy Tomlin, second place, Julie Slodden, third place, Beta 6 and under; Lee Rodgers, first place, Beta 7-8 yrs.; Michelle Coles, first place, Gamma 6-8; Lauren Wood, first place, Gamma 13-15; Elizabeth Manning, third place, Gamma 9-11 yrs.; Erika Schlichte, second place, freestyle four, 8-10 yrs.; Kim Hoering, first place, freestyle four, 13-15 yrs.; Jennifer LaPointe, second place, freestyle four, 13-15 yrs.; Katie Waterhouse, third place, Arianna DelGallo, fifth place, interpretative, 10-13 yrs.; Tina Zacchio, second place, interpretative, 9-12 yrs.; Leslie O'Grady, first place, freestyle five, 13-15 yrs.

Corrections on last week's letter

Letters

To the Editor:

There are two errors in the letter you kindly published Oct. 10. I did not say that the Hull sewage treatment plant is properly designed and located. I said that it is not properly designed and located. Hull has a comprehensive consulting engineer's report which gives details. And the area which the sewer commissioners added to the sewered area at Town Meeting, but now talk of excluding, is suspected of polluting streams that run into Cohasset Harbor, not Boston Harbor. The failing on-lot systems in that area (Rte. 3A business and contiguous residential areas) should be replaced by a collection system which discharges to a treatment plant.

Some thoughts on harbor rules

put you at the bottom of the list. Current policy promotes frivolous applications and results in people putting their name on the list for "what-if contigencies."

--Fuel was not available in Cohasset harbor until the weekend of June 22. It should be available from Memorial Day to Columbus's Birthday.

--Opposition to modest marina facilities, by Bill Figuereido or whoever, is shortsighted. Such a facility would improve services such as refueling and maintenance. It would also increase boating opportunities for the general public.

In summary, I believe Cohasset town policy should maximize commercial and recreational boating opportunities to the maximum number of people.

Please respond as soon as possible and certainly before the next Town Meeting.

Helping troubled teens

Toughlove teaches no-nonsense parenting

by Mary Mahoney

A mother is bruised and battered at the hands of her 16-year-old son who cannot tolerate the word "no". She takes him to court and is further victimized. "What are you doing wrong?" she is asked.

The teenager, taking full advantage of his mother's sense of terror and helplessness, sets the kitchen table on fire in front of his horrified family.

The father attempts to control the situation but it deteriorates into physical violence. And later, when the father is killed in an accident caused by a drunk driver, the mother hopes things will improve. But they don't, they get worse.

This sad but true story was eventually turned around through the intervention and support of Toughlove — a self-help program which teaches parents a healthy way to deal with troubled teenagers. The abused parent was introduced to the program by Betty Joy, a resident of Spruce Way in Hanover, who is currently the Mass. representative for Toughlove.

Joy, an outspoken proponent of the no-nonsense approach to unacceptable teenage behavior, likes to recall the significance of the five-year-old story because it marks the start of a whole new way of life for her.

"The woman called me about her problem and while I was trying to help her I noticed an article in the newspaper about a Toughlove meeting so I took her there.

"We started attending the meetings in Quincy and after a while I thought, why are we going there — we should have our own group in Hanover," Joy remembered, not realizing at the time that the thought was actually a calling.

Joy said she waited for someone to start a Toughlove group in the area but as more and more people came to her with their stories about teen behavior problems, she realized that she was that "someone".

Joy, who attends St. Mary's Church, went to the parish priest to ask for the use of the church hall for a Toughlove meeting place.

"He said Hanover didn't need a Toughlove group and that made me feel we were in bigger trouble than we thought.

"If that's true, then my efforts will fail," Joy told the priest. "Just give me three weeks and let me try."

So Joy said she put a notice in the church bulletin announcing that a Toughlove group for parents troubled by kids' behavior and attitude would be starting.

"At that first meeting, 60 people showed up" and Joy says the weekly program is still going strong after four satisfying years.

Ironically, Betty and John Joy had endured seven long years of family crisis, prior to their introduction to Toughlove, caused by a drug-abusing son who has since turned his life around.

"We didn't know it then but we were applying Toughlove principles and thank God it worked," Betty said.

Looking back is painful but Betty needs to share the experience that has come to help so many.

"He was 13 years old when he came home one day and told us he was smoking marijuana and from that time on, the problems kept getting worse."

There were years of intense family suffering because, Betty explained, "when you love someone and he gets into trouble, the whole family goes down."

" We got the situation pretty much under control by taking a stand and giving him choices. We gave him an ultimatum: either go into a drug treatment center or die on the streets. That may seem extreme," Joy continued, "but our backs were up against the wall. It was risky too because we knew he might choose the streets but thank God he chose the treatment program."

Joy and her husband were motivated by love when they took that strong stand against their son's behavior — love for themselves, their son and their other four children. Lacking the support of a Toughlove group, it was a long, difficult road to family healing. Today Joy has only one explanation for the contrasting then and now photos of her handsome son which tell a success story far better than any words.

"It was the grace of God."

But other people currently in the Toughlove program give just as much credit to Betty Joy.

"I don't know where I would have ended up without Betty," said Kay, one member of the program who agreed to tell her story. Speaking about her 18-year-old son, presently in a drug rehabilitation program, Kay remembers the painful trauma of the last four years that ended last February when her son entered treatment.

"Betty saved both our lives," she explained at the end of a story riddled with denial, pure terror and fear.

Kay said she watched her son, the youngest of six children, change from a "loving boy to a horrible monster."

"I learned that a marked personality change is a clue to drug abuse but I couldn't confront him because I didn't want him to be mad at me. I just couldn't put up with his anger."

Kay said she and her husband had joined the Toughlove program when it began in Hanover but they stopped going after a few months.

"We thought we could handle it ourselves but what happened was, we changed our lives to accomodate our son. He was truly the head of the house —he would get up when he wanted to, went to school if he felt like it and often stayed out all night."

After family counseling, which included their son, failed, Kay and her husband went together.

"We had a wonderful counselor," she said, "but we weren't ready to set ultimatums — it was too risky."

After several incidents of verbal abuse and threats on her life, Kay said she was forced to leave her house when her son was home to protect herself.

The crisis came when her son admitted he was hooked on LSD. That's when Kay contacted Betty Joy and for a year now, Kay has been actively involved in the program.

When she was ready to take back control, Kay enrolled her son in a long term rehabilitation facility but she didn't know how she would get him there since she needed his consent. After a subsequent arrest, which landed him in a psychiatric hospital, Kay was able to offer her son that risky ultimatum and he ended up choosing drug treatment.

"A miracle has happened," Kay says as she looks back over the years and compares them to the last eight months. "Now he calls us to announce he plans to go to college and he tells us how much he misses us."

And Kay adds that it is an even greater miracle

Field hockey undefeated; Hardwick injured

VARSITY FIELD HOCKEY

The girls continued their winning streak as they pulled past Hanover, 1-0. This game was one of the toughest challenges the girls have seen this season, but they rose to the occasion and never let down the entire game.

Maureen Farren converted Heather Davenport's beautiful pass into a goal halfway through the second half to clinch the victory for Cohasset.

Hanover, an exceptionally strong offensive team, banged away at the Skippers' net but were foiled each time by the tremendous defense of Sarah Dickerman. Maria Cahill also played tough on defense and almost singlehandedly stopped Hanover's leading scorer from contributing.

Wednesday, Cohasset annihilated Middleboro, 3-0. The girls started off slowly in the first half but managed to score a goal. However, in the second half the team fired up and scored two more and had many other opportunities to score as well.

Pulverizing the Middleboro goalie with shots, Maureen Farren, Lee Sullivan and Cindy Spooner played well on offense and never took the pressure off Middleboro's defense.

On defense, Sarah Dickerman and Jill Shockman made some key plays. Anne O'Leary was also impressive defensively.

Friday, the girls traveled to Abington and once again prevailed, 1-0. This was not Cohasset's best game of the season, but with this victory the Skippers became the first team in the league to quality for the state tournament. This is pretty impressive considering the team is only a little over halfway through the season.

High scorer from Cohasset, Maureen Farren once again had the hot hand and picked up the only goal of the contest.

Both Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill showed great hustle and intensity throughout the game.

This week the girls face East Bridgewater on Tuesday. With the exception of Duxbury, East Bridgewater remains the only team that Cohasset has not beaten. Thursday, the girls travel to Scituate where they will face another tough challenge.

By the way, the girls are still undefeated and are the only team in their league and from Cohasset to remain unbeaten!

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Saturday, the boys sufferd two terrible losses. Not only were they defeated by Weston, 19-0, but in the process Cohasset lost the key to its offense, Floyd Hardwick, who broke his leg. Although extremely disappointed with Saturday's results, Coach Phil Pisano did manage to see some positive aspects in the game.

On defense, the boys did a nice job hitting and never game up despite Weston's impressive size and quickness. Linebackers John Hall and Jeff Soltesz turned in good efforts as well as ends Liam Stanford and Bobby Durkin. On the secondary Peter Sandbloom had an admirable game, also.

Offensively, there was some good passing between Sean Corkery and his receiver Greg Ferreira. Bobby Durkin sprang loose a couple of times and gained some much needed yardage. Floyd Hardwick also ran for a couple of yards before he was injured.

Because of the unfortunate injury to such a key player as Floyd, Pisano feels that his team must now really pull together to form a single unit in order to be successful Saturday against Duxbury and to be competitive for the rest of the season.

In no way has Pisano given up on Cohasset's chances of becoming a football powerhouse, and he still feels his team is a threat to everybody in the league.

VARSITY BOYS SOCCER

The boys started off the week with an exciting victory over Scituate, 2-1. Cohasset's Bobby Shultz scored off a pass from David Shultz in the first half to put his team up, 1-0. Scituate answered with a goal in the second half to tie the game at one. However, with a mere 1:30 left in the game, Todd Fitzpatrick kicked a perfect corner which was promptly headed in by David Caffery to put Cohasset ahead for good.

Jeff Aaron looks about ready to hand off a pass—but to whom can he trun?

Coach Jon Anderson felt Scituate was one of the strongest teams Cohasset has faced all season and he was quite pleased and relieved to leave with a victory.

Anderson believed his entire team played well, especially on defense. Anderson singled out John Reidy as having an "outstanding" game on defense. Kurt Weisenfluh was also impressive as well.

Wednesday, Rockland handed Cohasset their first loss, 1-0. The Skippers played "a very strong game," according to Anderson, and had several chances to score, but when one compares Cohasset's 30 fouls to Rockland's 14, one can see how difficult it was for the Skippers to gain any momentum.

Chris Kirkendal dominated the game from the midfield. Rob Leonard had a good game offensively, especially in the second half.

Saturday, the boys bounced back and creamed Harwich, 4-0. Anderson was pleased with the way his team played and was impressed with the way they came back strongly after the loss on Wednesday.

Bobby Shultz picked up his second hat trick of the season and raised his total goals for the year to 14. Bobby was helped on his goals by Chris Kirkendal, Rob Leonard and Kevin Dunn. Taylor Tibbetts picked up his first goal of the season off a pass from David Schultz.

Anderson was happy with the way in which his team scored and felt the Skippers worked exceptionally well together to bring about these goals.

Tuesday, the boys face Middleboro in a night game. Thursday, Cohasset travels to East Bridgewater in what should be a good game. Saturday, the boys will try to beat Abington on their turf at 1:30.

VARSITY GIRLS SOCCER

Tuesday, the girls were beaten by Duxbury, 5-1. According to Coach Kennan Startzell, the team played a strong game for 45 minutes until Duxbury scored its third goal. After that there was a letdown. However, Startzell did mention that Cohasset looked "great" for a while and moved the ball very well, which he found to be encouraging.

The girls also lost one of their key players to an injury as goalie Liane Ward collided with the goal post after making a heroic diving save. Startzell was very impressed with Liane's efforts in net.

Karin Anglin scored Cohasset's only goal with the assist coming from Liz O'Leary. Caitlin Staunton turned in a good effort for Cohasset.

Thursday, the girls were defeated by Hanover, 3-2. After getting off to a sluggish start, Cohasset found itself down, 2-0, only about five minutes into the game.

The team showed a lot of character and bounced back to the game at two. Unfortunately, Hanover scored again before the half and neither team was able to convert any goals the second half.

Startzell cited Caitlin Staunton as playing well and working very hard.

Friday, the girls tied Scituate, 2-2. Cohasset jumped right off to a 2-0 lead, right at the beginning. But Scituate came back to score once in the first half and again with about 10 minutes left in the game.

Caitlin Staunton scored the first goal off a pass from Liz O'Leary. Karin Anglin singlehandedly dribbled in and scored Cohasset's second goal.

Startzell felt Liz O'Leary had a great game coming off the bench and added the life that his team needs.

The girls are going back to the basics this week, and after making a few changes, Startzell hopes to start off on a new foot Wednesday against Norwell. Friday, Rockland will come to Cohasset and will undoubtedly find a fired up team awaiting them.

Recreation news

BASKETBALL CLINIC

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a boy's and girl's Basketball Clinic scheduled to begin Friday afternoons, Nov. 1 at the Deer Hill School gym.

The clinic is open to grades four, five and six and will be conducted for four consecutive weeks. Girl's clinic will be from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. and boy's will be from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. The fee for the program is $5 per participant.

The clinic is designed to teach basic basketball skills and will serve as a prelude to the upcoming Bsketball League.

If interested, call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 — clinics will be limited in size. Participants may not stay after school. Rather they must return to the gym at the appropriate times.

CREATIVE DRAMATICS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Creative Dramatics program to be taught by Mrs. Barbara Elliot.

Programs will be held for grades K to three from 3 to 4 p.m. Tuesday afternoons, and from 4 to 5 p.m., Tuesday afternoons for grades four, five and six, beginning Tuesday, Nov. 5, at the Town Hall Auditorium. Sessions are for six weeks and the fee is $12 per participant.

Mrs. Elliott has directed senior and junior member plays for the Cohasset Dramatic Club and has appeared on various T.V. and radio guest shows throughout New England. She has been a member of the Cohasset Dramatic Club for 25 years and is a past president of the club.

The program format will include the teaching of acting through improvision, mime, speech, and movement. The program is ideal for non-experienced and experienced students

In interested please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, for registrations. Classes will be limited in size.

PSO discusses staff, goals, meeting

George Fortin, President of the Cohasset Teachers Association, was a guest at last Thursday's meeting of the Parent School Organization (PSO) Executive Board.

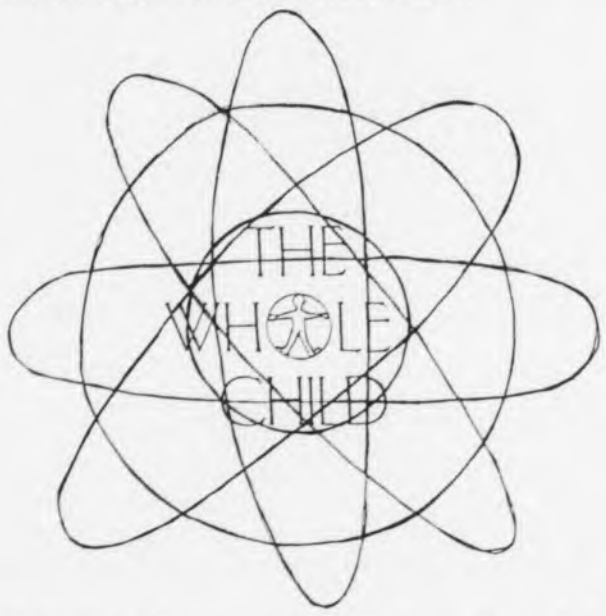
He was invited to discuss ways of improving communications between teachers and parents. When asked how to encourage teachers to attend PSO meetings, he explained that teachers are not apathetic, they just have many other meetings to attend and other commitments in the evening.

He suggested inviting a particular department or group of teachers to discuss specific goals, needs and problems. He also commented that the Teacher Appreciation Day held last spring at the high school was so meaningful to the teachers that it should be expanded system-wide and held several times throughout the year.

Speaking briefly on the Education Reform Bill, Fortin advised the board that parents should begin thinking about the changes and ramifications this bill will bring to Cohasset and how they will vote to accept it at the next town meeting (December 9).

After thanking Mr. Fortin for his helpful ideas, President Nancy Sandell asked for a motion to elect the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood School representatives to the newly formed School Improvement Councils to implement that section of the Education Reform Bill (Chapter 188) dealing with money grants to be used for "innovative academic programs, expanded services to students, purchase of instructional equipment, alternative education programs, cultural education programs, community or parental involvement programs, business and education partnership programs, staff training or other purposes consistent with school improvement."

The council membership comprises the school principal, serving as chairperson; three teachers elected annually by the teachers in the building; two parents of children attending the school (to be elected annually by the local parent organization); and one person, selected by the school committee who is not a parent of a child attending the school. In a unanimous vote, the board elected Sue McNamara and Shelley Weier as representatives for Osgood School and Pat Ellinger and Jean Reidy for Deer Hill School. The representatives will welcome ideas and suggestions from parents and students on programs or activities which could be funded through this grant.



In other business, the board heard reports from committee chairmen and school representatives. Open House at both Osgood and Deer Hill were a success and raffles conducted brought in $168 (for Art Room refurbishing at Osgood) and $412 (for sixth grade field trip transportation fund). Room mothers and parent sponsors have been recruited and are to be thanked for the bountiful refreshments and production of class lists.

Sue McNamara also reported that an appreciation coffee will be held for retiring Shirley Manna and Rita Broderick at the Osgood School to which all parents and staff are invited.

At the high school, the popular Career Lecture Series will begin in late November with guest speakers addressing classes in English, Math, Social Studies and Science.

In conjunction with the Guidance Department, Linda Starmer and Cynthia Hurley will schedule lecturers from diverse professions and trades throughout the school year. They encourage Cohasset citizens to share their expertise with students —call Cynthia (383-0047) or Linda (383-0617) if you would like to participate.

Other upcoming events include Open House at the high school, October 24; and "Choices after High School," a panel discussion for parents and students about colleges, trade schools and employment after graduation, on November 7.

Activities Chairman Gerri Kalita informed the board that the general membership meeting scheduled for Tuesday, Otober 22, will focus on the "Whole Child," and will provide parents new to the schools an opportunity to meet school personnel, PSO officers and representatives, and view a video presentation of the exciting activities and learning going on for the children. The meeting is open to all parents of school children.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. parents will gather for refreshments and informal discussion in groups according to schools which their children attend, affording a chance to talk with school representatives and principals. Gerri and her committee are looking forward to a good turnout of parents interested in getting involved with the PSO. Monica McKenney and Carol Riley's Publicity committee will be providing more information about the meeting via articles in the Mariner, posters and school menus. Watch for it?

The Arts Enrichment Committee chaired by Marylou Lawrence has been previewing a wide variety of performances, workshops, ensembles and programs, searching for the right ones to enhance the curriculum, running the gamut from mime ballet comedy to the Mobil World of Chemistry, from NASA to Aesop Follies. Working with the high school art department, the committee plans to hold workshops on architecture with the Industrial Arts department; publishing with the English department, and fashion design with the Home Economics department, exploring these areas as alternatives to electives. News of these events will be appearing weekly in the Mariner's School News column.

Sue Terry, METCO Host Families Chairman, reported that she has received a commitment from 15 of last year's families to continue serving as a "home-away-from-home" for our Boston children. She asks that anyone interested in learning more about METCO and what a host family does, call her at 383-0789. She also asks last year's families to return their questionnaries to her as soon as possible to confirm their intention to remain hosts.

Vice President Claudia Story has great expectations for her Extended Daycare Survey, having received three phone calls shortly after a brief article appeared in the Mariner announcing the formation of her committee to prepare a survey of the community's needs. Working parents apparently are enthusiastic about the possibility of a special program geared to the after school needs of the younger student.

The board welcomed new member Sabina Noering who was elected to fill the Fundraising Chairman slot vacated by Rosie Dole due to family obligations. Sabina will be meeting with her committees and hopes to begin planning some successful and entertaining fundraisers.

In closing the meeting, President Sandell said, "The energy and talent of this year's board is overwhelming. I applaud the efforts of the chairmen and their committees, and extend an invitation to all PSO parents to attend the October 22 fall meeting."

Cub Scouts Pack 38

Cub Scouts and their den leaders are getting organized and meetings are being set up. There will be a "Halloween Party" Pack Meeting Wednesday, Oct. 30 from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. All Cub families are invited. The Cubs can wear a costume and there will be refreshments and games.

Any boys who missed registration can attend the Halloween Pack Meeting and register. The fee is $12.

Anyone with Scout shirts, etc., who would like to donate them to the pack can call Jane Long at 383-1281 or Linda Farrag at 383-9519. It would be greatly appreciated.

Cohasset Pack 38 Cub Scouts and Troop 28 Boy Scouts will be participating in a Bowl-A-Rama fundraiser during the weeks of Nov. 1 to Nov. 10 at the Cohasset Community Center. Each participating Scout is asked to obtain sponsors.

The sponsor can pledge 1 to 5 cents per pin times the total score of three strings. The Scout bowls or the sponsors can give a donation. The money collected is divided as: 50 percent to the District, 25 percent to Troop 28 or Pack 38 and 25 percent for prizes for the Scouts.

Tiger Cubs will also be organizing groups in the next week.

BOY SCOUTS TROOP 28

The Massachusetts Jamboree 1985 was held in Tewksbury this past weekend. Troop 28 invited the Scouts from Hingham, who had attended the National Jamboree in Virginia in July, with them for a reunion. The only obstacle was the weather. It rained and rained and rained. The Scouts camped in their tents.

The Cohasset Scouts will be hosting the Klondike Derby for the district in February. During the Klondike, the Scouts will be given points for their ability in orienteering, first aid, building a fire, etc. It will be held at Wheelright Park.

Future calendar dates:

Oct. 21, Monday, Regular Meeting at 7:30 p.m. at Osgood School; Oct. 28, Monday, Regular Meeting at 7:30 p.m. at Osgood School; Nov. 3, Sunday, Troop Committee Meeting at 7:30 p.m.; Nov. 9, Saturday, Day Hike; Nov. 18, Monday, Regular Meeting; Nov. 25, Monday, Court of Honor; and Nov. 29-Dec. 1, Friday to Sunday, Camp Squanto, Plymouth.

Any boys interested in joining Troop 38 Boy Scouts can notify Merle Brown at 383-1625 for information.

Beechwood rummage sale

There will be a rummage sale held at the Beechwood Church, Church Street, Saturday, Oct. 19 from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for the benefit of the church school.

In addition to clothing for men, women and children, there will also be games, bicycles, glass ware, bric brac, etc.

Donations are welcome and may be dropped at the church Friday evening between 7 and 9 p.m. or Saturday morning after 8:30.

'Chemically Free' change

The hundred or more students who attended the opening session of the seminar "Chemically Free" were so enthusiastic about the program that they requested that the final session—of students and parents together—be postponed one week, because the original date conflicted with College Night at the high school.

Consequently, the third and final session will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 23 in Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset.

Combining an audience of students and parents should lead to challenging discussion of the whole problem of drugs and alcohol and the resulting difficulties that arise between the two generations, chiefly around the question of communicating and understanding each others' viewpoint.

Drugs and alcohol affect every age group and every family in the community. Even parents with small children will be faced with the problem sooner or later. No social or economic level is spared. Because the problem is so widespread, it concerns and involves all persons, even non-parents. Ways of meeting the issues and of handling them can be brought out best in open discussion.

All Cohasset residents are invited, indeed urged, to attend this final meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 23.

Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Beechwood Sunday school

The Beechwood Church Sunday School will lead the worship service Sunday, Oct. 20 at 10:45 a.m. at the Beechwood Church, Church Street.

Guest speaker, Ed Nutting, will talk on behalf of the Heifer Project International. At the end of the service the children of the church school will present Mr. Nutting with a check for $250 which they have earned themselves.

Guests of any denomination are welcome. Coffee hour will be held after the service.

Antique show and sale

The Ninth Annual Antique Show and Sale, sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church, will be held Saturday, Nov. 9, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill School on Sohier St. in Cohasset just before the South Shore Music Circus.

Antiques such as fine glassware, collectibles, furniture, silver, jewelry and much more will be on display and for sale.

Not all spaces have been filled, so if antique dealers are interested please contact Cheryl Kristiansen at 383-0070.

17th century wedding

The color, merriment, and ribaldry of a 17th century English country wedding will come to life on the stage of the Duxbury Intermediate School auditorium on St. George Street, Saturday, Oct. 19 at 7 p.m.

The New English Song and Dance Companie, Plymouth County's liveliest historic entertainment, will celebrate the premier of "Wedding," a lively musical look at the joys and pitfalls of 17th century courtship and marriage with a gala wine reception following the performance at the Duxbury Art Complex Museum on Alden Street beginning at 9:15 p.m.

During this unique evening, theatregoers will experience the arts of four centuries, beginning with the song, dance, and costume of the 17th century from "Wedding."

Audience members will then move to the Art Complex, just around the corner from the school, where they'll meet cast members and sample 17th century style refreshments amid American paintings and prints from the 18th through the 20th century, the Museum's current exhibit.

This evening is made possible by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities and the generosity of the Duxbury Art Complex Museum.

Tickets, at $10 for the show and reception, $7 for the show only, and $5 for children, are available at Plymouth's Pilgrim Hall on Court Street, Plymouth. They may also be reserved by calling 947-8181 (Middleboro), 747-0212 (Plymouth) or 331-2023 (Weymouth).

Cohasset school news

School improvement councils formed

The Cohasset schools have organized School Improvement Councils at Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood. Their responsibility is to determine the use of the funds available to Cohasset through the Educational Reform Act of July 23, 1985.

At each school the councils consist of the principal, as chairman, three teachers, two Parent School Organization (PSO) members, and one community representative who is not a parent of a child attending the school.

At Deer Hill, the council members include: Ken Ekberg, principal; Frank Deakin, Dorothy McDonald, Jean O'Malley, teachers; Pat Ellinger, Jean Reidy, PSO reps, and Barbara Bliss, community rep.

At Joseph Osgood the members include: Jack Creamer, principal; Dorothy Montouri, Marilyn Power, Susan Shadhauser, teachers; Sue McNamara Shelly Weier, PSO reps, and Katherine Stanton, community rep. No funds area available in this fiscal year for high schools, therefore, no council has been formed for Cohasset High School.

School Improvement Fund Grants available to Joseph Osgood for 1985-86, based on $10 per pupil, are $3190, and funds available to Deer Hill are $2440.

According to the law, the proceeds of the fund grants shall be used, at the school building level, to establish innovative academic programs, expanded services to students, purchase of instructional equipment, alternative education programs, cultural education programs, community or parental involvement programs, business and education partnership programs, staff training.

All meetings of the School Improvement Councils are open to the public. The council members welcome parental and community input. The next meeting at Joseph Osgood is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 24 at 2:45 p.m. and at Deer Hill for Weds., Oct. 30 at 2:35 p.m. Please contact individual members or the school offices for information or suggestions.

Literary magazine update

The Literary and Arts Magazine at the Junior/Senior H.S. has begun work!

All students who write or draw are encouraged to participate.

Wednesdays after school a drawing and writing workshop takes place that allows students time to devote to either drawing or writing.

All those interested should see Mrs. Wood or Ms. Lucas.

Reading Tips

In the wake of the enthusiasm inspired by speaker Jim Tralease and his reading aloud campaign that the Friends of the Library and the PSO brought to the elementary schools last year, the Osgood PSO will publish each week in the menu "tried and true" reading tips from parents, teachers, and kids.

If you are willing to share your "how to's" in creating a love of reading, please bring (or have your child bring) to school your suggestions, either signed or anonymous. We'll keep an "I love to Read" sugestion box in the office and publish them at random weekly.

Reading Tips #1: Establish bed times 1/2 hour before lights out. Use that time for children to be snuggled and read to or to read by themselves — very cozy and convincing.

A very big thank you to all who participated in our Osgood open house Oct. 8. Congratulations to JoAnne Lennon who won the PSO Raffle of the Sea Heather/Shell Wreath. Through your generosity, $168 was raised to help us redocorate the Art Room. Your contributions have also gotten our Literary Publication Fund off to a healthy start with $150.

Between now and the middle of the year there will be more little fund raisers to gather the money needed to print our magazine. Each of the children at the Osgood School will have a work in the publication and will receive a copy at the end of the year.

Please note that the first Saturday of every month there will be plastic bottle and can drive in the Osgood Parking lot between 9 and 11 p.m. The first collection date will be Nov. 2. So start saving those bottles and cans until our goal is reached. Your efforts on all of our endeavors is greatly appreciated.

Early childhood book fair

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery Schoo will sponsor a special early childhood book fai Sunday, Oct. 27, Monday, Oct. 28 and Tuesday, Oct. 29.

Books selected especially for this developmental level will be displayed, as well as books for parents of children of this age!

There will be board books and picture books as well as read-aloud books and stories to share.

The Sunday book fair will be held in conjunction with the special Halloween fair and costume parade for children.

The book fair will be open from 12:30 to 3:30 on Sunday, and during nursery school hours (9 a.m. to 1 p.m.) on Monday and Tuesday. This a wonderful opportunity to do some early holiday shopping for children ages one to six and their parents.

Proceeds from the book fair will go toward the school's enrichment fund. These funds were used last year to erect a wonderful new climbing gym for the schools' three year-old play yard, which is used by neighborhood chidren when school is not in session. This equipment is appropriate for the developmental skills and size and preschool children.

We welcome visitors from other nursery schools and kindergartens as well as parents of toddlers. We hope that you will come and share the exciting activities of the Halloween fair while you browse at our book fair. While the idea of book fairs is not news, parents of young children seldom find materials appropriate for them . . . this is a first for this area. Come and share the fun with us!

Osgood happenings

Ms. Toni Jillson's early special needs class went pumpkin-picking in Scituate last week.

The pumpkin patch was located at Tilden Farm, one of the oldest working farms in the United States. The children met Mr. Sam Tilden at his farm on a misty Friday morning. The day certainly brightened for all as beautiful orange pumpkins were discovered by the eager young boys.

The children who enjoyed the trip were Michael Goodhue, Mathew Grassey, Joey Hegner, Ryan Picton, Peter Plante, and Frankie Rosano. Mrs. Rosemarie Mercurio hosted a picnic after the pumpkin hunt.

Cohasset obituaries

Robert Wilson

A memorial service was held Saturday for Robert Wilson, 75, a longtime Cohasset resident who died this week in Long Island, N.Y. The service was held at the Second Congregational Church.

Mr. Wilson died suddenly Wednesday while visiting friends in Cutchogue, Long Island, N.Y.

A resident of Cohasset for the past 25 years, Mr. Wilson had lived for several years in Norwell.

In 1969, he began the Robert Wilson Studio in Boston. His son, Paul Wilson of Hingham, joined him in the company. The studio was best known for its photo retouching for advertising.

Mr. Wilson had been a fulltime portrait painter in Norwell from 1953-1958. He then joined the Gunn Studios in Boston and from 1960 to 1969 he worked as a photo retoucher with Giardini and Russell and Associates of Boston.

Mr. Wilson went into semi-retirement in December, 1981. He continued to work from his Cohasset home where he completed portraitures, landscapes, photo retouching and commercial illustrations.

He was an active member of the South Shore Art Association. His works were displayed and sold through the Schnable Galleries.

In his spare time, Mr. Wilson built and rebuilt clocks, made pottery, and enjoyed woodworking and cabinet making. He made jewelry and also found time for model ship building.

In addition to his son Paul, he leaves his wife, Isabelle (Bogart); a daughter, Ann Wilson of Santa Barbara, Calif.; and a brother, Ross of New York.

Donations may be made to the memorial fund in his name at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, 43 Highland Avenue.

James A. Hagler

James Allen Hagler, 71, a former assistant professor and lecturer at Harvard University, and a former chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Committee, died at home last Monday after a brief illness.

He had lived in Cohasset for the past 33 years where he was a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club. Mr. Hagler was also a member of the Harvard Club.

He received a bachelor's degree in commerce from the University of Lexington, Ky. in 1937 and a master's degree in education from Harvard University in 1953. Mr. Hagler was the recipient of an honorary degree from Mitchell College of Advanced Education in Barthurst, Australia in 1977.

He did graduate work at the University of Nancy, France; Heidelburg University, Germany, and the University of Paris and Harvard.

Mr. Hagler was executive director for International Marketing Institute from 1960 until he retired in 1982.

From 1937 to 1941, he was marketing and plant superintendent in the hotel, contract and institutional department of Swift and Co. in Chicago.

Mr. Hagler was also involved in establishing the Massachusetts Arts Lottery. In addition, he had been a consultant to the Bureau of Foreign Commerce, a former director of the New England World Trade Center and was a former member of the New England Regional Export Expansion Council.

He was awarded a presidential commendation for excellence in the field of exports for his contribution to the national export expansion program.

In addition, Mr. Hagler was a former consultant for Tower Iron Works and international drug companies and was senior research associate for Middle Eastern oil companies.

Mr. Hagler was former assistant dean of the doctoral program at the Harvard Business School, the advanced management program, and the Turkish program where he spent time at the Harvard-Ford Foundation-Turkish Foundation at the University of Istanbul.

He lectured and taught at the Universities of Taiwan, Instanbul, Guyana, Saigon, Ceylon, and Pakistan.

He leaves his wife, Katherine W. (Mahon) Hagler; a son, James Allen Hagler Jr. of Durham, N.H.; two daughters, Dorothy Fenno of Newton, and Katherine Lynn Kolpitts of Nashua, N.H., and four grandchildren.

There were no funeral services.

Memorial donations may be made to the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston.

Arrangements were made by the Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street.

Studds says need for insurance

In his weekly report, Congressman Gerry Studds outlined the need for coastal residents to obtain federal flood insurance.

"Hurricane Gloria is now just an entry in the history of meteorolgy, and we are all grateful that it failed to live up to its advance billing as one of worst storms of the century. Civil defense officials and residents of southeastern Massachusetts, who still have vivid memories of the Blizzard of 1978 and the devastating losses it inflicted in our areas, made an all-out effort to prevent the loss of life and damage to pr perty. Unfortunately, little could be done to avert the power outages - lasting almost a week in some locations - which resulted from Gloria's high winds. For many persons, the outage dragged on interminably.

"As of this writing, it appears highly unlikely that the President will declare Massachusetts a national disaster area, as there was no major damage to streets, highways,and bridges. There is still a possibility, however, that the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration will make their own disaster area designations, probably on a county by county basis. This would make homeowners, businesses, and farmers, under certain conditions, eligible for low interest loans to cover uninsured losses caused by the hurricane. Anyone interested in learning more about potential federalassistancemay contact our district office in Hanover.

"Although we escaped Gloria's fury, the fear of severe damage as she swept toward the east coast serves as a solemn reminder to residents of low-lying coastal areas of the existence of National Flood Insurance Program. Administered by the Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA), the program provides federally-subsidized insurance coverage, through private insurance carriers, to property owners living in flood hazard areas designated by the agency, many of which are located in southeastern Massachusetts.

"The premiums on this insurance have risen in recent years, but remain a good value - particularly in light of the fact that such good coverage is not available at all through private carriers. Nonetheless, only about one-third of the eligible homeowners are currently insured. Many gave it a second thought as Gloria approached. The Boston FEMA office received hundreds of calls from uninsured and worried Massachusetts residents seeking coverage in the two days before Gloria struck. The FEMA insurance is not effective, however, until five days after the purchase.

"I would like to take this opportunity to urge the thousands of eligible property owners who do not have federal flood insurance to contact an insurance agent for more information, When the next hurricane threatens our shores, it may be too late."

'Death of a salesman'

Rehearsals are well underway for "Death of a Salesman" to be presented to the public, by members of the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

This Pulitzer Prize-winning play written by Arthur Miller in 1949, will be on stage at the Cohasset Town Hall Nov. 15, 16, 22 and 23; with all performances starting at 8 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door.

Sunday, Nov. 17, at 2 p.m. there will be a "Special show" (no admission charge) for Senior Citizens. All are invited.

Director Helen Ketchum has selected as her cast, the following: Ben Duffy as Willy, the leading role of a bewildered travelling salesman who loses his job in his old age. Lee Dunne will portray Linda, his selfless wife, who is ruthless with the lack of sympathy given to the anguished old salesman by his wayward sons, John Kuhn and Carl Slotnick will be seen as these never-do-well young men, Happy and Biff; while Robert MacKay will act as Uncle Ben, Willy's brother. George Hammacher and Joseph Milano will play Charlie and Bernard, the happier father and son from next door.

Others in the cast include: Virginia Barcomb, Ron Massa, Sidney Browne, Carter Hill, Jan Higbee, Saly Rossi Langer and Douglas McCabe.

Any persons who feel they might be interested in contributing a little time to his venture, may contact the Production Manager, Florence Kelley, evenings at 383-9099.

Fall membership meeting

A warm welcome to parents of Cohasset students, school administrators, teachers, school committee members and PSO officers.

The meeting will be held at Cohasset High School — Study Hall, Tuesday, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m.

Barn and bike sale

The Bare Cove Fire Museum in Hingham will be holding its annual fall Barn and Bike Sale at the Hersey House Barn, across from the West Hingham Fire Station at 229 North Street. The sale will be held Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 19 and 20 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Along with a delicious selection of homemade baked foods, there will be a large collection of household goods, furniture, toys and many other items including collectables.

The proceeds from the sale will be used by this all-volunteer non-profit group to help defray the expenses of their restoration of early American fire apparatus.

For information or donations to the sale, call Galen Hersey at 749-4642. The sale will be held rain or shine.

Two flu clinics

The Board of Health will conduct two flu clinics for the residents of Cohasset.

The clinics will be conducted under the auspices of Mary Ann Bailey-Hansen, who is the Social Service League Town Nurse.

For the convenience of all who wish to participate in the program, the Board of Health has selected two Saturday mornings, Oct. 19 and 26 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The clinics will be conducted in the Town hall auditorium.

For further information, please contact the Social Service League of Cohasset at 383-0771.

Mortgage burning Oct. 27

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold an Open House and "mortgage burning" party Sunday, Oct. 27 from 4 to 6 p.m. at its Caleb Lothrop house, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Members and friends of the Society are invited to this very special event celebrating the conclusion of a successful fund-raising drive which recently led to the retirement of the Lothrop House morgage.

Culminating a ten year project to renovate and renew this fine 1823 Georgian style home, the long-anticipated event will be highlighted by a symbolic "burning of the mortgage."

The Caleb Lothrop House itself is the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society, houses the Society's office, its library and an extensive archives of local and area history. Built by Cohasset businessman Caleb Lothrop, the house remained in the Lothrop family for more than a century and a quarter before becoming the Society's headquarters in the mid-1970's.

Also featured at the Open House will be a display of Society-owned artworks recently restored with grant-funding provided by the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council. Oils and watercolor paintings of local historical significance from the 19th and early 20th century form part of the Society's extensive collections and many relate to the town's history.

This year's successful mortgage fund drive was spurred by a matching challenge grant from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, soon equalled by friends and members of the Society.

The retirement of the Lothrop House mortgage is an important milestone in the fifty seven year history of the Society and the forthcoming Open House promises to be a gala event.

Glass Menagerie to open Oct. 18

Tennessee Williams' drama, "The Glass Menagerie" opens Friday, Oct. 18 at the Nickerson Theatre as the second production of the 1985-86 subscription season for Norwell's professional theatre company.

Directed by Neils Miller, the cast includes: Judy Braha as Laura; Peg Lamprey as Amanda; Robert Riley as Tom and Steve Aveson as Jim.

Nickerson theatregoers will recall Robert Riley as Elyot in the first production this season, "Private Lives," and last seasons, "You Can't Take It With You" and "Towards Zero." Judy Braha directed last season "The Price" at the Nickerson, and most recently, "Wait Until Dark" for the summer series.

Peg Lamprey has toured in such productions as "Applause" with Lauren Bacall and Len Cariou; "Mame","Blithe Spirit" and "Golden Pond." Steve Aveson is seen locally on WBZ-TV's popular "Evening Magazine."

The four character drama was Tennessee Williams' first great success, opening to rave reviews in New York in 1945 where it ran for a year and a half and winning the N.Y. Drama Critics' Circle Award as the finest play of the season.

"The Glass Menagerie" established Williams as the most promising playright of the post-World War II era.One of America's foremost playwrights, Williams' most famous plays include "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," "The Rose Tatoo," "Sweet Bird of Youth," "Summer and Smoke," "Camino Real," "The Night of the Iguana," and "Orpheus Descending."

Performance times for "The Glass Menagerie" at the Nickerson Theatre are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 pm.; Friday at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday at 4 and 8:30 p.m.; Sunday at 2 and 7 p.m.

Friday and Saturday evening prices are $16; all other performances, $13. Group discounts are available.

For a detailed brochure on the 1985-86 season, call or write the Nickerson Theatre, P. O. Box 272, 30 Accord Park Drive, Accord, 02018., 871-2400.

Vo-tech committee targets money for director

By Judy Foley
Mariner Correspondent

The South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High school Committee last week agreed to target $7,000 from surplus revenue funds to supplement the federally funded salary of Paul Babcock, the school's director of development.

The vote came over the objections of Scituate representative Joan DeGeorge Schirmer, who argued that the committee has vowed to return surplus funds to the district's eight towns, and that Babcock was hired under the assumption that his salary would come from the outside funds he is charged with securing for the vocational high school.

Babcock came to South Shore VoTech last March under a federal grant, and has been instrumental in obtaining thousands of dollars in grants, donations and in-kind donations from state and federal funds and private companies. Prior to the committee's vote for the supplemental support money last Wednesday, Babcock confirmed an addiitonal $72,705 in grants from the state Department of Education to fund a resource room aide plus computer equipment and software, special needs guidance counseling, two shop and related aides (one for each of the school's two campuses at Hanover and Abington), a community awareness specialist to boost the school's public relations, and drafting and machinery equipment for the computer-aided drafting and machinery programs.

None of the current grant money will cover Babcock's own salary, however, Superintendent/Director Dr. Clifford Easton said.

"We don't have a bank account to draw on for Paul's salary," Easton explained to the committee. "I don't think we'll need the entire $7,000, but we may have to use it to tide him over. The $7,000 will bridge the gap."

The funds will cover 12 weeks of Babcock's salary if suitable grant money is not found in that time.

Scituate's representative Schirmer praised Babcock's performance to date, but refused to endorse the vote to spend $7,000 from surplus funds for his salary.

"I stood in front of my town last year and promised that all surplus revenues would be returned to the members, and I know many other members did the same thing," she said. "When Paul was hired, it was under the agreement that he would be paid from outside funds. If we approve $7,000 for 12 weeks now, what will happen if funds don't come through in the next 12 weeks. We're talking about a $36,000 salary."

She added that the South Shore Vo-Tech is "the only school I know that has its own grant writer."

Easton defended the grant, adding that Babcock has been successful in obtaining grants and private donations, and has also been instrumental in running the programs. "He has done much more than we first anticipated." He warned that he may seek 50 percent funding for the position in the 1986-87 budget.

The committee approved the request with Schirmer casting the sole opposing vote.

SPECIAL NEEDS PROGRAM

The South Shore VoTech High School has initiated a program with the North River Collaborative to allow more special needs students to enroll in the vocational-technical programs offered at the school.

Easton announced that the program has been in effect for three weeks, although he did not consult with the regional school committee before getting into the agreement. The superintendent admitted to "poor judgment" by starting the program without prior approval, although all but committee chairman Robert Molla of Norwell approved the measure.

Easton explained that the school has come under considerable pressure from member towns to enroll more special needs students. An after-school program initiated several years ago received scant success because, as Easton put it, parents of special students are "sensitive" to "non-prime-time programs."

Under the agreement with North River Collaborative, the collaborative pays the school tuition for each student enrolled at the school, and provides one aide for every four students. There are currently 16 students from the collaborative enrolled in the program in Grades 9-11. The students receive their academic training from the North River Collaborative, and attend the Vo-Tech school for vocational training.

Easton said the program is working well, although he admitted there are still some problems to work out.

"There is some concern over the teachers' responsibilities when the aides are on a break, but it's a good program and we are solving those problems. I'm just not pleased that I moved on it before presenting it to the committee."

He promised monthly reports on the program, and said there should be no costs to the school at the present time.

Joan Schirmer of Scituate, while not objecting to the program, insisted that the agreement state that students from the South Shore Regional district have equal access to the program without extra costs. She pointed out that the North River Collaborative does not include several towns in the regional district, including Scituate, Cohasset and Norwell.

"I think it's an excellent program that will address the problems that were brought up by several of our member towns, but I would hate to see a kid from Scituate not be able to get in because our town doesn't belong to the North River Collaborative, while East Bridgewater sends several students."

The comittee unanimously agreed to her request.

Chairman Robert Molla of Norwell opposed the agreement because of what he called "personal feelings about vocational education." He said he was concerned that the school was lowering its standards in technical areas in order to mainstream special needs students, an assertion that Easton staunchly denied.

"It's absolutely not true," he said. "Obviously some of these students do not keep up with our best students, but we do not lower our standards."

In other action, Easton announced a new state policy on disciplining special needs students, and said he plans to protest the new regulations. Under a new ruling from the Department of Education, the school must keep rigid records of all disciplinary action against special needs students, and in some cases is curtailed from using discipline.

"For example," Easton explained, "we must keep track of how many suspensions we give to a special needs student, and if we exceed ten suspensions, we can no longer suspend the student without approval from the state Department of Education. I wanted to inform you that I intend to protest the new regulations."

Schirmer agreed that the rules were too stringent. "Despite the fact that the new regulations received overwhelming opposition at public hearings, the state went ahead and issued the regulations."

POLICY ON AIDS

The school committee unanimously adopted the state guidelines on students who may contract AIDS.

Under the state guidelines, a student with AIDS will be allowed to attend school unless he or she is too ill, has open sores or exhibits behavior that would make the student prone to biting or incontinence.

SMOKING RIGHTS MAY BE CUT

Chairman Robert Molla is upset over the amount of smoking at the South Shore VoTech School, and he's ready to rescind the committee's permission to students to smoke on school property.

Molla, for the second month, voiced his anger at the amount of smoking going on in the school and the litter from smoking outside the building.

"I'm very disturbed to come in the campus and go down the corridors and have clouds of smoke coming from the mens' and ladies' rooms," he said. "You go out the back door and you have to kick the cigarettes through the walkway in order to get by."

He said if students can't be responsible enough to pick up after themselves and to limit smoking to outside, where it is allowed, then the school committee should ban all smoking on the premises.

Molla suggested that the committee inform the student council that students have 30 days to clean up their act. "If they straighten out their act, they can continue the outside smoking policy. "If it continues inside, I would like to do away with smoking altogether."

VANDALISM HITS VOTECH

Superintendent Clifford Easton said recent destruction of the grounds of the South Shore VoTech School was "without precedent" and vowed to take action to curtail access into the school's property.

Saying that many residents thought the school building was a "factory" until a sign was posted out front, Easton said he plans to upgrade the property and keep vandals in check by limiting access to the school.

In recent weeks vandals have driven over the front yard of the school, digging up the yard to the tune of an estimated $3,500 in damages.

"Because of our lack of reaction and action, in a sense we have condoned the vandilism," Easton said. "There is unlimited access for autos into the property, and it's a disgrace. The image we portray is 'fac-tory.'"

School committee members discussed possible solutions, such as gates at the entrance and landscape boulders strategically placed on the front yard. Chairman Robert Molla warned that there would be an item in next year's budget to address the problem.

What's the REAL RETURN on Your Savings Certificate?

It may surprise you to learn that interest rates may look alike . . . . but interest payments may NOT all be alike!

The method a bank uses to compute its interest may make a significant difference in the amount of interest payment you receive.

Take this very typical example (let's use an 8½% Annual Rate for comparison):

Party raises $40K to fight African famine

Representatives of Coop 6, an organization of six Democratic town committees on the South Shore, were recognized for their fundraising efforts on behalf of Ethiopian famine victims.

Members of the Democratic state committee singled out Coop 6 — comprised of local committees from Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth — for their role in the Donkey Project at the UMass., Boston Harbor campus.

Ted Kennedy, Jr., Jim Roosevelt, and U.S. Rep. Chet Atkins were among those notables who attended the award ceremony at the UMass., Boston Harbor campus, Sept. 30, and congratulated the South Shore Democrats for raising well over $7,000 of the $40,000 that was contributed statewide.

As part of their role in the Donkey Project which purchased pack animals to transport food to remote villages in Northern Ethiopia, members of the six committees sponsored a reception at the Bell Buoy Restaurant followed by a theater party at the Satuit Playhouse.

Because both the Bell Buoy and the Playhouse donated their facilities, food and the film "Oh God, You Devil," expenses were kept to a minimum. All money raised was given directly to Grassroots International, a non-profit organization that handled the purchasing of donkeys, camels and elephants to transport food and farm implements through the war zone.

Dan Connell, spokesman for Grassroots, praised the project, noting that the Marxist Ethiopian government for political reasons will not allow planes or vehicles to reach famine victims in the Eretria and Tigray regions, despite pleas by the United States and other governments that "mercy corridors" be established.

He added that by bringing supplies and food to these proud and dignified people in their ancestral homelands, the Donkey Project keeps them from becoming displaced persons, reduces the cost in personnel and disease in the Sudan area, and makes it possible for Ethiopian farmers to plant as soon as there is a letup in the drought.

Connell further noted that "famine affects an entire generation," adding that it will take years to restore the economy of the victims of this terrible combination of famine and war.

"You don't read about it any more," Connell said, "because it's yesterday's news, but it's very real for the people who will live or die because of you."

Connell informed the gathering that Massachusetts Democrats are leading a movement throughout the country, and that the Democratic National Committee plans to institute similar projects nationwide.

Additionally, in Colorado singer John Denver has begun a Donkey Project patterned after the Massachusetts efforts.

Twenty-eight Massachusetts cities and towns that had raised over $500 each were presented with awards during the ceremonies, and Atkins urged their representatives to "discuss with the South Shore towns afterward how they managed their success."

Ted Kennedy, Jr., who had visited Ethiopia with his father, Sen. Kennedy, said he was impressed by the way "people can get together and affect something halfway around the world."

He added that this leads him to believe that problems aren't really beyond our control. "Even though there are still kids and grownups dying every day, and the problems won't go away, the Democratic committees and the Republican committees can get together. It's not a political issue, it's a human issue, and I'm proud to have been part of the response."

DPU to hold area storm hearings

A special House investigatory committee will hold a number of hearings throughout the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts starting Monday, Oct. 21. The probe will concentrate on just how effective the emergency response was to the devastating effect of Hurricane Gloria.

State Rep. Frank Hynes of Marshfield is the chairman of the special committee of the Massachusetts House.

The first hearing will be held at the Brockton City Hall 7:30 p.m. Monday, Oct. 21.

Other hearings will be held on: Tuesday, Oct. 22 at Scituate High School at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 24 at Pembroke Town Hall at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 26 at Abington High School at 10 a.m., Wednesday, Oct. 30 at Marshfield Town Hall at 7:30 p.m. and Tuesday, Nov. 5 at Barnes Auditorium in Hingham Town Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Hynes said, "Our committee will be investigating a number of problems. But the major question will be whether or not the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts was, or is now, prepared to deal with the recent hurricane that struck the area. At the same time, we must be prepared for a major blizzard such as the one that struck us in 1978."

The special panel is comprised of four other area legislators: Rep. Robert Emmet Hayes (D-Whitman), Rep. Thomas P. Kennedy (D-Brockton), Rep. Charles W. Mann (R-Hanson) and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset).

State Sen. William Golden of Weymouth will file a bill this week to help pay for cleanup costs incurred in his district by Hurricane Gloria.

The bill calls for the state to pick-up the tab for personnel, equipment and cleanup costs incurred by cities and towns in Massachusetts including $550,000 for Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

The proposal, which Senator Golden has invited other South Shore legislators to sign on to, would be necessary to help provide reimbursement costs to the South Shore towns, even if Federal Aid became available.

"The State Civil Defense Department has informed me that if the towns receive Federal assistance, it will only pay for 75 percent of the damage and cleanup costs in the communities," said Sen. Golden. "Additional cleanup funding will still be necessary, and that is one of the reasons I have filed this bill."

Cohasset school news

Friday, Nov. 8 and Saturday, Nov. 9, senior Andrew Glasfeld will star in "Flowers for Algernon" on the Cohasset High School stage.

Adults will remember the widely-acclaimed novel written by Daniel Keyes, which was ultimately produced as the film "Charly," a heart-rending story of a retarded man who received a miracle drug and for a time . . . for a very brief time . . . became the man he might have been.

This is a sensitive drama, which Director Ron Emmons will polish, repolish, and refine to the delight of Cohasset audiences next month.

Although "Charly" is Glasfeld's first leading role in a CHS production, he is no stranger to the Cohasset High School stage.

In ninth grade he produced the off-stage voices for "Grease," in ninth grade he was one of the punkers in "Godspell," and he held the scenery in "Chinamen," a production which came in fourth place in the state finals.

In tenth grade he appeared in "Who Am I This Time" as an introvert who came out of his shell on stage. And in "Snoopy" he was Charlie Brown. Last year he appeared in the all-state cast of 'Voices," as a smitten young man.

Director Emmons said Glasfeld competed against three strong talents for the lead, adding that he is one of those students who more or less skipped over his junior year, and will graduate in June '86.

When asked if Glasfeld had broken his arm before or after auditions, Emmons smiled wryly, saying, "the broken arm happened after he got the part."

Glasfeld plans to major in radio communications at college, "hopefully Emerson," and would like to become a music engineer. A member of the chorus, he is accomplished on the drums, keyboard, base guitar, trombone and tuba. He has a home studio.

Parent to Parent

The Guidance department and PSO are jointly sponsoring a "Parent to Parent" meeting for junior and senior parents Wednesday, Nov. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the new study hall.

The major focus of the evening will be discussing the role of parents in the college decision process as well as other choices open to your student after graduation.

John Leary, head of the guidance department, will outline all the steps taken in advising the student in college and career selection.

Parents with the background and first hand experience will share knowledge of college interviews, college deferment, qualifying for financial aid. Also parents will be attending whose children have chosen post-graduate school, AFS, postponing college and work force and the dyname program and will be able to answer any questions you might have.

PSO membership meeting

The Fall Membership Meeting for the Cohasset Parent School Organization is set for Tuesday, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the new study hall at the high school.

The PSO Executive Board invited all parents of school-age children to meet school administrators, teachers, school committee members, the PSO board and parents new to the school system.

The program will include an orientation to our school system and the activities of the PSO as well as a discussion of "The Whole Child"—the PSO's focus for the 1985-86 school year. This promises to be an informative and enjoyable evening for all. Refreshments will be served.

One leopard pelt provides lifetime of memories

By Dorothy Squier
Special to the Mariner

"I need a belt for my new green pullover. Do you suppose I could make one?"

Chrissie's friend, Mae, sat at the kitchen table with me. She nibbled a roast lamb sandwich, drank tea, then put down her cup and said, "Is there anything left of your old baby leopard coat? They're showing a lot of fur belts this year. It would be perfect with green."

"For heaven's sake, Mae, it must be over ten years since I bought that coat. It's had more lives than any cat. I'll get it out anyhow and see what's left of it."

A breeze stirred the white curtains at the windows and wafted noiselessly through the flat. Although there were people all over the place, a pervasive feeling of pleasance filled the little flat. Clif, Marie's estranged husband (he'd come to see his daughter) was napping in the den. Chris had finished the Sunday dinner dishes and was resting on Mama's bed in the back bedroom.

Mama was on the sofa in the parlor reading the paper, still wearing the little navy straw hat that she insisted on when she watched the Sunday Mass on television. It was her wont before the Mass to don her best clothes and sit sedately fingering her rosary and raising her faded blue eyes in adoration.

Now her prayers and meals finished, she sat reading the news, scanned the department store ads and concentrated on Dorothy Thompson's column. "Dorothy, you'd better read this," she called to me.

Mae, who has a propensity for mimicking our neighbors, said, "Let's go down the parlor."

I laughed and watched her start down the hall and turn into the bathroom. In this small group of three-deckers, the apartments consisted of living room, dining room and bedroom on one side, a long hall in the center and on the other side a den, bedroom, bath and kitchen. A small back porch off the kitchen and a flight of back stairs completed the space.

Tiptoeing into the den closet, I found a bag of remnants. There were pieces of fur, still soft and beautifully marked. I took Mama's good scissors from her sewing machine drawer, tiptoed back to the kitchen table where Mae and I spread out the fur pieces. After I chose enough for the belt, Mae scooped the rest back into the bag and started again down the hall.

Holding the fur in my hands I thought of the first day I wore the coat . . . back in the 40s before wearing real fur became a no-no with the animal conservationists. It was at a Harvard-Yale game in the Stadium where I had trouble keeping my mind on the game. The full coat, cut raglan style, had a small band around the neck through which was drawn a brown silk scarf that tied in a bow under my chin. A soft beige wool lining was embroidered in brown. I adored it. And like "Alice's Blue Gown" I wore it and wore it. And when the skin of the baby leopard finally showed through the elbows and seat, I had a furrier cut it down to a jacket.

A few more years and it was made into a striking trim for a green wool winter coat—a notched collar and wide lapels and revers that went to the hem. A flat muff and a triangle of the fur on a pillbox hat finished the costume.

And now this tranquil Sunday afternoon was the last round-up. There was just enough for a belt. The baby leopard owed me nothing. As I cut and sewed I smiled. What good times I'd had wearing it. I came out of the daydream when Mama called out from the parlor.

"Mae, all the news is about Queen Elizabeth. What are you wearing to the Coronation?"

At that very moment Mae came out of the bathroom. I looked up and saw her standing at the parlor door. My eyes popped. She was wearing a man's raincoat and felt hat with her hair tucked up under. On her face she had glued an exquisitely neat leopard mustache and goatee.

She stood motionless and said simply, "This."

Never has there been a more opportune question and answer. Mama and I collapsed.

That baby leopard had a long life and a merry one and now its last gasp came in gales of laughter, and I still "wore it and wore it."

Soviet pianist to perform here Saturday

The Prelude Concert Series will present pianist Boris Lvov in a concert featuring works of Frederic Chopin and Russian composers Alexander Scriabin, Anatoli Liadov, Sergei Rachmaninov and Mili Balakirev, Saturday, Oct. 19.

The performance begins at 8 p.m. at the Scituate Town Library, 85 Branch St., and is funded in part by grants from the Stop and Shop Foundation and Webb-Norfolk Conveyor.

Lvov, recipient of the Soviet Ministry of Culture's prestigious "Most Honored Artist of the U.S.S.R." award in 1961, has enjoyed a distinguished career as one of the most prominent musicians in the Soviet Union. He has toured extensively throughout eastern Europe and Mongolia, China, appearing as soloist with the Moscow Philharmonic and in concert with such distinguished colleagues as David Oistrakh, Emil Gilels and Mstislav Rostropovich.

He has served as full professor of master classes at both the Moscow State Conservatory and the Gnessin Institute of Music in Moscow.

After a two year struggle to leave Russia with his family, Lvov emigrated to Tel Aviv in 1973, where he was appointed professor of piano at the Rubin Academy in Jerusalem.

Boris Lvov has since performed throughout western Europe, Scandinavia and Israel, including appearances with the Israel Philharmonic, Kol Israel Radio Orchestra and the symphony orchestras of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem.

Lvov will be performing on the Falcone Concert Grand Piano, provided exclusively by its manufacturer, the Falcone Piano Company, Inc., Woburn.

Falcone grands are the first piano to be produced in New England in over 30 years. They are expertly designed and individually handcrafted of the finest materials. This artist achievement is the culmination of years of research and development and represents the company's commitment to "build incomparable grand pianos at affordable prices." Falcone pianos are available in three models, six feet, one inch, seven feet, four inches and the nine foot Concert Grand.

Tickets for the Prelude performance are $8. They may by reserved in advance by calling 545-0238, or at the door the evening of the performance.

Toughlove teaches no-nonsense parenting. . .

that her life is also so much better.

"I can't believe the difference in the way I feel."

Although her son is in a safe, healing environment, Kay continues to attend Toughlove meetings to give back some of the valuable support she's received.

Sue, another parent distressed over the change in behavior of her 16-year-old daughter, is new to the Toughlove program. After attending her very first meeting a week ago, Sue and her husband have already begun setting limits. And because of that, their daughter has become more hostile and defiant.

"She has gone from a completely sweet child and an honor student too, to a disobedient, abusive teen. Last year she deliberately flunked out of school," Sue says, describing the unbelievable change in her daughter.

"She totally ignores us unless we say no she can't do something — then there's a major third world war."

A friend put Sue in touch with Betty Joy and the Toughlove program and although her teenager's behavior has worsened, Sue is beginning to feel more hopeful about the situation and herself because of the support she has received in the program.

"It's going to take time — I know that but after just one Toughlove meeting, a friend I haven't seen for a few weeks recently remarked on the change in me. That gives me hope," Sue explained.

When teens act out, parents immediately take responsibility for their behavior. But later, after being exposed to Toughlove, they learn that there is no place in the program for blame and that each one must be responsible only for his own behavior.

"Society," says Betty Joy, "puts a tremendous responsibility on parents but that's absolutely stupid. We can't follow our teenagers around. It doesn't matter if you're rich, poor, working or not working. We just have to get back to no-nonsense parenting."

Mary is another parent who, in the early stages of her 17-year-old daughter's crisis, blamed herself.

"She was smashing windows and dishes and making threats. I figured maybe I wasn't showing her enough love," Mary admits, wondering why the youngest of her three daughters should be the only one to get in trouble.

"She was being physically abused by her boyfriend and I forbid her to see him but she refused to obey. When she threatened to burn down the house and to come to a Toughlove meeting to stab me, I had her arrested. To see her come into the courtroom handcuffed and with two black eyes caused by her boyfriend, it was really hard for me to take, but I had to be strong."

Mary said she changed from a person who did nothing about her daughter's behavior to one who stood firm on what was acceptable and what was not. In the process, her family alienated themselves from her.

"I lost my family but I had the group and I had Betty Joy. Now, after three years we are back together as a healed family and my daughter is back home under my rules. Thank God for Toughlove."

WHAT'S IT ALL ABOUT

Betty Joy, with Tess Reale of Main Street, coordinated the Toughlove program in Hanover. It was designed by David and Phyllis York, two family counselors, who found themselves faced with their own helplessness and frustration in dealing with their daughter's drug abuse problems.

Toughlove is a parents' support group that offers help through sharing problems and solutions. It is a network of parents who want to help their kids who are uncontrollable, addicted, physically and verbally abusive, in trouble in school, and with the law. Parents are taught they are not alone with these kinds of problems, that they are going to have to take a stand with their kids, that they will need support during the process and that their kids will have to suffer the consequences of their own actions.

The group in Hanover meets every Monday at St. Mary's lower church hall on Rte. 139 at 7:30 p.m.

Joy said newcomers go through an orientation session at their first meeting where members share their experiences.

"These are caring people who want to help, who don't want people to struggle alone."

During every meeting success stories are shared by members whose experiences underscore the fact that the program works.

"When parents learn to take a stand against their kids' behavior, things start happening and that's when healing of family relationships start," Joy explained.

One of the goals of the Hanover group is to establish more Toughlove support programs in other area communities.

"We have people coming to Hanover from Easton, Plymouth, Duxbury and even Jamaica Plain. We can train parents to start new groups but they have to make the commitment," said Joy.

The Quincy group has since disbanded because of the lack of trained coordinators and outside of Hanover, the only other active group on the South Shore is in Scituate. The group which got its start in Hanover, calls itself "The Chemical Task Force," and meets every Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in St. Luke's Church.

MAKING PLANS

During a recent Toughlove group meeting with Kevin Tedeschi, a representative of Concerned Citizens For a Drug-Free Youth, plans were made to update the directory of Toughlove groups throughout the state. Joy says the network of active groups will be used to establish hotlines following the showing of a movie over WCVB-Channel 5 next month.

The two-hour television movie titled, "Toughlove," will star Lee Remick, Bruce Dern and Piper Laurie.

In the drama, which will be aired Oct. 13, Remick, Dern and Laurie portray the parents of hostile, destructive, substance-abusing teenagers, who, in desperation, turn to the controversial Toughlove family support organization for help in dealing with their wayward — sometimes criminally inclined — children.

On Oct. 15, Toughlove members will join forces with the Concerned Citizens anti-drug group at 10 a.m. at the State House in Boston. There they hope to obtain support from legislators on a series of proposed bills designed to get help for teenagers who need drug treatment and to seek stiffer penalties for drug dealers.

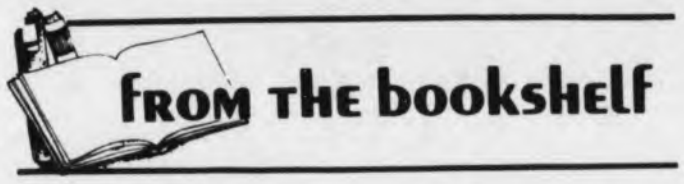
'Cold Sassy Tree,' groups & Book Search

By Peggy Beals
Mariner Correspondent

"He is one of these dangerous primitives who are always trying to tear away the sham scenery of dogma to get at the basic drama underneath. Men like that move mountains. They are very upsetting to an ancient church" from "The Banana Men," by Catto.

THE PROBLEM

Connecting book with eager reader is the problem. In the library, hungry readers wander along the shelves hoping a good book will jump out at them. Strangers converse, exchanging titles, I've yet to see a seeker clutching a copy of this column, confidently selecting recomended titles, but I keep hoping.



Our most reliable source seems to be personal recommendation. How can we do this more widely? Is there a way we can put our enthusiastic endorsement on record for other seekers to draw on?

If you have ideas, please share them via The Mariner addressed to me.

EXAMPLE

I met a friend in the stacks and raved to her about my latest find, "Cold Sassy Tree," by Burns. What's it about? So often a summary of the plot repels, rather than invites. It's a fat book, every work of which I read with satisfaction, and I usually avoid fat books on principle. It's about families, and love, and a little town. Please try it.

She did. I met her yesterday returning it and she said it was merely "the best book I ever read." She swapped me "The Banana Men" by Catto, saying she'd often laughed aloud while reading it. I did too.

It's a quickie, a "what if . . ." of a planeload of biggies blown by a hurricane to a tiny banana island. A delightful priest, who reminded me of a favorite character, Don Camillo in the stories by Guareschi, is described above; he helps them out. Please laugh with us.

GROUPING

Reading groups are a way to share titles. The conventional format is for a group to decide on a list of books, all read the same book, then discuss it. Its drawbacks are obtaining enough copies of a book, and then having to read it whether you want to or not. Another kind simply meets and tells of reading enjoyed, each member taking five or ten minutes to recommend something.

A group like this flourished at the Marshfield YWCA. A speaker was invited to address them on a literary topic of 45 minutes, then members shared titles for the second half. It was marvelously stimulating. I read "Call It Zest" by Yates, from this group, "The Color Purple," by Walker and "The Murder Of My Aunt," by Hull, a classic mystery with pleasure.

I also learned of a notebook an avid reader keeps in her library bag. She records, by author, each book she takes out, rating it Exc," for excellent, and initials for Good, Fair, Poor and NR, not finished. Like me, she won't force herself to read it if she isn't grabbed. The book helps direct her to authors enjoyed, to avoid titles she's tried and didn't like.

I'M BEHOLDEN

Bless friends who go out of their way to mention a title! A Wisconsin friend urged me to try Willie Least Heat Moon's "Blue Highways." Loved it. A retired businessman said he'd thought of me when reading Daisy Newman's "I Take Thee, Serenity," in which a lovable old Quaker relative gently guides a troubled college student. I've collected other of Newman's too sparse output and reread them all.

My sister-in-law, P.S.'d that she'd liked "Domina" by Wood, and so did I.

REFERENCE HELPS

An article in a 1983 "Modern Maturity,' about good reading rediscovered, recommends looking for "80 Years Of Best Sellers," or 70, or 60 in the library reference section, for titles to try. He's reread Maughan's "Of Human Bondage," "The Cruel Sea" by Monserret, and "The Caine Mutiny" by Wouk, and marvels at how effectively the stories are told, without obscenities!

BOOK SEARCH

Amid the Marshfield Fair hoopla and dazzle, two women from Maine had a trailer of used books, which proved a welcome oasis for many, stunned by the racket. They run Snowbound Books, a free search service. You can write them at Box 458, Norridgewock, ME 04957 with titles and authors you'd like to find. It's helpful if you indicate what you'd pay, so their expenses aren't run up telling you about $50 copies of a book you won't go above $10.

Rev. Mackie upset with 'Politicus' AIDS view

To the Editor:

I'm writing in response to David Mittell's article, "Anatomy of the AIDS Scare."

Mr. Mittell apparently feels that he'd done a thorough dissection of the undeniable fear and concern with which AIDS is viewed, and has determined, like some pathologist, that what's really behind it all, what's really the cause of this secondary affliction, is "the hubris of the left."

Having probed the nerves and sinews, having microscopically scanned tissue samples, having studied cultures of various bodily oozes and jellies, he determines that it's "both the historic prejudices and elitist tendencies of the left in America" which have either done in or threaten to undo a rational, reasonable approach to understanding and dealing with AIDS and its victims.

Since "the left loves injustice," since "it collects it," in Mr. Mittell's skewed view of things, it must also be the left, he asserts, which is holding back facts, is "news-managing" the truth, so that such understanding and, I pray, eventual conquest of this disease are, at best, being delayed and, at worst, being opposed.

Mr. Mittell's article arouses more questions and contains more contradictory red herrings than I can or will try to sort out here.

But I'm obliged to ask several questions, presuming that he intended his article to be thought-provoking, and not just a public tantrum.

First, who and what are "the left?" "Our leaders?" "The Boston Globe?" (Well, obviously, the Globe!) Who, or what else is or are "the left?" "Big Brother?" Why did I always think he was way over there on the right? The "intelligensia," perhaps? They have a very nasty, ugly way of always trying to trick or con the "rednecks," in Mr. Mittell's world view. But, frankly, it's still not clear to me who "they, the left" are. Please elucidate, David .

Second, maybe in his medical studies he either missed or slept through the class in which the male reproductive system was described. Had he been there — or awake — he might have learned and remembered that sperm are but one ingredient of semen. A fine, perhaps too technical point, and maybe just the kind of thing "the left" throws in to further confuse and frighten people.

Third, I don't know what papers Mr. Mittell reads, or what news shows he might listen to or watch, but he claims that "our leaders" are "tip-toeing around" and suggesting that "public concern is a naughty and unacceptable form of panic." Where'd he get that idea? Seems to me that Mr. Mittell might benefit from talking and listening to members of the gay community, to public health officials, to others with simply a bit more sense and a lot less obsession with "the left" than he seems to have.

He does extol Congressman Studds's "mighty answer," but seems to have learned little from it or taken any less paranoid encouragement from it.

Finally, I guess I just have to ask, having tried to read the article now at least six times, what's Mr. Mittell's point? Where was his editor? Or does he have carte blanche to say pretty much whatever drifts into his head? This article serves no other purpose, it seems to me, than to add to the confusion, the panic, the already-exhausted theme of "us-against-them" that characterizes all too much of what passes for thinking these days, and does little if any credit to your paper.

Peace,

The Rev. Robert A. Mackie, Rector
St. Andrew's Episcopal Church
Hanover

(Dave Mittell, Politicus author, is away on vacation this week.)

The deadline for Bulletin Board copy is Thursday at 5 p.m. at the Mariner offices.

SNOWPLOW

Carry Position moves up to three times the volume of snow per pass that a straight blade can move. Excellent position for cleaning snow from in and around obstacles such as cars, buildings, etc.

Plunges through drifted snow like a county plow. Less wind resistance when traveling.

Notice finger tip plow control to the right of steering column. Operator is pulling lever that disengages plow from under carriage. No more crawling under truck to remove pins.

FEATURES
- Hinged blade assumes five positions
- Quick and easy installation
- Double lift chain
- Easy connect/disconnect of plow to undercarriage
- Inside blade release control
- Hydraulic cylinders retracted when stored to protect against rust
- Low wind resistance when traveling with plow up
- Greater maneuverability in tight quarters
- Blade guides
- High undercarriage to ground clearance

Cohasset sculptor honored for a lifelong love

By Charlotte Carney

From sire to sire, it's born in the blood
The fire of a mare, and the strength of a stud
It's breeding and it's training
It's something unknown that drives you and carrys you home

Dan Fogelberg/"Run for the Roses"

This quote from a well known pop song about thoroughbred race horses could well be applied to the man, Richardson White, as well as the beautiful horses he creates through his bronze sculptures.

White resides on his beautiful Holly Hill farm at 226 Jerusalem Road.

This pleasant, gentle man's pedigree is quite impressive, but he argues, "it is of no importance in regard to where my art is today."

Where his art will be this week is at the Macomber Farm in Framingham. There, in a private dedication Sunday, Oct., 20, White will be honored for a work commissioned by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The bronze equestrian sculpture, "The Rearing Horse," is a result of more than a year's toil by the famed Cohasset artist.

The endowment for this art work was donated by another well-known Cohasset resident, Mrs. Jane Cook of Sohier Street.

White began sculpting after graduation from Harvard in 1927, where he majored in romance languages.

"I began sculpting the day I got out of college," said White. "I went to work for a well-known Boston scu ptor, Joe Coletti.

"My first really big job was when I was commissioned to do an impressive race horse at that time, Petee Wrack. But the commission was never fulfilled because the owner went broke. However, I did complete the work," White recalled.

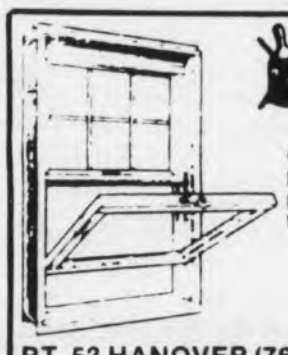
Richardson White's love of horses evolved at an early age. "I was born right here at Holly Hill Farm (Aug. 5, 1904). I grew up with horses," he said, "and I was an amateur jockey at one time."

Even at the tender age of 81, White still rides his beloved horses.

He did, however, spend some time growing up in the Back Bay of Boston, where his father was a practicing Dermotologist. He spent his summers and most of his life after the age of 13, at Holly Hill.

"This farm has been in my family for over seven generations. It was my mother's family's, the Richardson's. As far as I know, this is the last practicing farm in town," he noted.

"We have over 200 acres now, but at one time, it was over 1000. Hay is the main crop, and we do have a saw mill," White added.



Because of his long co-existence with horses, White is able to bring a sense of intimate sensitivity into his horse scupltures. "At one time," he stated, "there were Clydesdale horses at Holly Hill." He has captured this magnificent beast in a timeless sculpture rememberance.

White has other outstanding sculptures to his credit. Among them, a bull, which one belonged to a friend's neighboring farm, and a burro, which at one time was used at Holly Hill.

"To broaden my scope of life, and to stay out of trouble, my father made me go to sea in the summer," White remembered. "And I must say that I did see a great deal of the world."

White's sincerity about life and his work is evident. Sitting comfortably in his workshop at Holly Hill, he shows great pride and enthusiasm when explaining the intricate details of the tedious techniques involved in his work.

The Dragon's Dungeon — By Claire McDonough

Freedom & Chocolate for all concerned

"I sort of hope Andrezej Noga gets away," I told the Dragon.

"Who," he asked, "is Andrezej Noga, and why should you care if he gets away?"

I pointed to an item in Friday's Boston Globe.

"He's that nice young Polish man who hijacked a van containing five tons of chocolate."

The Dragon nodded. "I can relate to that. I always said that if I ever broke the law it would have to be for something really big and important. Five tons of chocolate might just do it."

"Especially in Poland," I agreed. "It seems they ration chocolate there, and only children between two and ten years old are allowed to eat it."

The Dragon shook his head.

"That's sick," he sighed. "People that age haven't even begun to appreciate chocolate yet. They can't really understand the subtle nuances of chocolate mousse, or chocolate rum chiffon pie, or chocolate Bavarian Torte. To say nothing of "chocolate decadance' — you know, that wonderful rich, heavy chocolate torte they used to serve at the Garden of Eatin'? With a raspberry wine sauce and a dollop of genuine whipped cream?"

I thrust the knuckles of my right hand into my mouth.

"Stop," I begged him. "You're driving me mad.

"Still," I added, "we would have done fairly well in Poland. at least while all nine of the kids were under 18 years old."

"Yeah," he smiled. "It would have been chocolate all the way for you and me."

Skip looked startled. "You'd expect your very own children to break the law?"

I was equally aghast. "You mean you wouldn't share your chocolate with us?"

He shook his head. "Surely you jest. Ask if you will for a pint of my blood. If you really need it, I may let you use my car. But don't mess around with my chocolate."

I glared at the Dragon. "He takes after your side of family. My mother always said you'd eat garbage if there was chocolate on it."

The Dragon shook his head sadly. "Nope. It's those war-mongering, anti-family Communists. The first thing they do is indoctrinate the young and turn them against their parents. Kids who won't share their chcolate with their parents can't be trusted not to inform on them to government agents if they express ideas in the privacy of their own homes that are critical of the State."

"Daddy," Breida interjected, "we aren't living under Communism. We live in Massachusetts."

"Which," her father reminded her, "Presidential aide James Baker calls thePeople's Commonwealth of Massachusetts. When someone asked him if he'd ever visited a Communist country, he said, 'No, but I've been to Massachusetts."

"It could be part of a plot," I agreed. Sort of a variation of "Red Dawn." If the Commies try to take over, the first thing they'll do is confiscate all our chocolate. With a chocolate deficiency we won't be able to fight back, and they'll win the hearts and minds of the young with Hershey bars and M&Ms. Maybe Andrezej Noga is really trying to overthrow the Polish government."

"Well," Breida responded primly, "you always taught us to respect law and order. You said that if we disagreed with a specific law we should work legally within the system to change it.

"So if we lived in a country where it was illegal to give your parents chocolate, I would have started petition drives when I was a little kid so that by the time I turned 18 years old it would be okay for me to have chocolate. Meanwhile, I would have eaten all my legal chocolate myself."

"You know," the Dragon mused, "I think we should offer political asylum to Andrezej Noga. He can help keep America a great country. Where adults decide who get the chocolate."

"Sounds good to me," Skip agreed "I'll be 18 in May. And you probably won't have any trouble finding Andrezej Noga. He'll be the onewithall the zits."

MUSINGS — By John H. Cutler

☐ If it weren't for our lungs, there would be no place to put all the pollution that's in the air.

☐ Friends come and go. Only enemies accumulate.

☐ A boy becomes a man when he walks around a puddle instead of through it.

☐ I have heard the following widsom ascribed to several musing experts, incuding Oscar Wilde, Disraeli and George Bernard Shaw. But I know, at least, that Shaw said it: "Youth is a wonderful thing. What a crime to waste it on young people."

☐ I once knew a guy who was cured of insomnia while attending a lecture on insomnia. He fell asleep.

☐ Another definition of a banquet: A function where you eat too much food you don't want before discussing something you don't understand to a group of friends who don't want to hear you.

☐ Once in awhile Walter Winchell said something that made you think. Example: "Poets are born—that's the trouble."

☐ When Fred Allen made a wisecrack about Jack Benny, Jack said, "You wouldn't say that to me if my gag writer was here." In other words, all work and no plagiarism makes Jack a dull boy.

☐ At the Rockland Trust one day I heard a teller say, "Sorry, sir, your wife beat you to the drawer."

☐ You have heard this definition of a Hollywood marriage: Much "I do" about nothing.

☐ The great leaders of history never let their followers discover they were as dumb as their followers.

Having heard some of my Dartmouth College colleagues lecture, I understand this definition: A process by which the notes of a professor become the notes of the students, without passing through the minds of either.

☐ What is the difference between kissing your sister and somebody else? About 45 seconds.

☐ Someone asked Disraeli to define the difference between a misfortune and a calamity. "Well," he said, "if Gladstone were to fall into the Thames, it would be a misfortune. But if anybody dragged him out, that would be a calamity."

☐ John Ciardi, the great American poet, whom I got to know in 1947 at the Breadloaf Writers Conference, was full of musings. An example: "Modern art is what happens when painters stop looking at girls and persuade themselves that they have a better idea."

Sen. Golden offers 'Metro South' growing plan

By Doris M. Johnson
Mariner Staff

When state Sen. William B. Golden, D-Weymouth, talks to South Shore people about the need to deal with the stress of community growth, he's hit a hot topic.

When Golden starts talking about organizing 11 towns to coordinate the regional aspects of that growth phenomenon, he's finding the response is cooler.

"All the juices of economic development are flowing," Golden said in describing the reasons for his proposal to a Mariner Newspapers editorial conference last week. But as communities, he said, "we're adolescent . . . not sure how to handle development."

That's the point at which Golden thinks what he calls Metro South Council could help the towns figure out "who we are—who we want to be when we grow up."

Golden said, "Whenever demand exceeds capacity, it puts stress on the infrastructure" of the towns, such as the highways, water supplies, waste disposal.

The traffic jam that has become a chronic feature of the Routes 3-139 interchange near the Marshfield-Pembroke town line is not just a transportation problem, it's symptomatic of larger problems associated with rapid growth, Golden said.

Metro South, Golden said, could "create a forum where people see each other on a regular basis." This forum could become the setting in which problems like the Pembroke-Marshfield traffic difficulites are dealt with cooperatively rather than competitively, he said.

Representatives from the 11 towns "met in one room on Oct. 2 and acknowledged their interdependence," Golden told the Mariner editors.

There is already a Metro West Group. Eight communities worried by growth and traffic problems along Route 9 formed the group last February, Golden said.

Organizing like this gives a region more clout in dealing with the state, in drawing attention to serious local problems, Golden said. And the state Department of Community Development would be much more likely to fund a well-defined regional proposal than to divide its limited resources among individual programs in the state's 351 cities and towns, Golden suggested.

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council would provide the fledgling organization with technical assistance in preparing an application for funding from the state. Golden said about $54,000 would be enough for a planner and administrative assistant to "identify the structure of Metro South and what the communities need." MAPC is a regional planning agency funded through per-capita assessments on its member communities and through federal grants.

But before the second meeting, set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday (Oct. 17) in Scituate, one of the 11 towns—Pembroke—had already declined its nomination as member of the new group.

The Pembroke Selectmen's luke warm response had little to do with their attitude toward dealing with Pembroke's struggle over the past decade to quit its place in the 101-member MAPC—the town prefers the smaller Old Colony Planning Council, to which it also pays dues.

Golden did not show any discouragement over the Pembroke selectmen's action. His proposed council, he said, was intended to be "a totally voluntary association (to help) develop personal intimacy between communities, develop short- and long-term goals, and to identify issues." (The other 10 towns are all MAPC members).

Such a group "also would attract resources to do something about the problems," Golden said.

Metro South would not become another layer of government nor would it replace any existing organization, said Golden. As Senate Chairman of the Legislative Committee on Counties, however, Golden said he was well aware of the shrinking role played by county government.

The outdated political boundaries defining county units are no longer useful, according to Golden. His district includes two Norfolk County towns, Weymouth and Cohasset, plus the Plymouth County towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield and Scituate.

Golden said he wrote letters about his proposal to the senators representing other communities on his Metro South list—Hanover, Norwell and Rockland, represented by Sen. Anna Buckley, D-Brockton; and Pembroke, represented by Sen. Edward P. Kirby, R-Whitman—and that neither expressed any opposition.

Since water supply and watershed protection is increasingly a concern on the South Shore, maybe the Metro South group—if it emerges as a reality—should also apply to the state Division of Environmental Quality Engineering for a $50,000 groundwater program, Golden suggested.

Applications for state funds have a Nov. 14 deadline and choices will be made by the state by Dec. 15, so the coming month is crucial, Golden said.

New VNA formed for South Shore area

The Visiting Nurse Association of the South Shore, Inc. has joined with visiting nurse associations statewide to form the Visiting Nurse Association of Massachusetts, Inc. (VNAMI). Membership in VNAMI includes 45 free-standing, community-based, Medicare certified Massachusetts visiting nurse associations.

A $7,000 grant has been awarded to the new organization by the Boston Foundation (previously known as the Permanent Charity Fund). The grant will support VNAMI's community health education programs.

Health benefits to the public offered by VNAMI include: public information, professional education and research; 24-hour accessibility to visiting nurse associations in the state through a toll-free 800 number (1-800-562-4700), and delivery of the most comprehensive array of home health care services to area residents.

Services include skilled nursing, physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, home health aides and other services, and public information, professional education and research.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

In search of new taste trends and treats

The young, the restless and the affluent are eating out five or six nights a week, touring restaurants in search of new taste treats. As a result, professional cooking schools have waiting lists for freshman classes because new restaurants are springing up everywhere and professional chefs are much in demand.Last week I mentioned Johnna Albi of Marshfield and her vegetarian classes for today's cooks who are looking for foods to help in staying fit and healthy. For want of space, only her recipe for the pie crust was printed. Here is the filing for Johanna's

CRANBERRY DELIGHT PIE

1 1/1 C. fresh cranberries, washed and picked over
3 C. sweet, fresh pressed apple cider
1 bar agar (sea vegetable gelatin)
5 T. arrowroot powder
1/2 C cold apple cider
3 T. pure maple syrup
Juice and rind of 1/2 lemon

Combine berries with 3 C. cider in 2 qt. saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook until berries are softened and pop. Strain, pressing to extract juice, into a 4 cup glass measuring cup. Measure liquid and add enough cider or water to total 3 1/3 cups. Reserve pulp for another use. Return liquid to sauce pan. Soften agar under running water. Shred into cranberry-apple liquid. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer until agar dissolves. Dilute arrowroot in the 1/2 cup cold cider. Add with maple syrup to agar mixture. Cook on high heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and is clear. Remove pot from heat. Add lemon juice and rind. Pour into cooled, prebaked crust and set aside to cool at room temp. or refrigerate for two hours or until set. Serve as is, or with a dollop of whipped cream, or low fat yogurt.

Apparently there are trends in eating styles, much as there are in the world of fashion. Big, slouchy sweaters, high sneakers (laces untied for some strange reason), padded shoulders and even ankle sox that were in vogue when I was in high school, are tops in the current fashions. Not surprisingly restaurants offering such fare as goat cheese, roast quail on beet greens, abalone burgers or picked trout, are now catering to requests for simpler regional American dishes. About as basic as one can get, is a luncheon served for $5 in a popular Washington, D.C. restaurant. In great demand is their peanut butter and jelly (marshmallow fluff, if preferred), sandwich, glass of milk and toll house cookies for dessert. With a little luck, it may become acceptable once again to 'fess up to a love of calorie-ladden puddings, hot out of the oven on a frosty fall night. Here is how Doris Stone prepares this old fashioned

PIONEER BREAD PUDDING

2 C. milk
3 T. butter
1/4 C. sugar
2 eggs
Pinch of salt
1/2 tsp. vanilla
2 C. bread cubes
Ground nutmeg

Scald milk with butter and sugar. Beat eggs slightly and add salt. Gradually stir in warm milk and vanilla. Place bread in buttered casserole and pour milk mix over bread. Sprinkle with nutmeg. Set baking dish in pan of warm water. Bake at 350 for one hour.

Just like Saturday's frankfurters and beans, chicken and dumplings were once standard fare for Sunday dinner. Should that happy day return, leftovers could be used for Anne Shire's recipe for

HOT CHICKEN SALAD

2 C. cooked chicken, cubed
1 1/2 C. celery, thinly sliced
1 C. mayonnaise
1/2 C. toasted slivered almonds
2 tsp. ea. lemon juice and grated onion
1/2 tsp. salt, dash pepper
1 C. bread crumbs, toasted
1/2 C. grated Parmesan cheese

Combine all ingredients except bread and cheese in large bowl. Toss lightly until mixed thoroughly. Spoon into baking dish. Sprinkle with bread cubes and cheese. Bake at 450 for 15 min. or until bubbly. Serves six.

PASTA WITH PEAS

1 12 pz. pkg. frozen filled pasta such as raviolini, fresh egg noodles or tortellini
3 to 4 qts. boiling water
3 c. shelled peas, or frozen tiny peas, thawed
2 T butter or oleo
1/8 tsp. freshly grated nutmeg
1 1/2 to 2 c. milk
1 egg, beaten
1c. shredded Parmesan or grated Cheese.

Drop pasta or noodles into rapidly boiling water. When water resumes boiling, cook as directed on package, then add peas and cook until tender. Drain peas and pasta. In a large skillet melt butter. Add nutmeg and 1 1/2 c. of milk. Add peas and pasta and bring to rapid boil. Remove from heat and stir in egg. Mix in 1 c. cheese. If mixture is too thick, add more milk. Sprinkle with more Parmesan. Serves 4 as main dish, or 6 as first-course.

Gloria federal $ relief

Hurricane Gloria is now just an entry in the history of meteorology, and we are all grateful that it failed to live up to its advance billing as one of the worst storms of the century. Civil defense officials and residents of southeastern Massachusetts, who still have vivid memories of the Blizzard of 1978 and the devastating losses it inflicted in our area, made an all-out effort to prevent loss of life and damage to property. Unfortunately, little could be done to avert the power outages—lasting almost a week in some locations—which resulted from Gloria's high winds.

As of this writing, it appears highly unlikely that the President will declare Massachusetts a national disaster area, as there was no major damage to streets, highways and bridges. There is still a possibility, however, that the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration will make their own disaster area designations, probably on a county by county basis. This would make homeowners, businesses and farmers, under certain conditions, eligible for low interest loans to cover uninsured losses caused by the hurricane. Anyone interested in learning more about potential federal assistance may contact one of our district offices in Hanover, Hyannis, or New Bedford.

Crafts people can use state promotion program

Crafts persons and food purveyors in the area may participate in a program sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Commerce and the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture to promote the sale of their products.

A survey is being conducted under the Crafted in Massachusetts Program to assess the need for promotional assistance in the production and marketing of specialty food items and hand-crafted goods.

Craft persons and producers of food products who are interested in starting their own businesses may participate in the survey by writing for a questionaire to Sheila Feeney, Crafted in Massachusetts, Department of Commerce, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, MA 02202.

Sculptor creates art from life on a farm

"In order to maintain accuracy in my work," White said, "I measure everything I can think of, to proportion it properly. This gives the piece its own distinctive look.

A plastine (clay) sculpture is made which is then cast in plaster. More detail is added before it is cast in bronze. At this point, more fine finishing and sand blasting is required before the color tones are applied with chemicals.

The fine finishing work demands precise adjustments. And although White lost the use of one eye 15 years ago when a finishing tool he was using exploded, his work continues with no evidence of diminishing quality.

However, White feels uncomfortable at times, fearing "this might account for discrepancies." But this statement comes from a man who demands the ultimate in perfection from his work.

White's bronze sculptures have won three awards in different categories from the New York Sculpture Society. This year, he has entered a horse created in striking red tones.

White is deeply honored that the MSPCA has selected his art work for exhibit. The appreciation is also extended from the state organization. A spokesman for the MSPCA said, "The horse has played a significent role in the MSPCA's history; we are therefore particularly proud to have in our possession a work of art which so particularly pays tribute to the power, grace and majesty of the horse."

White's sculptures are on permanent display at the Arvest gallery, 77 Newberry Street in Boston. Here one can see and feel the majesty he has created in bronze.

World headquarters to expand on Elm Street

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was with love, patience and a perspective toward the past that Hubert van der Lugt restored the former Thomas Beal homestead on Elm Street.

And now it is with that same devotion to history that he plans a new addition to his company's world headquarters.

The antique Cape-style residence was purchased by van der Lugt three and a half years ago. Until that time, his Woodland Drive home served as the office for Hub Shipping Co. He and his wife, Wilhelmina, began the enterprise from a single room within their home.

The dilapidated building on Elm Street was fastidiously converted over the next year into an office building for eight employees. It was a painstaking effort that required research, architectural expertise and a lot of money. But van der Lugt, an affable man with a keen sense of marketing and business acumen, explains the renovation as "my hobby. Some people have boats. This building is my boat."

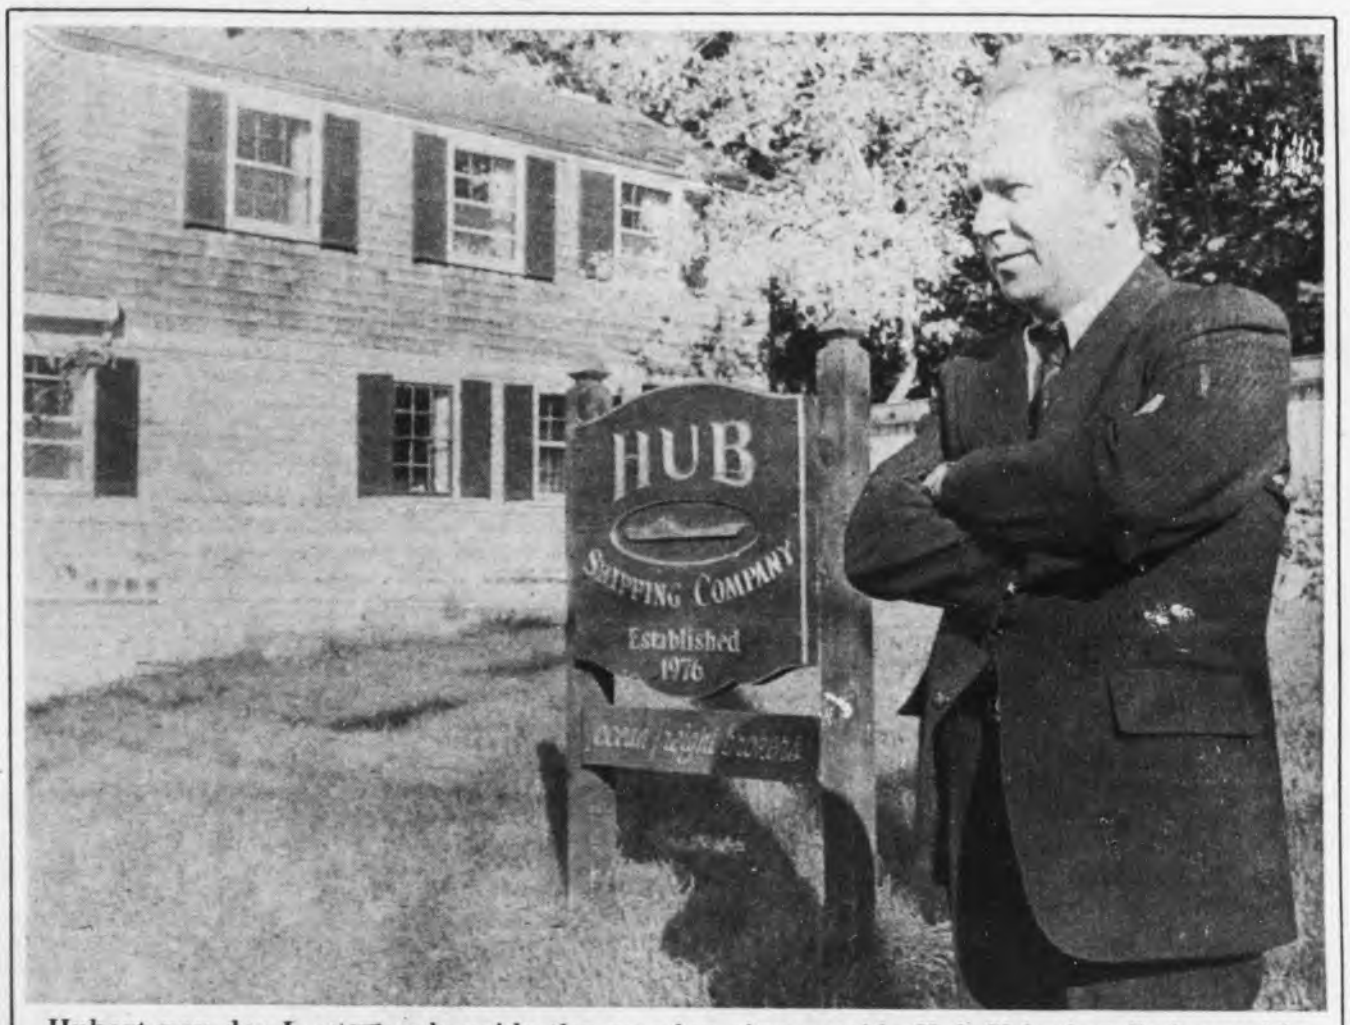
The Hub Shipping office is located in a residential business-zoned area on Elm Street. Prior to van der Lugt's ownership, it had been a home and antique store. The original owner was a Cohasset cobbler named Thomas Beal. It was he, a simple man, according to van der Lugt's research, who constructed the two-story wooden structure. "The lines of the house and the interior of the original house was very simple, very plain," he explained. "The home had been renovated in the early 1900's and all of Beal's original work was covered over in plaster and paint. I wanted to restore it to its original design, as much as possible. I wanted to keep this house the way Beal would have wanted it."

It was not an easy task to undertake. Pealing a layer of history from this house would not be as simple as flipping through a do-it-yourself manual. Van der Lugt enlisted the help of Steve Baker, an architect from Hingham whose favorite projects include restoration work.

"He came in here, looked around and knew exactly what he wanted to do. I liked what he talked about, but I never interfered. He did whatever he wanted - and he gutted everything," the owner recalled.

A tour of the Hub Shipping headquarters is like reliving the years of Cohasset's past. The years when Cohasset was the 'hub' of small port shipbuilding. "I love the connection history has provided us. Here we have a home constructed during Cohasset's days as a busy shipbuilding center. And now it operates as the headquarters of a company that exports U.S. products across the world. Although Thomas Beal was a cobbler, another Beal two generations later was a shipwright. His name is mentioned in the Maritime Museum located right down the street. In fact, the original name of Elm Street was Ship Cove Lane.

"Now that all the original elm trees have disappeared from the street, I'd love to see it renamed Ship Cove Lane. But that's another story," he laughed.



With renovations to the original home complete, van der Lugt is busily planning a second project. This would include a 3853 square foot addition to the existing building. In his inimitable way, van der Lugt explained, "it's going to absolutely blend into this building. It's going to be as crooked as hell."

What he actually means is that the addition, as drawn by Hingham architect James Shipsky, will not be straight lines, custom-made, plush carpeted, glass and brick exterior. It will be clapboards, posts and beams, tiles and wood floors, Colonial-shaded paints and his personal touch, a huge working fireplace.

Shipsky actually toured the Louis Walinsky residence further down the street to view the fireplace within that home. The Walinsky's house was built long before the Beal home was constructed in 1830, but the renovation work had uncovered a fireplace similar to the one in the Walinsky's antique.

It had long since been dismantled, hidden beneath layers of plaster and wallpaper. But once he viewed the remains of the original work, he insisted that a replica be added into the new plans.

"Won't it be great," he excitedly said, envisioning the fireplace and its simple mantle as the centerpiece of the addition. "On a cold, winter Friday afternoon. I'll say, 'let's have a fire.' We can enjoy the fire, just as if we were all in our home. Or, on Christmas Eve, we can light the fire and invite our neighbors and friends to enjoy a drink around the fireplace. It will be beautiful."

Hubert van der Lugt stands aside the wooden sign outside Hub Shipping Co.'s world headquarters on Elm Street.

What the two-story addition will house, according to the owner, is a large front hallway (that's where the fireplace will be) and a porch connecting the existing building to the addition. The entrance way will contain a cathedral ceiling, an idea van der Lugt 'stole' from the new Boston Hotel near Quincy Market.

The second floor will contain two offices. A current employee will move to one of the new offices, and her existing office will be used for file and records storage.

There are currently six employees in Cohasset, van der Lugt explained, two less than when the company first occupied the home in 1981. There are also two branch offices in Savannah, Ga., and St. John's, New Brunswick.

But Cohasset will always be home to van der Lugt, who emigrated from Holland with his wife and three children in 1970. This is where van der Lugt intends to remain. "Although Hub Shipping and the Hub Forwarding Co. are world-wide exporters, this is where the business is transacted. I have visitors come to Cohasset from all over the world. I have a business associate fly into New York, and then meet me in Cohasset," he said. "I show off this office to all my visitors - from Japan, Europe, everywhere. I love to show them this beautiful town and I always take them to a Cohasset restaurant. You can always take them to a Boston restaurant, but Cohasset is different for them and they love that."

Van der Lugt is a man in love with this town, its history and its people. While he was in the midst of renovations, his appreciative neighbors presented him with antiques befitting the style he was attempting to recreate. A cobbler's shoe-stretcher, a ship's pulley, and many other items hang with pride from walls and beams throughout the offices.

He is anxious to reciprocate their show of affection by ensuring them the new addition will be constructed with that same attention to historical detail.

"I'm not even having a poured concrete foundation," he said. "I intend to purchase huge blocks of granite, hopefully the same granite that came from the Cohasset quarry. A concrete foundation wouldn't look correct." Another touch will be the landscaping which will be a duplicate of the ground coverings at the Historical Society's museums on Elm Street. "It's all going to blend together," he predicted.

Sadly, the original plans for the addition were constructed around the giant elm that once graced the front yard of Hub Shipping. But three years ago, one great branch and then another fell to Dutch Elm disease and the final elm tree on that street succumbed to a bulldozer's plow.

"I felt terrible, but we had to take it out. Now there are no original elm trees left on Elm Street," van der Lugt noted.

He intends to "take a long time" to complete his next building project. "I'm in no hurry," he said. "I'd like to begin in the spring and finish in September. I'll have plenty of time to get that fireplace ready for the following Christmas."

In the meantime, he and his wife, who proudly followed through on other plans and became U.S. citizens this year, will continue to operate this worldwide enterprise within the small, antique surroundings of Cohasset.

"We may be an international company," he said this week. "But we think of our business as a Mom and Pop store. And even though a lot of work and money will go into this addition, I think of it as fun. It's going to be a lot of fun."

Before the 'fun' begins, van der Lugt realizes his plans must meet the approval of various town boards. Among the officials he must convince, is the sewer commission. Because the office is located on the town's sewer system, van der Lugt must seek the commission's approval for expansion.

He is convinced the addition will not add to the town's limited sewer capacity. Prior to Hub Shipping, previous occupants used an average of 6500 and 7000 gallons of water each year. Since 1983, Hub Shipping has had an annual average of 3400 gallons.

"I really don't see how we will increase the sewer useage here. We have less employees now than when we first began. And we don't cook here. I hope everything can be settled. I'm sure it can. This will be a beautiful place - a nice addition to this neighborhood," he said.

Tuck this tomato message away for next year

If Jack Frost has been our way and green tomatoes are no more, just tuck this recipe away for next year, but don't lose it, for it sounds good to me. Alice Bertolami sent it along with a note, saying: "While waiting for the lights to go on, I used the radio more than usual. Heard a good easy recipe by Paul Parent for green tomatoes left in the garden by Hurricane Gloria, called:

GREEN TOMATO JELLY

3 C. green tomatoes (chopped fine, or blender)
2 C. sugar
6 oz. pkg. raspberry jello
In pan bring to a rolling boil, then simmer for 20 min. Allow to cool. Sterilize jars by boiling for 10 min. Melt parafin wax and pour over jelly. Store in refrigerator.

Mother Nature has a way of controlling our lives and sometimes I wonder how farmers ever manage to make a living. Even our eating habits affect their means of livelihood, and cattle ranchers lament the decline in red-meat consumption. Dairy farmers sell fewer eggs, butter and milk, as health-conscious people watch their calories and cholesterol. Hurricane Gloria raised havoc in our apple orchards, but left enough of this fall's crop for desserts such as this one which Millie Carr shares with us.

APPLE TORTE

1 egg
1/2 C. butter
3/4 C. sugar
2 C. grated raw apples
1 C. flour
1 tsp. soda
1/2 tsp. ea. nutmeg and cinnamon
1/2 chopped nuts
Cream butter with sugar and add egg. Blend in apples, then dry ingredients. Add nuts. Pour batter into 9x9" pan. Bake at 350 for 30 to 35 min. or until done. NOTE: Served warm with cream or ice cream, the torte tasted good when I served it the other evening, but if you have the time, here is how to make the

SAUCE

1/2 C. butter
1/2 C. cream or evaporated milk
Vanilla
1/2 C. each white and brown sugar
Combine all ingredients and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Serve warm sauce over torte. Serves approximately 8.

Daylight Savings Time draws to an end this weekend — not exactly a time for rejoicing in our house. Gone for yet another year are sunny afternoons that need no headlights as we scurry home from errands and pleasant evenings outdoors with warm breezes that make eating outside a treat. Still, dinner by candlelight makes anything taste a little better, even as simple a dish as this:

BEEF UPSIDE-DOWN PIE

1/2 lb. ground beef
3/4 C. ea. chopped onion and celery
1/4 C. chopped green pepper
2 T. shortening
1 can condensed tomato soup
1 tsp. prepared mustard
1 1/2 C. prepared biscuit mix
1/3 C. milk

Cook beef, onion, celery and green pepper in large skillet until lightly browned. Stir in soup and mustard. Combine biscuit mix and milk. Roll or pat dough into a circle, slightly smaller than the skillet. Spread meat mixture evenly over bottom of the skillet. Put biscuit on top. Bake in 450 oven for 15 min. Turn out on platter so that biscuit is on bottom. Serves six.

It gave me a nice, warm feeling to read a letter from Bill Doren of Pastene Wine and Food in Somerville telling me that lots of you ordered their cookbook which I mentioned last month. "Favorite Recipes from the Kitchens of Pastene," a marvelous collection, seems to have a wide appeal. Julia Farrell of Newton signed herself "another Irishman who likes Italian Food," so true of so many. Bill has a few more books left for $2.50, the handling and mailing costs, if you write to him at 12 First Ave., Somerville 02143.

☐When a person insists on standing on his dignity, it may be because he has an insecure footing.

☐ Mark Twain said a diplomat "is a person sent abroad to lie for his country." Oliver Herford said about the same thing: "Diplomacy—lying in state." Oliver is the wit who said, "My wife has a whim of iron."

☐Here are two versions of appeasement:

"An appeaser is one who feeds a crocodile—hoping it will eat him last." Winston Churchill.

"Appeasers believe that if you keep on throwing steaks to a tiger, the tiger will become a vegetarian." Heywood Broun.

☐Sen. Carter Glass was a master of sarcasm. His habit of speaking from the corner of his mouth once prompted President Woodrow Wilson to say: "Glass is the only man I ever saw who could whisper in his own ear."

☐ A midwestern newspaper points out that the U.S. government prints and distributes the speeches made by congressmen, without the slightest profit. It might also be added they are read the same way.

☐ "Representative government," Teddy Roosevelt used to say, "is that which elects six men in favor of a thing and six against it, and wonders why something isn't done."

☐The longest golf hole in the world is the 17th hole at a course in North Carolina. It reasures 745 yards, and is a par six.

☐Popular government is still only a theory because no government has ever been found that is popular. This recalls a famous definition by D.K. Chesterton: "Democracy means government by the uneducated, while aristocracy means goverment by the badly educated."

☐ A $300 TV tube will protect a 10 cent fuse by blowing first.

☐In the gaslit era, Billy Sunday, the evangelist, used to amuse audiences at revival meetings by pretending to wrestle with the devil. Billy Graham, the contemporary Billy Sunday, sometimes tells his audiences: "The devil is making his pitch!" This almost sounds as if he were saying, "Get thee behind me, Satan, and push me along."

"... Will Rogers never met a man he didn't like, except me ...!"

Politicus — by David A. Mittell, Jr.

Roving Reporter I: Escape from Seattle

As much as I love the physical and human as opposed to the political and polemical sides of Massachusetts, it becomes necessary now and then to cross the Berkshires and see what human beings are up to in the late civilized regions of the continent. Having started the baby boom, and having soon thereafter partaken of 48 states and 7 Canadian provinces, 1985 demanded a new spin-off in the situation comedy of my life: British Columbia.

As a committee of my creditors insisted I hie by Amtrak's slightly less costly package via Chicago, St. Paul, and Seattle, I passed up Rail Canada's renowned transcontinental via Pembroke (Ontario, please), Regina, and Saskatoon. The first observation I wish to make is that of all things great and small and for good or ill that Ronald Reagan has done in this decade, the illest informed and the stuckest in his own turgid ideology was his dastardly proposal to vivisect Amtrak.

I've written on Amtrak in this space so I won't have my way with your patience here. Suffice it to say that the train is the only civilized way for the Greater South Shorean (the rumor I live in Jamaica Plain is a rumor) to go. Horror shows brought on by regulated private carriers are long since a thing of the past. Today's Amtrak is much more fun than flying, and why anybody with a choice would put the bottom of his boot to a bus is beyond me.

What I adore most about train travel is neither its regained excellence, nor what in grade school I called the "beautiful forspacious skies," nor the chance to really relax and do some reading. What I most adore about this mode of movement is that on the train the rider who is open to it has a wonderful opportunity to get reacquainted with the essential goodness of the American People. Whereas on a plane one is liable to be wedged against a stuffy Greater North Shorean who will not deign to take his nose out of the Wall Street Journal the entire flight, on the train one mingles with families and retired couples, with students and pretty girls and soldiers.

An episode, one of many, will illustrate the train's capacity for drawing the aging open mind out of itself. On the Boston to Chicago segment of my journey (Amtrak's "Lake Shore Limited"), I made friends with a mother and daughter from Columbia Point—the all black housing project in Dorchester—who were on their way to visit aunts and uncles on the south side of Chicago.

As we warmed up to each other (a bottle of rum from the mother's purse was helpful) I observed and was reminded of the deep religious faith and easy humor, both of which are such attractive characteristics of black Americans. I would like to think that I remain open to such rediscoveries at all times, but I do not. I would walk by this mother and this daughter a thousand times on the streets of Boston—probably averting my eyes once satisfied I was not to be robbed—before I would nod and say hello.

Seattle. The last time I was in Seattle was 1971. The Peace Movement, having failed to stop the War, was diffusing into an anarchic war on convention. In that spirit that summer, a couple of my Harvard classmates were in Seattle attempting a sort of combination college prank/political statement which involved erecting a giant inflatable "art" work above the fountain, which is roughly the size of three tennis courts, at the 1962 World's Fair site.

The erection failed to inflate, but it drew thousands, which in retrospect was a perfect metaphor of the Peace Movement. Being back in Seattle in 1985, I found myself powerfully drawn to that fountain of my youth where the "inflatable" had waxed so flaccid in 1971. Alas, the spot was deserted, and a solitary leaflet stuck on a telephone pole announcing "Give peace a chance dance October 12" was the only reminder Seattle held for me of a youthful tide we all thought would come in forever.

All my visions may be mere projections of the deterioration of youthful commitments, but Seattle's tide seems to me to have gone out in other ways, even as in different other ways it has been coming in. I remember Seattle as a small, friendly city, Godsent majestically between two jewels, Puget Sound and Mount Rainier. In 1985 it is become big, and one no longer senses the goodness of the American People in the air.

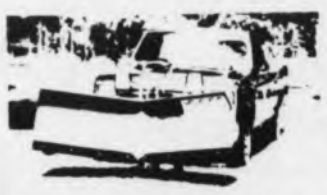
It may have been just a run of bad luck, but from Avis to the Space Needle to the Kingdome to the bank where I changed into Canadian money, I kept running into officious clerks whose Eastern clones had done so much to make me need a vacation. Such clerks have a thin, cloying veneer of obsequiousness, but when the compter transforms my ha-penny refund into a fifty dollar overdraught, they reveal why they are on earth: to get me steamed. Be assured that when I get steamed on vacation I really get steamed.

Such, I believe, is what bigness and the computer have done to everyday business intercourse. The customer confronts stinking, programmed "hi my name is Mammalia i'm your waitress" talk. But since the words are corporate there is no role left for any real give-and-take between the waitress and the waited upon, and there is no recourse for either party when a problem crops up.

The waitress/clerk, forbidden from anything approaching a decision, retreats into officiousness, and the waited upon/customer, utterly unable to gain any satisfaction, gets steamed. Eventually the transaction between impotents becomes the tenor of exchange. Clerks no longer need boorish customers to make them officious, and customers go from appointment to appointment half steamed.

One Seattle appointment worth mentioning on greater account than the air-head there who got me steamed was my visit to the Kingdome, which is Seattle's 1980 covered version of Fenway Park/Sullivan Stadium. I dropped by thinking of Francis Joyce of our own dear Convention Authority, whose proposal it is to create a similar public something near North Station

Not a good idea, Francis. The Kingdome is big and ugly and very un-Boston. Though practically new it has begun to age in that unique way that reeks only of public management. Worst of all, the Seattle papers are full of tales of Seattle City Councillors, including one running to run the Kingdome in a coming election, baiting and excoriating the owner of the beleaguered Mariners (a baseball team not founded by David Cutler.)



Worse than worst of all, taxes in Seattle, which in part finance the Kingdome's losses, bite hard every time you pay a bill, so much so that I wouldn't have dallied even if I had not been hot-to-trot to touch the bottom of my boot to the soil of British Columbia. Let that be a lesson to Ray Flynn and the many others who think they can hire out-of-state tourists to finance our own extravagance in government.

* * * *

Seattle has grown impressively since 1971. Both the Kingdome and a not unattractive 70-story building have been completed, and dozens of other building projects are in progress, but the homogenized culture has arrived too. Since the "homogenized culture" is what I most wanted to escape this October, I couldn't be out of Seattle 1985 fast enough.

Where are all the Vietnam prisoners?

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

The American flag is becalmed in front of a quiet-looking well-kept Grove Street home on a clear, crisp autumn afternoon.

But inside, while still pleasant, all is activity and determination.

This is the Randolph home of Maureen Dunn, who is busy completing plans for a Veterans Day pilgrimage to New York City.

Dunn is the wife of Commander Joseph Dunn, a U.S. Navy carrier pilot shot down over Chinese territory in the height of the Vietnam War in 1968. A lieutenant at the time, Joseph Dunn was listed as missing in action for more than 13 years before defense officials declared he was presumed dead.

It is for Cdr. Dunn and some 2,500 other U.S. servicemen that Dunn and nearly 50 Massachusetts residents will travel to the Vietnamese Mission to the United Nations on Nov. 11.

Dunn, who is Randolph's chairman of selectmen, says participants want to underscore the nationwide writing campaign sponsored by the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia.

She says the Vietnamese cannot be expected to publicize the number of letters they receive, so the group is travelling to make sure the letters are acknowledged.

"Do I believe Joseph is alive? No. Do I believe they know what happened to him? Definitely," she said in an interview last week. "My husband's case is one of the clearest on record among those missing in action."

The letter campaign here is being brought to veterans', civic and fraternal organizations, police and fire departments, schools and bingo nights — in short, wherever large numbers of people congregate. Dunn is now producing a public-service announcement to be shown on 30 area cable-television systems, and will bring the letter campaign door-to-door in Randolph Oct. 27. Similar canvassing may also be done in Braintree and Weymouth, she said.

Dunn says that, even if all prisoners of the Vietnam War are dead, it's time Hanoi returned the remaining bodies to the U.S. and accounted for all others. While encouraged by recent U.S.-Vietnam talks in New York City and Bangkok, Thailand, Dunn says the National League wants Vietnam to know Americans still care about their missing servicemen.

All area residents are encouraged by the league to write to Vietnam's UN ambassador (see box). "This goes beyond partisan politics," Dunn said. "It's purely a humanitarian effort, no matter where you stand."

The talks, last held in Bangkok Sept. 27, center on the details of allowing American excavation crews to search for missing GIs. Dunn said the letter campaign is the league's way of saying, "let's keep up the progress."

"We aren't being as critical of the Vietnamese now that some progress is being made," she said. "What we're looking for is Vietnam's promise that it will live up to its commitment to account for all missing servicemen within two years."

Despite league pleas that the deadline be met, Dunn says she gets nervous when Vietnam mentions such a firm date.

"I get really nervous when I hear that," she said. "For too long, they've been doling out the bodies—three here, six there, another dozen later. With such a deadline, what's to stop them from giving us 400 names and saying, 'that's it'?"

Hanoi has a history of such behavior, she said.

"The (North) Vietnamese government told us in 1973 they knew of no more missing GIs. Since then, 115 have been accounted for. The rest belong here in the U.S.," she said.

American public opinion does have an effect on officials in Hanoi, Dunn maintains.

"We did another letter campaign in 1970, and when the POWs came back, all said their treatment had improved tremendously after 1970."

Missing Americans in Southeast Asia break down into two groups: about 1,200 who are classified as 'bodies not recovered,' those who are presumed dead, and the remainder, who are still considered prisoners of war or missing in action.

Lt. Dunn's capture is unique in that he is one of only six who were taken prisoner by the Chinese. Dunn, who was promoted to commander by the Navy about six years ago, was shot down over Hainan Island Feb. 14, 1968, while returning to his aircraft carrier in the South China Sea. Evidence that he was captured and not killed is overwhelming, Dunn said.

Mrs. Maureen Dunn

"He was seen in his parachute and in a life raft on the water," she said. "He used a location beeper, which is activated manually, at least twice. Seven hours after he was shot down, he used the beeper for 20 minutes."

Dunn said she has maintained close contact with the military, which she calls "supportive" of the plight of POW-MIA families. They were helpful even before Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger issued a directive to all personnel to assist and support the families, she said.

She acknowledged that keeping interest in the subject high is becoming more difficult. Combat veterans tell Dunn the war is past history, while the younger officers seem to have an "it can't happen to me" attitude, she said.

"I won't tolerate military officiousness anymore. It might not be next year, but it (war) will happen again."

Her eyes blaze as she says, "I tell the older ones, 'this could have happened to you. To the younger men, I say, 'it might well happen to you.' "

We've Got a Different Kind of Warehouse Job

Northeast Apparel's unique "Warehouse Team" takes pride in the job we can offer reliable, intelligent people like you. Instead of letting our people sit in front of an assembly line all day, we believe decision-making and responsibility can make your job more interesting, and our clothing merchandising/packaging operation more efficient. And with our busiest season approaching, we have a variety of Permanent Full-Time, Flexible Part-Time (day hours) and many temporary positions available for capable individuals with:

- The ability to think on your feet
- Willingness to work hard—and be rewarded with scheduled reviews and advancement
- Good math and organizational skills

We offer members of our team top wages and benefits, on-the-job-training, a generous store discount, and a friendly, fun environment. If you're looking for something better, we've got a different kind of job at Northeast Apparel.

Please call Terry at 848-8804, ext. 283 for an appointment, or stop by our conveniently located facility at One Northeast Way, Campanelli Industrial Park, in Braintree.

Cohasset Mariner

vol. VIII, no. 5 | 383-6731/545-7060 | thursday, october 31, 1985 | 35 cents

Developer proposes low, middle income units

Local developer Wayne Sawchuk is proposing a ten-acre, 30-unit low and middle income housing development along North Main Street.

In a preliminary report to the Cohasset Housing Authority this week, Sawchuk explained his intent to construct detached two or three-family units on a parcel of land directly across from Rosano Lane. Plans for the design and number of units have not been complete and are therefore not definitive, he told the authority members.

By accepting this proposal, the town would meet the state-mandated obligation to provide low and moderate income housing within the community. The state Executive Office of Communities and Development has threatened to cut off all state grant funding if that housing obligation is not met.

That state agency recently informed selectmen of the intended award of a $6,375 grant to train department heads in personnel management. But the grant will be contingent "upon the town resolving any outstanding issues" pursuant to the order for low and moderate income housing.

According to the developer, who is in the process of reviewing architect's designs for the homes, the building permit process will begin within the next few months. He told the board members Tuesday night that variances must be granted by the local zoning board in order to build the multi-family units within a 18,000 square foot parcel. The town's new zoning bylaws require one unit per 18,000 square feet in that area of town.

Sawchuk first came before the Housing Authority in April to discuss his intent to develop the property at 320 and 330 North Main Street. At that time, the members indicated their support of the project.

Under the federal TELLER program (Tax Exempt Local Loans to Encourage Rentals), the local Housing Authority must review the construction plans and review all bonds for construction and financing. The authority will also review all persons applying for the rental units.

The North Main Street property, which currently includes two existing homes, is under agreement for purchase by Sawchuk. There are no plans to demolish the existing structures, he told the authority members. They might be incorporated into the cluster-type development with two-family units contained in the buildings.

Sawchuck explained that in order to compensate for the cost of construction, the development will need about 30 units on the 1000-by-400 square foot parcel. Those homes will include units for low, middle and elderly residents.

"I am thinking of the moderate-income elderly, not about the poor elderly the Housing Authority has been concerned with," Sawchuk explained. "I am thinking about the single elderly woman living in a single-family home, who is having a hard time but is not destitute. This development will fill a different need in this community - for people who want to stay in Cohasset, but might not be able to afford a four-bedroom, two-bathroom Colonial for $250,000."

Among the residents Sawchuk expects will be attracted to the development are town employees, many of whom can not afford to live in Cohasset because of the real estate values here.

Toxic waste find spurs action by town to close Cohasset Heights

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The future of Cohasset Heights Ltd., the privately-operated commercial landfill, may rest in the hands of the state political bureaucracy.

After last week's incident, in which possible toxic chemicals were banned from their destination at the landfill, town officials may turn to the state administration for assistance.

It has been more than a month since the Water Commission has attempted to close down the commercial landfill. It has been over a year since engineers documented the evidence of chemical infiltration from the property's leachate.

The Board of Health has attempted through the court system to obtain some jurisdiction to monitor the contents brought to the site. Currently, the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) retains full legal authority to supervise the operation and expansion of the landfill.

But after a driver was stopped last week, carrying a load of suspected chemicals to the Crocker Lane property, the town might ask the Governor to supercede DEQE's authority and initiate tighter controls, or close down the industry located on Cohasset watershed land.

Water Commission Chairman Peter Pratt said this week that the town's special counsel in the matter, Michael Leone, is studying the options. One of those options may be to request that Town Meeting allow the commission to take immediate steps to close the site.

Another option may be to petition Governor Michael Dukakis to "test his commitment to the environment" and order the shutdown of the operation.

It will be a showdown, Pratt promised, between the state's repeated emphasis to find landfill sites, and the Governor's familiar promise to protect the environment and the public's right to safe drinking water.

"Is B.F.I. (Browning, Ferris, Inc., operators of Cohasset Heights Ltd.) more important to Mike Dukakis than the town of Cohasset ?" Pratt questioned. "It is my recommendation that the Water Commission find out. I would rather spend my time setting this issue before the Governor as a test of his commitment to the environment, than waiting for the states and feds to get into the picture.

"We at the local level knew something was going on and we've tried to act on it. If all our engineers' questions and solutions are correct, Cohasset is losing its water supply. And the state's (DEQE) track record has been zero."

Currently, Town Counsel Richard Henderson is reviewing the situation with Special Counsel Michael Leone. Leone was recently appointed to replace Atty. Charles Corkin who had been pursuing the case for the Board of Health and Water Commission.

Town boards to seek map change

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

In a joint meeting sponsored by the Conservation Commission Tuesday night, the town boards decided to pursue a plan to integrate the official Floodplain Watershed Protection map, the Assessor's map, a 1980 aerial topographical map, and to establish the topographical map as a legal tool.

Currently the floodplain map is the official town map. It is the only one that can be used legally to make zoning and building decisions. The topographical map is used as an aide. The committee agreed that the assessor's map "has no relation to reality."

Planning Board chairman Christine Basset agreed to have the planning board seek estimates from engineering firms for the price of resurveying the assessor's map, and to create scaled overlays of all three maps. Basset and building inspector Edward Poskus asked for estimates last year and anticipate a cost of $35-$40,000.

The issue will be presented to the selectmen to be placed on the warrant for the April town meeting.

Present at this meeting were representatives from the Board of Health, the Sewer Commission, Zoning Board of Appeals, the Planning Board and the Building Inspector. Diane Sullivan, representing the board of selectmen, said the omission of the board of assessors was an oversight on her part.

Sullivan said the meeting was organized as a result of an earlier discussion between the boards where they decided a consistent set of maps was needed to facilitate the processes of their boards.

While the assessor's map was a point of great concern, Bassett suggested that the assessor's should be represented before discussing it. She agreed to meet with them before seeking plans from engineers.

Questions were also raised about the inaccuracy of the floodplain map.

"The floodplain map is not supposed to be an exact representation. It is the language on the map that depicts where the floodplain exists," Barbara Powers explained.

Several people wanted to see if the topographical

Selectmen attend meeting

State-local relations, the environment and adoption of statewide municipal legislative policies were items that topped the agenda at the October 25-26 Annual Meeting and Trade Show of the Massachusetts Municipal Association in Hyannis, attended by Chairman Frank W. England , Vice Chairman Clifford Mitman Jr., and Selectmen Rocco F. Laugelle, Mary Jane E. McArthur and Diane C. Sullivan of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and Donald R. Andrew, executive secretary/town accountant.

At the meeting the Selectmen attended workshops entitled Municipal Law Update, Is Your Police Department Obeying the Law?, Police and Fire Employees Injured on Duty, General Municipal Liability, Licensing Procedures, The New Municipal World Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, Technical Assistance and the Municipal Data Bank: Find Out How These Department of Revenue Services Will Benefit You, Pensions and Computers: Your Questions First.

Questions were answered about issues affecting the Town of Cohasset and the board and executive secretary heard of other issues that will be of future concern to us all.

Massachusetts Municipal Association Director James Segel said he considered the event to be a success. "Our organization seeks to represent municipal interests statewide," he commented, "and active participation by our membership insures that the MMA will remain influential at the state level as well as in touch with local concerns."

More than 700 people attended the meeting—selectmen, mayors, managers, council members, finance committee members and other types of local officials from the Commonwealth.

Democratic brunch Nov. 3

Senator Gerard D'Amico (D-Worcester) will be the featured speaker at a Democratic party brunch Sunday, Nov. 3, 11 a.m., at Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, 44 Border Street.

D'Amico, a candidate for lieutenant governor, is Senate Chairman of the Committee on Education and a co-author of the state education reform act passed earlier this year.

The brunch, hosted by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, is sponsored by COOP-6, an association of South Shore Democratic Town Committees, including Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth.

Tickets are $10 per person and will be available at the door.

Fire chief interviews

Selectmen scheduled interviews with the five final candidates for Cohasset Fire Chief, Saturday, Nov. 9.

The board members will begin the meeting at 9 a.m. in the auditorium of the Town Hall. The session will conclude when all five candidates have been interviewed.

Selectmen are expected to name a new Fire Chief sometime in November.

King Street traffic

Sen. William Golden has referred a letter from King Street resident Daniel Cotton to the state Department of Public Works.

Sen. Golden requested the district traffic engineer study the traffic problem at the intersection of King and North Main Streets. Cotton wrote a letter Oct. 16 to selectmen and Sen. Golden, outlining the number of accidents which have occurred at the site.

According to Cotton, there have been six serious accidents in recent years. The King Street resident stated, "There is a tendency for Westbound traffic on Rte. 3A to maintain speed even when veering to the right on King Street. This tendency is heightened by the downward slope on 3A. Squealing tires are an everyday occurrence; near misses are too frequent for comfort."

Cotton detailed the number of accidents that have caused personal injury and repeated property damage. Several of the drivers have been cited for various motor vehicle offenses, including drunk driving.

He added, "Unless measures are taken to slow the speed of 3A, the situation will only worsen. Arnold Jenks and I would appreciate an opportunity to discuss this before the board."

Fuel assistance program

Cohasset residents may apply for participation in the South Shore Community Action's Fuel Assistance P...gram Wednesday, Nov. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at the new Senior Center office at the Community Center.

Individuals or families may apply for financial assistance to help pay their fuel bills if they meet the eligibility requirements.

Eligibility is based on gross annual income and the number of persons in the family.

The income requirements for receiving $750 are: One-member household, $6563; two-member, $8,813; three, $11,063; four, $13,313; five, $15,563; six, $17,813; seven, $20,063; and eight, $22,313.

The income requirements for receiving $500 are: One-member, $7,875; two, $10,575; three, $13,275; four, $15,975; five, $18,675; six, $21,375; seven, $24,075; and eight, $26,775.

Only one and two-member households qualify for assistance of $325. The income levels are $9,188 for one-member and $12,338 for two-member households.

Applicants must present proof of earnings for money which will be used to pay fuel bills from Oct. 1 through April 30. It can be used for oil, natural gas, electric and wood heat.

For more information, or to arrange for a home visit in order to apply, call the Social Service League office at 383-0771 or the Cohasset Community Center at 383-0088.

No liquor license for town land

Citing a problem of liability, selectmen voted Monday night not to grant any liquor licenses for events held on town property.

"We are opening ourselves up some serious problems if we grant these licenses," Selectman Mary Jane McArthur suggested.

The Board of Selectmen grants an average of three liquor licenses a year for events such as the Cohasset Rotary Race-By-The-Sea, and the South Shore Striders late summer roadrace. Both organizations held races this year in Cohasset, and dispensed free beer to the participants.

"I can't believe a paper cup of beer will make or break a sporting event," McArthur said as she recommended the ban on the licenses. The decision will affect only those licenses granted by the Board of Selectmen for events held on town property, such as the Town Hall and parking lot.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle agreed with the motion, saying "we don't realize just what we can and can't do and what our liabilities are. We can't be as free (to grant the licenses)."

Selectman Diane Sullivan said the board members were made aware of the possible liability during a Massachusetts Municipal Association seminar held this past weekend. "They explained it by saying the town is called a social host if the event is held on town property," she said, explaining the town could be held legally liable for any incident which might occur after a town-sanctioned event where people were are drinking. She also questioned whether the town is insured for such liability.

Speaking as a member of the Cohasset Rotary, sponsors of an annual 10 K roadrace, Martin Dooley said not allowing the dispensing of beer at the town parking lot "will be a tremendous burden" on the club. The Rotary uses the income from the race to support scholarships for Cohasset High School students. He said the beer is only dispensed free to adult runners as an enticement to attract participants.

He said without the beer, "you are encouraging a lot of private parties (after the race) without any control."

Selectman Laugelle answered that selectmen had to protect the town. "This is what we have to do," he answered.

Selectmen voted to initiate the ban. They will inform the Rotary and the Striders of their decision.

Doctor says Conley may return

Selectmen's labor counsel will review a physician's report that a Cohasset firefighter who has filed for disability retirement, return to work on a temporary basis as an office worker.

Dr. David Segal advised selectmen in a written report that Firefighter Richard Conley be allowed to return to work "in a sedentary type of work where he can change positions from sitting to standing, where lifting is limited to 20 - 30 lbs. and only from the waist up."

Firefighter Conley has been on injury leave from the department for several months. In September, he applied for disability retirement. On order from selectmen, Conley was examined by Dr. Segal. The physician noted in his report to selectmen that Conley indicated he would only return to work as a firefighter.

According to Dr. Segal's report, Firefighter Conley will not consider accepting a position other than a firefighter. If that decision is not acceptable to selectmen, Dr. Segal wrote, Firefighter Conley indicated he would prefer to be discharged from the Cohasset Fire Department.

The physician stated in his medical report to the Board of Selectmen that Firefighter Conley suffers from a partial disability which prevents him from returning to work as a firefighter. "He is not totally disabled from gainful employment. He should be able to be employed in a sedentary type of work."

He continued, "prolonged walking, climbing, and bending should be avoided. I will recommend . . . a rehabilitation program. I will also advise that Conley be employed for the first six months for three to four hours a day, then his condition can be re-assessed. If he continues to improve, his working hours may be increased."

A disability retirement pension is 72 percent of the employee's active duty salary.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

SYMPTOMS OTHER THAN PAIN

If a nerve root sustains an irritation, it can become deformed, compressed or angulated. Its blood supply can become hampered. The resulting symptoms can be other than typical pain. Muscles may be weakened. The skin of the leg and foot may become insensitive. There are also other symptoms such as pins and needles, tingling, heaviness and cramps. They all can be the result of something affecting the nerve in its passage from the spine. A common experience pointing out this type of symptom is a foot that "goes to sleep." The loss of feeling and muscle power is the result of the nerve's blood supply being obstructed. As the nerve recovers, there is a feeling of tingling before it comes back to normal.

Chiropractic addresses a variety of problems and discomforts. Actually the ultimate goal is a state of total well-being. By addressing points of intereference along the spinal column, chiropractic applications will eliminate such problems thus allowing Mother Nature to resume her instructions to all parts of the body with her healing processes that have taken place since time immemorial. For answers to you questions about chiropractic, we invite you to call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hw., Suite 12. Unusual and difficult cases invited. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

HINT:
The cause of any of the above symptoms may lie in the area of the spine which is the chiropractor's area of expertise.

Sawchuk plans rental housing on N. Main St.

According to the developer, the units would be long term rentals extended to the life of the construction bonds. Sawchuk envisioned the rentals rates expanding over a lease of five or ten years.

He told the Authority members that the project would be for all ages, not simply elderly residents. Under the federal funding guidelines, the number of people are limited by the number of bedrooms in each unit.

"There'll probably be not more than two bedrooms in a unit - they'll probably all be two bedroom. So the most there can be in one family will be four," he explained.

A survey of the people in Cohasset interested in this type of housing demonstrated to the developer that "I couldn't buildenoughof these units," he said.

The developer said he has not decided the mix of low and moderate income and elderly. "I have to do a financial statement of the project," he explained, "anduntilI know what the design will be, I don't know what the rentals will be."

Although an architect has yet to be selected, Sawchuk noted that "everyone I have seen thinks the units should be scattered homes of three units, set about one or two acres from the next home." One design resembles a two-family townhouse, he added.

The cost of the project will depend on what the town will allow for density, according to Sawchuk. If the town will only allow 18 units, he explained, the units will cost more than if he is allowed to construct 30 units. Plans for 30 units would allow for three units per acre "which is not a substantial amount (of density)" he told the Authority members.

The development will include a separate new road leading from North Main Street into the rear of the property.

Authority Chairman Marguerite Libby said the development meets a tremendous need in the community for affordable housing. Sawchuk said he envisioned the development as affordable housing for elderly people who would like to remain in the community, and for young couples unable to afford to purchase a home of their own.

According to federal regulations, the housing rental rates must be at least 20 percent of the income of low and moderate income persons. The Authority may determine the annual rental rate for individuals, although it can not exceed 24 percent of the person's income.

Authority member Ralph Perroncello asked Sawchuk why he was planning the development, if he does not expect a profit.

"If I could recover all the expenses and create a development and not have it cost me, I do not have a problem with that," he answered, "and if I found tax advantages, I wouldn't object to that.

"It is a definite need, but alternative housing has not been accomplished in Cohasset," he continued.

In other business, the Housing Authority announced the receipt of a $300,000 state grant to renovate and reconstruct the Harborview housing complex.

The Housing Authority worked for a year on the grant application process.

The renovation and reconstruction project will encompass two phases. The first part will include emergency work, the strengthening of all balcony railings and bridges, exterior railing landings, exterior doors and installation of smoke detectors.

The other phase will include drainage, shingle siding, terraces, a shed patio door storm, bathroom tiles, interior partment paint, parking, mailbox receptacle, and patio glass replacement.

Authority members said the repairs are necessary for the complex which was constructed ten years ago. Bridges connecting the elderly housing units were condemned last year by the building inspector and were temporarily srengthened. The grant will allow for more longterm, extensive repair work.

The Authority also announced its acceptance as a mobile issuing authority for applicants for state-subsidized low and moderate income housing.

According to the standards set by the federal Housing and Urban Development (HUD) agency, a three bedroom unit may be rented for $652 per month and a two-bedroom may rent for $533 a month.

What this approval means is that someone seeking low or moderate income housing in town may pick up an application from the Housing Authority at 60 Elm Street. If a Cohasset landlord is participating in the Section 8 Certificate Housing program, a Cohasset resident will be given preference for that unit.

The Cohasset Housing Authority may distribute six certificates for housing units in communities throughout the state.

By participating in the Certificate program, a landlord may rent a three-bedroom home for $652 a month, including utilities. A two-bedroom unit may be rented for $533 including utilities. The Housing Authority may decide, however, to raise that rental figure by a maximum of 20 percent.

According to Housing Authority Director Barbara Clain, a certificate is issued to a person who then must locate a landlord willing to participate in the HUD program. Wherever they rent, that local Authority will take over responsibility for inspection of the home.

Clarification

In last week's story on Hub Shipping Co. of Elm Street, we indicated the annual average water consumption of the company was 3400 cubic gallons.

That number is the actual water use during 1983 alone. The actual use the following year was 3200 cubic gallons, and in 1985, actual water use dropped to 2200 cubic gallons. That averages to an annual water consumption rate of 2900 cubic gallons for the past three years.

Also, the planned addition to the former Thomas Beal home, is 988 square feet. The previously-mentioned figure of 3853 square feet is the measurement of the entire Hub Shipping Co. property.

State says more detail needed on sewer plan

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has issued its final report to the Cohasset Sewer Commission, reiterating its position that Cohasset's alternative wastewater disposal plan "clearly does not meet those (Federal) standards and therefore cannot be approved."

The DEQE is required to review the state Division of Water Pollution Control (DWPC)'s rejection of the Cohasset plan. That step is required before the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) begins review of the state's denial of project funding. The EPA still has the authority to reject a request by Cohasset to appeal the state's decision.

According to DEQE Commissioner S. Russell Sylva, "my agency is anxious to arrive at a satisfactory resolution of the water quality problems facing Cohasset. Furthermore, your obligation to eliminate those problems is independent of any funding to perform the necessary work which may be available from State or Federal grant programs."

Portions of the Cohasset program, Sylva said, may qualify under the EPA construction grants programs, and others may qualify for funding under the state collector sewer grant program, he added. To be considered for funding in Fiscal Year 1987, Cohasset must file a Project Information Form (PIF) by the end of November.

The DEQE issued its rejection of the Cohasset wastewater plan June 28. The town responded July 9.

In this latest correspondence dated Oct. 15, Sylva expressed his concern about a statement made July 9 by the sewer commission. That letter from the Cohasset Sewer Commission stated, "Unless such funding will now be provided, we are reluctant to engage in further detailed evaluations or analyses that would not reasonably be expected to alter the Town's decision as to its basic plan and could not be addressed just as effectively in Step. 2."

Sylva responded that in addition to the statement made by the sewer commission, the town failed to submit necessary detailed information as requested by the state. "Without the necessary information, for those reasons your plan is not in conformance with applicable Federal guidelines. In the absence of the requested information and the level of detail we have prescribed, your plan clearly does not meet those standards and therefore can not be approved."

Specific comments by DEQE on the Cohasset plan include a request that Cohasset perform proper cost-effective analyses of the alternatives, in accordance with Federal regulation. Cohasset has refused to make the analysis, saying "it is not worth the added cost and time." Commissioner Sylva disagreed, saying it is mandatory if the town tends to seek Federal funding.

DEQE repeats funding denial

The commissioner also said one of the major difficulties in evaluating Cohasset's proposal "is the uncertainty as to which rehabilitation technique (for on-site septic systems) you proposed to use in which locations." The DWPC had requested additional information, he said, which Cohasset refused to forward. The town's sewer commissioners stated to the DWPC "the requested level of detail is entirely possible (but costly)." Sylva said the response was unacceptable.

"Due to the significant concerns about this aspect of the plan, including those from your own Board of Health and Board of Water Commissioners, and specifically including the questions concerning the acceptability of your plan under Title 5, you must address this issue adequately before we will deem this aspect of your plan approvable," Sylva stated.

The DEQE commissioner also noted his "no confidence" in Cohasset's assertions that alternative sewers will be more cost-effective than conventional sewers. The DEQE stated its need for detailed, accurate documentation "not simply unsupported contentions," Sylva added. "In any event, be advised that the alternative collector sewers you propose are not eligible for funding under the Federal/State program. But they may be considered under the 557 program (state collector sewer grants program).

"For the record, contrary to your repeated assertions, the Division, through the Chapter 557 collector sewer program, has funded alternative sewers," he continued. "They have been approved when found based on adequate technical and economic analyses to be the proper solution in the particular situation."

The commissioner also noted the Hull connection funding approval "is informal and not officially before us." Sylva added, "the Division (of Water Pollution Control) will not consider the Hull interconnection portion of the Cohasset plan until the Final Hull Phase 2 report has been formally submitted, evaluated and approved."

He also expressed concern that an Intermunicipal Agreement between Hull and Cohasset has yet to be signed, "raising concerns" that the agreement may never be consummated. He recommended that until an agreement is approved and ratified, the DWPC should not commit grant funds to Cohasset for the Hull interconnection.

The commissioner concluded, "on the basis of information contained, we have determined to affirm the DWPC's position. Cohasset should also realize that its continued refusal to accept the Division's position, which has been supported by the EPA, has led to unncessary delays in project implentation and may jeopardize future grant funds."

Telephone repairs in Cohasset

The telecommunications needs of Cohasset residents are growing and New England Telephone's network is growing with them.

Jacqueline Jung, New England Telephone public relations manager, said company technicians are installing two subscriber carrier systems and about seven miles of cable along Route 3A to prepare for expected increases in business and residential calling volumes.

"The subscriber carrier systems use digital technology to increase the call carrying capability of existing telephone cable—enabling only four lines to do the work of 96 lines," said Jung.

"These cost-efficient digital systems transform large amounts of voice, data and video transmissions into millions of small bits of information which can be sent—simultaneously—over a single telephone line at high speeds while retaining clear transmission."

☐ Junior linebacker Bob Donahue of Cosasset, has been named Bates College football player of the week by head coach Web Harrison for the Bobcats' Oct. 5 game against Hamilton. He was cited for his outstanding play in Bates' 26-20 loss to the highly rated Continentals.

Donahue, Bates' middle linebacker, was the Bobcats' leading tackler against Hamilton, with nine solos and five assists to his credit. The son of Robert and Barbara Donahue of 185 Jerusalem Rd. he is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Deerfield Academy.

☐ Julie M. Hoogeveen of Cohasset has been named to Wheaton's NCAA Division III cross country team. Julie, a sophomore at Wheaton College is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hoogeveen of 22 Pratt Ct., Cohasset.

The cross country team has a tough schedule, competing against some of the best Division, I, II and III teams across New England.

☐ Carla Lucas of Cohasset has been named to Wheaton's NCAA Division III soccer team. Lucas, a freshman at Wheaton College, is the daughter of Thomas Lucas of Courne Rock, Cohasset.

The soccer team's schedule is a tough one that includes games against some of the best Division II and Division III college teams across New England.

☐ Julie May Hoogeveen of Cohasset, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence J. Hoogeveen, was named to the dean's list at Wheaton College for the spring semester.

☐ It was good to see Mark Murphy home last week sporting a fabulous beard after his three-week Outward Bound adventure in Maine. Mark, a 1984 CHS graduate, is now involved in a program called Dynamy in Worcester. He is working in his first internship as a campaign manager for George Russell, who is running for city council.

☐ You may not have recognized him right away, but yes, that was Mark Murphy that you saw recently. The beard was grown while Mark was on his Outward Bound program, which took place in Maine and lasted for three weeks. Now Mark is in Worcester, Mass, in Dynamy. He is in his first internship and is working on a campaign for George Russell, who is running for City Council. Mark says he loves it in Worcester! It was good seeing him "around town," and all of his fellow 1984 CHS grads thought so too.

☐ Don't miss the production of "Oliver" this Nov. 1st and 2nd . .. Andrew Kuhn is Oliver, the same little guy who is an All-star little league baseball player . . . a lot of other Cohassetites make up the cast, don't miss it. It is held in the Hingham High School auditorium, at 8 p.m. and tickets are $4 for students, $5 for adults. "Oliver;" is presented by the Hingham Civic Music Theatre.

☐ Hearty congratulations are in order for the girls field hockey team! Hope I don't junx them by writing this, but as this is being written, they are undefeated! With two games left, that is a great feat. This is the first time in ten years that the CHS field hockey has been the league champs, watch for them in the states!

☐ Of course when one mentions states, we have to mention the mighty soccer team, who has a grand record and only two losses . . . watch for the Shultz brothers to leave their mark in the States, they are sure to do a super job.

☐ The football team did an outstanding job in their win over Manchester. With three key players side-lined with injuries, it just shows how a team can pull together and get the job done nicely. Homecoming was a huge success, with the attendance almost reaching 1,000 people. Wouldn't it be nice if that could continue for our team! They sure do deserve it, they're a hard working crew.

☐ The Halloween fair was certainly successful, and the kiddos had a wonderful time with the games, face painting, decorating, etc. Anyone that came by wished that they were young again, or at least a younster for the day, it looked that entertaining!

☐ Hope you have your ticket for the Pancake Breakfast, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, to be held on Nov. 3rd at the Deer Hill School from 8 to noon. A mere $2 per ticket, what a bargain! See your Rotarian for tickets, or buy them at the door, but be sure to go.

We'd say this is a grand wizard if ever there was one! This thought-filled child takes a moment's break from Saturday's activities at the Community Center. (Bern Caughey)

☐ It's with a great deal of regret that we must bid Amy and Jeff Loughran good-bye. They are retiring to the Cape soon, and will surely be missed. Jeff was instrumental in so many youth programs . . . remember him running the roller coaster for the CYAA in an effort to raise funds to keep athletics going (he was one of the founders of that organization, The Cohasset Youth Athletic Association). He was at every Midget football game, every dance was either sponsored by him or attended by him and Amy. They are a couple in a million and will be missed by all . . . be sure to keep in touch you two!

☐ We always knew that Bill Enos is a "jack of all trades," add another feat to the list!! Spotted him out in front of his house last weekend, painting it! Doing a great job, and chatting with all that passed by.

☐ John Rattenbury, of 1 Briarwood Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rattenbury, has accepted a four-year Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps (NROTC) Scholarship and is attending Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, New York.

MIDN John Rattenbury completed a one week basic training week prior to starting school last September, and is currently undergoing military training in addition to attending regular classes at Rensselaer. His scholarship pays for tuition, books, and fees at Rensselaer, which amounts to over $10,000 each year. If John continues with the program, upon graduation in 1989, he will be commissioned an Ensign in the United States Navy.

☐ That's the news for the week, keep it coming.

Senior citizens news . . .

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club's Fair was a day of enjoyment and fun for the many guests.

The big prize winners were Mabel Iben, the color T.V set, and Beatrice Hearns, 10 lbs. of lobster. The board of directors and Chairman Don White and his many workers sincerely thank all the merchants for their valuable gifts, for the successful raffle.

We thank you: Central Market, Sea and Cheese, W.N. Drumney, Taxaco Station, Woolworth's, Red Lion Inn, Exxon Station, Colonial Pharmacy, Charlotte's, Mark's Station, Chocolate Factory, Strawberry Parfait, Bergson's, Dependable Cleaners, In Stitches, Hugo's Lighthouse, Fleming's, Noble Camera Shop, and Mitchell's Gas Station.

Sixty Plus Club will meet Thursday, Nov. 21 at Trueblood Hall. Lunch is at noon. Helen Jason, entertainment chairperson, announced the entertainment will be the "Royal Garden Dixieland Band," Mr. Lincoln Crocker, director, from South Weymouth. Music will include modern favorites and southern tunes.

December will be the gala Christmas party. Details later.

Fifty residents attended the Penny Sale at Harborview Hall, proceeds to be donated to the Shuttle Bus Fund.

Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Death of a Salesman," at Town Hall, Sunday, Nov. 17 at 2 p.m. and invites all senior citizens to a special show, no admission charge.

South Shore senior residents will be invited to receive the Silver Pages Directory, with an individual identification discount card.

After ten years, a mortgage ends

A significant milestone in the 57-year history of the Cohasset Historical Society was reached last Sunday, Oct. 27, when the Society held an Open House at its recently-renovated headquarters building, the Caleb Lothrop House.

Featured during the event was a symbolic "burning of the mortgage" at which the 10 year-old mortgage of the Lothrop House was put to rest.

A successful fundraising drive undertaken last summer by the Society saw members and friends respond to a matching challenge grant from the South Shore Playhouse Associates to raise the amount needed to retire the 1975 mortgage granted to the Society by the Cohasset Savings Bank.

Historical Society members (l. to r.) Robert James and Daniel Campbell begin the ceremonies to extinguish the mortgage held on the Society's Lothrop House.
(Bern Caughey)

The Sunday "mortgage burning" party took place just 10 years to the day from the date upon which the original Lothrop House Mortgage had been recorded at Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

The Caleb Lothrop House itself is a handsome brick-ended Georgian home dating from 1823 and built by Cohasset businessman Caleb Lothrop. Today it houses the Society's extensive library and archives of local and area history and serves as an increasingly popular center of community activity.

Prior to the symbolic "mortgage burning" ceremony, Society President Constance W. Parker and Lothrop House Trustee Burtram Pratt spoke, noting the decade-long project to renovate and restore this fine old Cohasset home, and extending thanks to all who helped make the project a success.

The "mortgage burning" itself (and it was a prepared copy of the original document that was consumed) was presided over by past President of the Cohasset Savings Bank, Daniel Campbell, and Society Treasurer and long-time member, Robert B. James.

Also prominent at the Open House was an exhibit of Society-owned paintings recently restored with grant funding from the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council. Pictured on the oil paintings were a number of scenes of 19th century Cohasset, including view of the Harbor (then called "Ship Cove"), a painting of the "First Black Rock House" built on Jerusalem Road by Capt. Nathaniel Nichols, and one of Christopher James' Farmhouse today called the Red Lion Inn.

Also shown was a striking portrait of Minot's Light Assistant Keeper Roscoe Green Lopaus painted by artist R. Atkinson Fox. All of the paintings on display were restored by Cohasset's Liz Crosby Studio.

The gala Open House event was graced by the presence of a number of ladies, both friends and members of the Society, attired in 19th century gowns and costumes. An estimated 75 to 80 persons attended the gala Lothrop House celebration.

Dump the dump

It was a near miss last Thursday morning, as a truck driver was about to dump some curious substance within the privately-owned Cohasset Heights landfill.

Unfortunately for him, he was nearly overcome by fumes from his haul. Fortunately for us, he never got to his destination.

The contents of the mystery refuse remain to be determined. But the content labels of the containers inside the truck seem to indicate they were chemicals used frequently by plumbers. The acid and base chemicals mixed, caused a noxious, smoky reaction that alerted a Hingham police officer.

a Hingham police officer.

Once he pulled the driver over, the chain of events evolved quickly, but not quietly.

There was quite a stir at the entrance to the landfill for most of the day. As Fire Chief Martin Dooley took charge at the site, cruisers, town officials, and passersby filled the area.

There was confusion and some quick tempers throughout the long day, but that was to be expected. What we had here was the first solid piece of possible evidence that items other than harmless commercial debris was being deposited at the landfill.

It was vital that samples of this refuse be stored in order to test the contents. If the samples are found to be toxic, the town has positive evidence that this private landfill is using this property as a dumping ground for hazardous materials.

If the contents are indeed poisonous substances, the town must act quickly to close down this site. For how many other times has such material been dumped onto our watershed land? How many other times did a driver make it all the way to the landfill, carrying his deadly haul?

No one is there to monitor the debris as it is deposited within the DEQE-supervised landfill. Is this type of trash routinely dumped in our town?

As Water Commissioner Peter Pratt has stated, there are two divergent interests at work here. One, is the state's continual search for needed landfill property. There has to be selected areas for the disposal of our voluminous household trash, commercial debris, and hazardous materials.

But our interest remains paramount. We must protect our present and future water supply. We must not allow chemicals to seep from Cohasset Heights into our water supply land. Yet this has been a documented occurrence.

Now that we have the possible evidence in hand, don't let it slip through. With cool heads, but a burning interest to rid our land of dangerous poisons, we urge town officials to seek the closure of Cohasset Heights Ltd.

Reasons for opposition

(This letter was sent to the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, outlining the Town Government Structure Committee's decision to oppose combining the position of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant. Ed. Note)

Dear Mr. England:

At a meeting of the Town Government Structure Committee held Tuesday, Oct. 22, the following votes were taken:

- by a 4-1 vote, the Committee voted AGAINST recommending that the town create the single position of Executive Secretary/Town Accountant;
- by a 3-2 vote, the Committee voted AGAINST recommending that the Selectmen be authorized to appoint one person to both the positions of Executive Secretary and Town Accountant.

The Committee will take a vote at the meeting to be held on Tuesday, Nov. 19 regarding the specific warrant article for the December 9 Special Town Meeting which will propose to create the single position of Executive Secretary/Town Accountant, and the recommendation that the Committee will make to Town Meeting with regard to that article.

Our votes with regard to this proposal come after extensive research, which began on May 9, 1985, when the Selectmen voted to appoint a single person to fill both positions. We have discussed this question at a total of eight meetings of the Committee, have discussed the questions involved with officials in 10 towns, some with a similar joint position, and have met twice with the current Executive Secretary/Town Accountant and a Selectman. We have researched this issue more than any other matter that has come before the Committee.

The Committee has the greatest respect for the skills and capabilities of the person currently filling the combined position, and considered the question at hand without regard for personalities, but with great consideration for what would be in the best interests of the Town of Cohasset in the long run.

We realize that this question is of great importance for the future ability of the town to effectively manage it's affairs, and hope that the Selectmen will carefully consider their position.

In making its' votes, the Committee had the following concerns which they hope the Selectmen and the Town will take into account:

- The term of the contract, three years, for the current occupant of the position if the Town Meeting votes to create the position, is too long. Committee members felt that a three-year period is too long fo the Town to get locked into in case the new position does not work out.
- The salary offered, $38,000 a year now and $40,000 a year if the joint position is established, was felt by Committee members to be too high as compared to other towns.
- There is a potential conflict of interest between the two positions — between the position of Executive Secretary, who is supposed to get things done for the Selectmen, and the Town Accountant, who is supposed to be the "watchdog" for all accounts in the town, including that of the Selectmen.

Letters

- There is probably too much work involved in the combined position for one person to effectively handle in a normal work week. The combined position is probably too much for a single person. We have had reports that there is currently some problem with accessability for town residents and town employees for contacting the Executive Secretary, who is working very long hours.
- Creating the joint position, or appointing the same person to both positions, in effect reduces the position of Executive Secretary to a part-time position, and reduces the position of Town Accountant to a part-time position. Both positions have been full-time in Cohasset for some time — no one has made the argument that there was a need to reduce those positions from full-time to part-time.
- The town needs more management capability in Town Hall, not less. Creating the joint position, or appointing one person to both positions, in effect reduces the management capability of the town —a move that is most likely not cost-effective in the long run.

I, and the rest of the committee, would like to meet with the Selectmen to discuss this matter before the December 9 Special Town Meeting. Please let me know when is a most convenient time to meet.

Sincerely,
John K. McNabb, Jr.
Chairman
Committee to Survey Structure and Functions of Town Government

Square one ?

To the Editor:

At next Town meeting, voters will be asked to approve still more money for legal defense of our self-inflicted sewer dilemma. Although the non-cooperation of the Sewer Commissioners with the funding and regulatory authority, while loudly blaming the State for capriciousness, has placed the Town in a very defensive position when taken to court, a weak case still requires counsel.

But we'd better review the quality of that counsel before throwing more money down the rat hole. The two briefs submitted to the EPA were easily shot down by the counter brief from DEQE. Several of the citations were shown to be distortions; in a court our counsel might have been rebuked. Advice from counsel so far seems to have reinforced the wrong headed path the town has taken—a path that leads inevitably to a costly defense. And, probably, going back to square one to build what we should have done in the first place—only now at much increased cost and a lower level of funding than once was available.

'This isn't a Scituate vs. Cohasset issue' R. Thorndike

Letters

To the Editor:

I have decided that it is time for me to set my story straight. As a concerned neighbor, I started attending Cohasset Town Meetings six years ago, when the warrant included alternative sites for a new waste water treatment plant. Living where I do, any form of "outfall" or "effluent" will directly effect our swimming and shellfishing here at "The Glades."

According to Cohasset Sewer Commissioner Charles DeSantis, the present sewage treatment plant operates above its intended capacity...80 to 90 percent of the time. This is not the only problem with raw or untreated sewage in Cohasset but it is a large part of the problem.

Heavy commercial development along Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing Highway) has added to the problem. Cohasset Board of Health's own test results show counts in culverts and brooks (along Rte. 3A) over 2,000 fecal bacteria colonies/100 ml. No action was taken against a (certain) restaurant's failing septic system in the area until I pressed my case with the Cohasset Board of Health. All of these tributaries and culverts end up in Cohasset Harbor. Here in Scituate, restaurants and caterers have been closed by the Board of Health until failing systems are repaired or replaced.

There have also been articles in local newspapers recently addressing oil spills in brooks leading to the harbor. The press has not noted yet, that fuel oil is spilled into the harbor on an almost daily basis when a local fuel company fills lobster boats each morning. This is against the law, yet there does not seem to be any local enforcement.

I was the person who leaked to the press the story about the High School emergency generator pump never being installed after sitting there for five years. The fact that hundreds of gallons of raw sewage leaked into the wetlands during and following the Cohasset High football game is horrifying to me. A test of the "goodies" in the high school cesspool on the Sunday following the hurricane by the Sewer Department, showed a count of 17,000 fecal bacteria colonies/100 ml.

The foam that we all see in Cohasset Harbor is one of the biggest culprits. It is this foam that settles on the "Whitehead, Bassing, Briggs Harbor and Glades" flats, contaminating the shellfish as it goes. Some Cohasset officials say that the foam comes from the gulf. This is partly true. The Board of Health's own test results along Border Street show counts over 1,300 fecal bacteria colonies/100 ml. They say that this is most likely due to a broken or cracked sewer line damaged about one year ago due to blasting. Nothing has been done to find it or fix it as of this writing. When the tide comes in twice a day, any pollutants in the harbor escape into the gulf through the Mill River Bridge; the gulf is now so polluted that the small fish that eat mosquito larvae cannot survive for very long. Maybe this is why the mosquitoes seem to be getting worse each year. I am told you can't even catch eels in the gulf anymore. The whole ecological situation in Cohasset seems to be getting worse monthly.

There are also many private septic systems that are failing along the Cohasset shoreline. In the summer, counts are dangerously high. There is a trench near the Bellarmine House which seems to be perhaps the largest single source of residential pollution getting into the harbor. Hundreds and hundreds of gallons of raw sewage enter the harbor's mouth weekly here in the summer.

The Cohasset Conservation Commissions' budget is about one tenth (1/10) that of Scituate and Hingham. Without a good budget or even a part-time agent, how should this board be expected to control the building restrictions in and near "wetlands."

In conclusion, there are many problems in Cohasset combining to form a very serious health problem. Perhaps an indepth pollution control study is needed in the area. It would be terrific if the Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Sewer Commissioners, Harbor Master, Advisory Committee and other concerned people would get together to help solve some of the immediate problems. I am willing to help in any way I can.

I certainly do appreciate the vast support that I have received from many people and families in Cohasset and Scituate. This is not a Scituate vs. Cohasset issue. I am concerned, as I am a very close neighbor to Cohasset.

Greetings from another world

To the Editor:

Once again it's greetings from Bintulu.

Wish you were here, and I was back there. It has been over three months since I arrived. Originally I thought that be now I would be back in Cohasset, on the sailing club veranda telling stories of my jungle adventures. Unfortunately, my return, although inevitable, will be delayed. At the fertilizer plant we are doing a new dance. One step forward and two steps backward. I wonder if I can get a Thanksgiving turkey in Bintulu?

As I mentioned in the last letter, I visited a longhouse in the jungle. One of my friends had a boat and we all piled in for a trip up the river. My friend had visited this particular longhouse before, and was going to take us there. We traveled about 20 miles up the river, passing several logging camps. Much of Asia's hardwoods comes from the island of Borneo. Here they harvest and ship it to Japan, then it returns as the packing crates for imported motorcycles. Along the beach there are hundreds of massive mahogany logs that have fallen off ships and wash ashore. When you picnic on the beach and build a fire I'd guess that you burn about $50 worth of mahogany to cook a hot dog.

Getting back to the river, we turned up a small branch and were cruising along. There was absolutely no sign of human habitation. It was easy to imagine that it was the first time a motorboat had been there. All of a sudden a well-built dock appeared. We tied up and followed the path back to the longhouse. I was hesitant since they had no idea that visitors were on their way. My friends assured me that it was common in this part of the world to just drop in unannounced. We walked about 200 yards along the path, past rubber trees and a rice patty, until we came upon the longhouse. Immediately there were cries of "mat salleh," (white man) and about five children crowded in the doorway trying to get a look at us.

A longhouse is the traditional way that the natives live. It is literally one long house. I found out later that although many of the people are related, it is actually an entire village living under one roof. This longhouse was built on stilts and was probably 100 yards long. I have heard stories of longhouses up to 300 yards long. Inside there is a covered porch running the full length where most of the residents gather. Off the porch are many individual rooms or apartments. I didn't count them myself, but I was told that there were 28. There is also a second open porch where they dry their rice, pepper and cure the natural rubber which they harvest to sell.

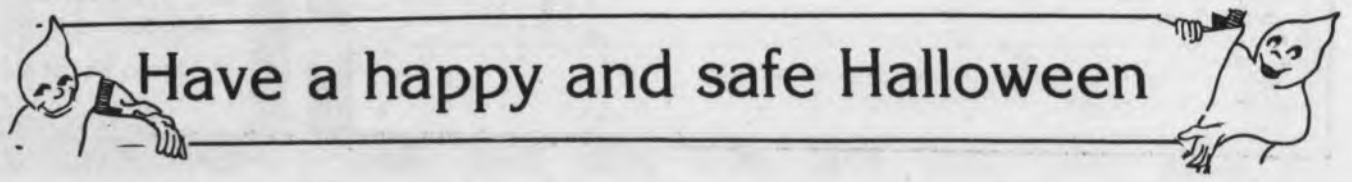
We arrived in the early afternoon when the sun is hottest, so most of the people were relaxing on the porch. Once inside we were greeted by the taraman, the leader of the longhouse. Walking through we were besieged by people asking us questions. At least I think they were questions. Nobody there spoke English, and although one of our group spoke Malay, there were too many for him to translate. What surprised me the most was the friendliness of all the people there. Even though none of them could speak English, they were all asking us to sit with them and talk. Although this is the only longhouse I have visited, I've heard that this is the type of reception one can expect at any of them.

Your first impression is that life there is very primitive. Running water is unheard of. Yet on closer inspection one finds a diesel generator and several televisions. Even on Borneo people still need their weekly dose of Dallas. Incidentally, they are also tough bargainers. I bought a hand made native skirt and it wasn't cheap.

Another interesting thing I've done here is to visit the Niah Caves near Brunei. These caves provide most of the worlds supply of the bird nests used for, you guessed it, bird nest soup.

Other news and random thoughts from the front . . .

We had a party around Labor Day . Here they don't celebrate Labor Day, so we said it was a party to 'celebrate the end of summer and the beginning of the Monsoon season.' I suppose it's no wonder that they call us the crazy Americans. Our timing was right, it has rained practically every day since then.



The cockroach count has slowed down considerably. Only 30 to date. The only other big news is that Eng Tat, our grocer, has finally gotten Heinz Ketchup.

As for me I'm doing fine. I've lost some weight, and even tried (and failed) to grow a mustache. Other than that, I am hoping to be walking my dog, and riding my bicycle along Cohasset's beautiful streets soon.

Looking for treasures

Mr. Joseph Becker's sixth grade class at Deer Hill School has a budding naturalist! He is Eric Waal.

Eric makes his own crab traps and even designs them himself. He is planning to take scuba diving lessons this winter and begin diving to investigate wrecks.

Maybe Eric will discover sunken treasure as well as crab. Good luck, Eric!

Cambridge lawyer visits class

Mr. Denzil D. McKenzie, who has a law practice in Cambridge, was a guest speaker during Mr. Edward F. Sheehan's senior-elective law class at Cohasset High School, Thursday morning, Oct. 24.

McKenzie was introduced to seniors by Sandy Best, a personal friend. During his talk McKenzie outlined the general areas of law available to those entering the field today. He also commented about the background training any young person needs to become a lawyer.

'My initial background was in economics and liberal arts," he said. "Don't forgo an introduction to the sciences before you concentrate on the law. He added that "you (future lawyers) will need a wealth of information in a variety of subjects before you can call youself prepared to practice law."

McKenzie advised the seniors who were truly interested in legal work to "speak to lawyers and find out exactly what they do on a day-to-day basis. This way you can see whether or not the field of law is worthy of the time and great expense."

When one student asked him if he felt the new seat belt law was a violation of individual rights, he commented, "All laws restrict the activities of some in the name of the good of the majority."

Calendar

Thursday, Oct. 31: Happy Halloween!
Friday, Nov. 1:
Saturday, Nov. 2: Bottle and can donation fundraiser, 9 to 11 a.m., Osgood parking lot. Halloween Dance, CHS upstairs gym, 7 to 10 p.m.
Sunday, Nov. 3: CHS Football vs. Abington, 1:30 p.m.
Wednesday, Nov. 6: CHS/PSO "Parent to Parent" meeting, 7:30 p.m. at CHS New Study Hall.
Upcoming: Thursday, Nov. 14: Release Day.
Friday, Nov. 29 and Saturday, Nov. 30: PSO Sports Market auction, raffle, used-sports equipment sale.

Parents of seniors

The Guidance Department and the PSO are jointly sponsoring a "Parent to Parent" meeting Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 7:30 p.m. in the New Study Hall.

The major focus of the evening will be the college admissions process, college applications, the role of parents in the college decisions process, the college interview, funding a college education, etc. Parents who have been through this sometimes frustrating and confusing experience will discuss their perceptions and try to make suggestions to help parents less experienced. We look forward to a productive program and hope that all parents of seniors will be able to attend.

Speaking/listening workshop

Teachers at the Deer Hill School will hold a follow-up workshop on "Improving Speaking and Listening Skills in Any Classroom," on Thursday, Nov. 14 in the Deer Hill Cafeteria.

The first session introduced teachers to eight strategies for improving speaking and listening skills which were tried out in classrooms over the past six weeks. One week prior to the second session, teachers will be provided with a one page feedback sheet to be filled out by all staff participating, the results of which will be used to plan the second session.

Two months after the last session, teachers will receive another feedback sheet to assess the long range impact of the sessions.

As a result of participating in these sessions, teachers should be able to use at least five new methods of improving speaking and listening skills, as evidenced by informal classroom measures taken by teachers during the course of their work and reported on the above-named forms.

Publication funds needed

The PSO committee, along with our teachers and our principal, are excited at the prospect of the first "Osgood's Own Authors and Artists" hitting the presses in the Spring of 1986. However, without public support, help and contributions, we will never meet our printing budget.

This publication, to be done in a magazine format, will contain at least one piece of work from each child in the Osgood School this year. It was conceived as a vehicle to stimulate good self image and a desire to want to produce creative material.

The objective is to involve no other civic or school groups. It is to be a publication of children's works, nothing edited by adults. During the year it is hoped that the children, with the help of their classroom teacher, will keep a folder of works they feel are good. Then, at the appropriate time, they will go through the folders and each child will select his or her publication selection.

Can drive

Each month on the first Saturday, from 9 to 11 a.m. there will be a bottle and can drive in the parking lot of the Joseph Osgood School. The PSO will be there to take any plastic bottle or cans that have labels on them from you. Please no glass bottles. The money earned on these Saturdays will be deposited in the Literary Fund account for printing costs.

Tom Lucas honored

After many years of dedicated teaching, Tom Lucas is retiring from the Cohasset schools.

All well-wishers will gather Thursday, Oct. 31, at 3:30 p.m. to toast the beginning of a new chapter in Tom's life, at The Rocks in Hull. We request a donation of $5 toward a gift. Please see Pat Plante or Colleen Lucas.

Councils set meeting date

The Cohasset schools have organized School Improvement Councils at Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood. Their responsibility is to determine the use of the funds available to Cohasset through the Educational Reform Act of July 23, 1985. All meetings of the School Improvement Councils are open to the public. The council members welcome parental and community input. The next meeting at Joseph Osgood is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 7.

School on Saturday

"Comment allez vous?"
"We're going to build this neat house."
"Look at my design."
"It was fun."

Thirteen elementary students from the Deer Hill School boarded the bus after their first exposure to "Super Saturday."

For the fifth semester Cohasset is participating in an off-campus enrichment program offered at Massasoit Community College.

For six consecutive Saturdays children in grades four through eight attend this program for gifted and talented youngsters. The students choose mini-courses from a wide variety of offerings taught by college and public school faculty.

Courses such as: Photography, Conversational French, Realistic Drawing and Architecture, provide opportunities to explore topics not normally offered at the elementary level. The high spirits and enthusiasm our students exhibited this first week bode well for a great fall term.

If you would like information about the spring semester for "Super Saturday," please call Mrs. D. Wondolowski, enrichment coordinator at the Deer Hill School, 383-6115.

Super sports market

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) is in the process of organizing a super sporting Thanksgiving weekend, packed with activities, auctions, raffles, celebrities, entertainment, refreshments, etc.

Scheduled to coincide with the Thursday, November 28, CHS vs. Hull H.S. football game at 10 a.m., the PSO Sports Market festivities will begin at Town Hall at 8:30 a.m. with a pre-game CHS alumni coffee. Picnic breakfasts will be offered.

During the weekend there will be an auction of such delights as:

A week in Hawaii for two, including airfare and hotel;

A hurricane/blackout survival kit, including generator and chain saw;

A Cruise 'N' Carry outboard motor; and

A weekend at the Sheraton Boston.

There will be movies, popcorn, balloons for the kids. Exhibitors will raffle sports' equipment items. A highlight of the weekend will be a sports' equipment sale of used athletic gear donated wholly or on consignment by Cohasset residents.

Please save, gather and give such articles as:

Skates, skateboards, skis, skiboots, basketballs, soccerballs, tennis racquets, sports shoes, hockey sticks, pucks, fishing gear, golf clubs and balls.

All sports articles may be dropped off at Robin Suhrbier's Barn, 178 South Main Street, Cohasset, to be donated or offered at a 50% consignment to the

PSO Sports Market poster

Peter Kasperowicz, a 10th grader at Cohasset High School, during art class designed an eye-catching drawing for the PSO Sports Market poster, which will be seen all over town very soon.

Peter is not involved in sports himself, but hopes to attend some of the many activities planned by the PSO for their Thanksgiving weekend sports market at Cohasset Town Hall.

Highlights of the PSO Sports Market will be: a cheerleader workshop, football clinic, kids movies, used sports equipment sale, auction and raffle.

Board delays Heather Dr. request

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspodent

The board of health postponed a decision on a five-house development on Heather Drive and refused a variance to build a septic tank on Riverview Drive.

Contractor, Joseph Crossen, attended the health board meeting Monday night with plans for a five-house septic system. Crossen had reduced the number of houses from 11 to five, using two lots to accommodate the septic tanks for four of the houses. He proposed that those houses be sold with two lots.

The board members were concerned that future owners of the lots would build on the combined lots, violating health board regulations for watershed protection.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said Crossen could have an agreement drawn up with the deed which would bind the landowners not to build. He could also take his plans back to the planning board and have the property lines redrawn.

Crossen, who is currently bound by 1983 regulations, voiced concern that the second option might put him under the more stringent 1985 regulations.

The one lot that will not be changed requires a retaining wall.

The board voted to table their decision until Crossen could insure them that the property owners would not be able to build additional structures.

Several of the lots require retaining walls. Crossen is scheduled to meet with the board Nov. 25 with the appropriate covenants and variances for the retailing walls.

RIVERVIEW DRIVE

After reviewing the case of Frank Wheelright, the board decided not to approve a variance from their moratorium on the construction of septic systems on Riverview Drive.

Wheelright requested the variance on the grounds that he had suffered an injustice. Wheelright had a permit to construct the septic tank when a building moratorium was put in effect in May.

Since then, that moratorium was declared illegal by the Attorney General and the board of health's own moratorium is still in effect.

"I could have built my septic system then, but not my house," said Wheelright, "Now I can build my house and not by septic system."

Board member C. Michael Bliss conceded that it was a hardship case, calling it a Catch-22, but that the moratorium was still in effect.

"We cannot grant any variances until we get the results from CDM." CDM is the engineering group hired by the board to protect the water supply. Health Agent Joseph Godzik agreed with Wheelright that the septic system was more than adequate to protect the watershed.

Bliss objected, saying that they could not know that for certain until he saw the CDM results.

"As soon as the moratorium is lifted you will have the first shot to present your case or you can wait until April when by-laws are passed upon CDM's recommendation."

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business, the board voted unanimously to accept the plans of Mr. Fitsimmons of 116 Doane St. for a new septic tank. He is relocating his system which is now in the water.

Jack Rudolph of Wheelright Farms requested permission to hook up a 1/2 bath in a model home. It will be connected to two septic tanks totalling 23,000 gallons until the leaching field is completed.

John Burns moved to approve the request for a 75-day time period beginning Nov. 1.

The board will meet again Nov. 25.

Car Imports will not expand

After hearing neighbors' opposition to expansion of a used car business, selectmen decided this week to deny a request to sell more vehicles on the Rte. 3A property.

In a related issue, selectmen decided to review all licenses for businesses selling second hand vehicles, with the intention of issuing no more.

Peter Capazzola requested a Class II license to sell and service 40 used vehicles at Cohasset Imports. The owner currently has a license to sell and service 20 cars; a number, he said, that does not allow him enough profit to renovate and maintain the property.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle opposed the expansion, noting that he has passed the property when 32 cars have been on the lot. "What will you do if we give you (a license for) 40?" he asked, "go to 60?"

Capazzola answered that some of the time he has cars over the license limit because he also services the cars he sells. He said a limit of 20 was "unreasonable" and explained that 40 would serve as "a guide, a limit" that he would not exceed.

Laugelle answered that he doesn't want Rte. 3A to evolve into "a car row," noting that the original license issued to that property limited the number of cars to five or ten.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she saw 34 cars on the lot at one time, although the building inspector said the owner was cooperative in removing them

'Oliver' continues this weekend in Hingham

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

From the opening number of "Food Glorious Food" to the final reprise of "Reviewing the Situation" the cast of "Oliver" did not let their audience go for a moment.

The musical, produced by the Hingham Civic Music Theatre, continues performances this Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Hingham High School auditorium.

Andrew Kuhn, 10, of Cohasset, plays the title role in this story of a workhouse orphan taken in by a band pf pickpockets before discovering his true identity.

Kuhn displays unusual stage presence for a young age. He needs no microphone to fill the auditorium with is solo "Where Is Love?"

"He is a natural actor," raves director, Marie Terman, "He is just a joy to work with."

This is the first Music Theatre production for Terman, a Hingham resident. Formerly she has been involved with the Cohasset Drama Club, Christie's Demithe Theatre, and Boston Public Theatre.

Terman puts the cast through its paces as they move nonstop from one high energy scene to another. Choregrapher Joan Kenney did a tremendous job incorporating the dance routines into the flow of the performance.

Weymouth resident, Marion Norton as Nancy, gives a touching performance of the tough and tender girlfriend of the cruel Bill Sykes. The depth of her character is revealed in her solo "As Long as He Needs Me," where she pledges her love to Bill.

Davis Dassori of Hingham, as the miserable miserly Fagin, leader of the pickpockets, was convincingly dirty and intimidating. Like Nancy, he also shows a tender side to this character in his song, "Be Back Soon" which he sings with his boys.

Fagin's boys are a large reason for the success of the musical. They add their energy to five numbers including "I'd Do Anything For You." Michael Jordan is the cocky and accomplished pickpocket, the Artful Dodger.

Comic relief comes in the character of Mr. Bumble, played by Frank Piekut. Pielut's booming voice lends itself the role of the selfish and arrogant workhouse master, who sold Oliver. Piekut and the Widow Corney (Kathy Kemen) keep the audience in stiches during their touch and go courtship scene, "I Shall Scream."

One of the mot beautifully done pieces in this production is the street scene "Who Will Buy?" Producer Terman used ballerina Laura Keating to highlight the dreaminess and wishfulness of this scene, with Oliver and the street vendors.

"I knew how talented Laura is so I devised this scene for her," Terman said.

Keating, a Hingham resident, has appeared three times as Clara, in the Boston Ballet's "Nutcracker Suite."

Holmes was very pleased with the outcome of this production. Her only complaint was, "We need more people here to watch it."

The Civic Theatre is next planning a Gilbert and Sullivan production, where the audience will be part of the show. Choral selections will be printed on the program which the audience will be asked to sing.

"Kiss Me Kate" is scheduled for the spring. Talent for these amateur productions is discovered through auditions. Advertisements will be put in local papers and everyone is invited to audition.

It's official: disaster area declared

Plymouth, Norfolk, and Bristol Counties were designated disaster areas Sunday by the Federal Emergency Management Association (FEMA) for the limited purpose of providing grants to pay for debris removal and overtime costs incurred for that purpose.

FEMA will also pay overtime and associated costs to towns where areas were evacuated and shelters were set up.

Uninsured public losses including parks, fences, trees, and roads will also be covered.

According to Tom McNaught, an aid to Representative Studds, South Eastern Massachusetts has incurred an estimated $10 million in this type of loss.

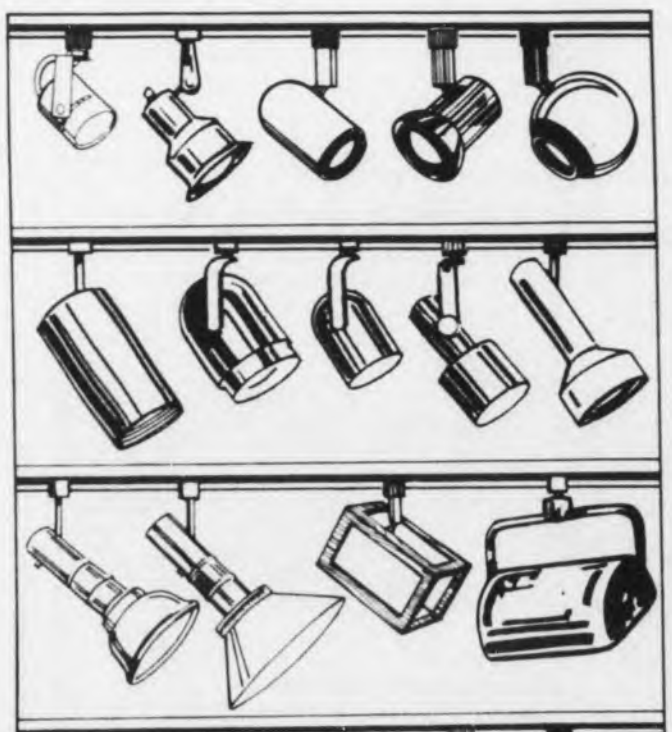
The grants will cover up to 75 per cent of the loss. The remaining 25 per cent will be divided between the state and the locality.

FEMA will set up a disaster field office in Worcester. Both FEMA and Massachusetts Civil Defense representatives will visit towns to brief local officials on how to apply for assistance. Their schedule has not yet been determined.

SBA (Small Business Organization) will be granting loans to help homeowners and small businesses pay for uninsured losses incurred by the hurricane. Their determination is still pending. According to McNaught, that decision is expected some time in November.

Correction

The key word — 're-draft' — was omitted from the Oct. 16-17 editorial cartoon caption. It should have read: " . . . Then at the very last second . . . BAM!- . . . Too late I realized I was for the seat belt law re-draft and that non-binding referendum thing. . . ."



Studds names reps

Representative Gerry Studds announced the appointment of Robert Nickerson to replace Maureen Garde as his Regional Representative for the South Shore. Nickerson is presently the head of Studds' Cape and Islands office.

A University of Massachusetts graduate, Nickerson, 30, has served as Studds' Regional Representative in Hyannis for the past year.

Garde is leaving the representative's staff to accept the position of executive director of the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee.

"Maureen Garde's work over eight years on my staff has been superb," Studds said. "The Tenth District and many of its residents have benefited enormously from her many contributions. The Democratic State Committee has made a very wise choice, and I am particularly pleased that Maureen has chosen to continue her career in public service for the people of Massachusetts."

December warrant to include watershed moratorium

The warrant for the Dec. 9 special Town Meeting will contain 29 articles.

Selectmen reviewed the warrant for the last time this week before it is sent to the printers in its final format.

Excluded from the original draft of the warrant is an amendment to the harbor bylaws limiting moorings to individuals and prohibiting a corporation from owning a Cohasset Harbor mooring. That amendment will be studied further by town counsel and the harbor study committee for revision at the April Town Meeting.

Selectmen also decided to exclude two articles requesting funding for the interior renovation of the Bates Building. The Board of Health sponsored the articles, one as a less expensive, less comprehensive alternative to the other article.

Selectman Diane Sullivan said she would like to see input from the planning board on this request. That board uses the building for storage of its records and as its public hearing location.

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said she was concerned about spending more money on the building when there are plans to move the offices to the Town Hall when that is renovated and expanded. She requested that the board be apprised of plans to renovate the Town Hall.

Additions to the warrant include a $10,000 request to complete repairs to the high school auditorium. There will be a request to change the town's bylaw regarding the hours of operation for town businesses, and an article to request $2100 to add to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development grant of $6375 for a management training program.

Selectmen agreed to include a warrant article establishing a water supply protection building moratorium. Sponsored by the Water Commission, the article would prohibit all new construction within the watershed until Jan. 1, 1987 or until a permanent bylaw is developed and approved by the town.

Commission Chairman Peter Pratt explained Monday night that the moratorium would prohibit all construction within the water supply district, although it would be appealable through the town's zoning board or the court process.

A moratorium bylaw was approved by the special Town Meeting in June, but was later rejected by the state Attorney General because of a procedural delay in filing the map and the proposed bylaw with the Town Clerk. Pratt assured selectmen the map and bylaw text has been "hand delivered" in time for the Dec. 9 meeting.

Some additions have been made to the proposed bylaw so that the moratorium now includes all site development, laying of roads and utilities and topographic changes that alter the drainage patterns.

Engineers Camp, Dresser and McKee have focused on certain prohibited uses, including the storage of chemicals, and underground petroleum storage tanks, and other hazardous materials containment, Pratt explained. New state of the art technical engineering has been brought into this new proposed bylaw, he added, which will be in effect until the Watershed Protection Committee proposes permanent bylaws.

"But we want to keep this moratorium available (until Jan. 1, 1987) in case we lose a quorum or whatever (at the annual Town Meeting)," he explained.

Selectman Diane Sullivan wondered if the new bylaw affected current residents who intend to make repairs to the surface of their property, such as installing a layer of asphalt on a driveway. Commissioners explained that changes not affecting the characteristic of the property will be allowed.

"We are asking for breathing room. There are people looking over our shoulder right now," he said, referring to local developers anxious to build within the watershed district.

Donald Staszko, who intends to construct a Super Stop 'n Shop within watershed land, argued that state regulations are adequately stringent. "You are putting another layer to the regulations," he said.

Pratt answered that a town bylaw is more enforceable and less likely to change with the frequent membership change of town boards. To alter a town bylaw requires a two-thirds vote of Town Meeting, Pratt explained, thus "the town will be better protected by bylaw rather than another regulation."

The state's Title 5 regulation pertaining to septic systems and drainage is weaker than Cohasset's proposed bylaw, Selectman Sullivan added.

Stasko countered that regardless of how strong a town bylaw is made, any "process can be built in the watershed" if it wins an appeal through the town's or the court's appellate system.

Pratt agreed the proposed bylaw would include a provision allowing for the municipal or legal appellate process. "The bottom line is that we are not denying anyone their Constitutional rights, but we are trying to protect the water supply of Cohasset. Other people people think their own profitability is more important," Pratt stated.

Staszko answered, "I think the public water supply is paramount."

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

CURB APPEAL

When prospective buyers pull up in front of your home, their first impression will be crucial. Many of our customers call us from "For Sale" signs, and they're more likely to call on your home if it has a terrific front yard. If a house has peeling paint, a shaggy yard, or droopy shutters, the buyers may resist going inside. Even if they do go in, their negative first impressions could color their feelings about the rest of the house, even if the interior does meet their criteria. This is why "Curb Appeal" is so important. Before marketing your home, check the exterior paint and trim. If the house does need painting, get it done as soon as possible, and complete any exterior carpentry work that may be needed. Keep your lawn mowed and trim the shrubbery. A few flowers can also help dress up your front yard. A cared-for exterior will help your home give the impression that it has been well served before buyers even set one foot inside the front door. It will make buyers feel positive about the property from the first moment they see it.

If you're thinking of putting your home on the market, calling Norma Telesco is a good first step. Our agents can give you good ideas about some simple fix-ups that will help your property sell quickly and for top dollar. Our phone number is 749-8833, or stop by our offices at Home Center Realty.

Cohasset Worship . . .

St. Stephen's

Remembering All Saints - Friday, Nov. 1, there will be a 9:30 a.m. Eucharist in celebration of All Saints Day. On All Saints Day we remember all our loved ones who have died and who have passed on the faith to us in their special way. If you would like loved ones remembered on this day, forward their names to the Rector or the church office and they will be included in the prayers on that day.

Christian Perspective on Drugs and Alcohol -A four-week adult class which began Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m., will take a non-moralizing look at what Scripture and Church tradition have to say regarding the use of drugs and alcohol. What does the Christian faith have to offer for healthier life and society? A lot, actually - come and find out.

Adult Education Committee - meets and is open to all interested in planning the adult education program of the parish after worship on Sunday, Nov. 3 in the Bartow Room of the Parish House.

Church School Committee - will gather in the "Watermelon Room" of the Parish House after worship Nov. 3 to plan an Epiphany "Three Kings Pageant" and continue the strengthening of our new and lively church school program. This meeting is also open to all interested parishioners and parents.

Enquirers' Class - begins Tuesday evening, at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 12. The six-session class is for all adults interested in Confirmation, in being Received into the Episcopal church, or those who wish to reaffirm again their baptismal vows. Bishop Rath will be with us Jan. 5 to confirm, receive, or reaffirm those who have decided to take this step.

Village Fair - Now is the time for all parishioners, relatives, friends, and neighbors to give a helping hand to Village Fair Committee Chairmen who have been hard at work for the past several months.

You can help by contacting the following parishioners who are chairing these activities: Book - Helen Hooper, 383-6840; Bargain Bazaar - Gertrude Hooper, 383-1111; Boutique - Kittie Sturtevant, 383-6222; Children's Table - Barbara Mullett, 383-6171; Face Painting - Avis Sweeney, 383-1184; Food Table - Bobbie Fowle, 383-1820; Children's Activities - Open.

The Fair will include some new features. Our very own Robin Lord, radio's Story Lady for many years, will entrance young and old with her stories.

Also, silhouettes will be made. More to come about that. They make great Christmas gifts.

Services and Lessons - Sunday, Nov. 3, The Twenty-Third Sunday after Pentacost - 8 a.m., Holy Eucharist; 10 a.m., Holy Eucharist and Sermon; Lessons: Deutronomy 6:1-9, Hebrews 7:23-28, Mark 12:28-34

Host family: Fran and Marie Johnston.

All Soul's Day - Saturday, Nov. 2: Masses - 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

First Friday/First Saturday All-Night Eucharistic Vigil - will be conducted as usual from after the 5 p.m. Mass on First Friday, Nov. 1 (All Saints Day) throughout the night until the 8 a.m. Mass on First Saturday (All Soul's Day). All members of the parish are invited to spend some time during the night in adoration before the Blessed Sacrament in thanksgiving, petition and reparation. Additional participants would be welcome at all hours.

Baptisms - Samantha Hutt, Christin Sadler

Banns of Marriage - Katherine Fougere - Joseph Gallant

CCD - Grades 7 and 8 - no classes Thursday evening this week. Happy Halloween!

Christmas Fair - Please remember to gather nuts, pine cones, milkweed pods, etc. for the wreaths. If you can help in any way, call 383-9506, 383-0952 or 383-6188. There is a job for everyone.

Notre Dame Academy - Monday, Nov. 4 at 7 p.m. at St. Ann's By The Sea Church Hall, Marshfield. Representatives will answer questions concerning the curriculum and present information about the Academy.

Divorced and Separated Christians Support Group - meets the first and third Thursday of each month at St. Thecla's Church Hall, Pembroke at 7:30 p.m. All area men and women are welcome. For more info., call Gail at 294-0275 or Joanne at 545-6759.

Cry room - we have one - at the rear of the church. We have been remiss in bringing this to the attention of the parish.

First Parish

Parish committee notes - Our semi-annual Parish Meeting was held as scheduled following the service of worship Oct. 20.

The Treasurer's final report for 1984-1985 fiscal year was presented and accepted. Copies of this report are available upon request through the church office.

A vote of thanks and gratitude was expressed to David Reid, our Treasurer, for his hard work in this capacity. We do look forward to his return to Cohasset. Nina Clinton now has the responsibility of Treasurer and we are fortunate to have her accept this important assignment.

The Maintenance Committee Chairman, Arthur Johnson, reported various items of concern which are being further investigated. Max Pounder brought us up to date on the status of repairs to the Meeting House. He distributed a list of additional items costing approximately $12,760 which are to be included in the restoration project. The total costs are now $119,000. Copies of these additional costs are available at the church office.

Bill Bell spokes with optimism on our progress to date in overall financial accomplishments. John Kornet, Chairman of the Capital Fund Drive, outlined the approach to be followed with the formal kick-off sometime in January, 1986. Professional fundraising assistance will be involved to help structure and direct our campaign.

Second Congregational

Sharing more - As a congregation, we're very much like the family on a tight budget - after basic expenses, there's not much left for the things we want to do. By increasing the proportion of our resources pledged to the church, we can take on projects that deal directly with hunger, suffering, and disease. Over the next few weeks, try to focus your thinking and your prayers on that key question-can we share more?

Request - If anyone has outgrown good, quality toys or books for young children, we would appreciate having them for our child care room - ages 0-3.

Note of thanks - The family of Robert Wilson; Paul, Penny, 'J.P.', Andy, and Isabelle Wilson thank every one of you who has given so much love, compassion and kindness by word and deed during this period of their great loss. All of this helped them indeed.

Town officals move to close landfill are complete, Central Engineering and Testing Inc. will report the results to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, Town Counsel and the Water Dept.

According to Dr. Godzik, the results are expected this week. A representative of the lab testing firm has indicated to the health agent that although not definitive, "it appears that the contents of the containers is what appears on the labels" Godzik said.

The labels on the contents of the 55 gallon drums specify a chemical known as hydrochloric acid and a 'generic Drano', he added. The two chemicals, one an acid and the other a base, are commonly used by plumbers. The hydrochloric acid is also used as a shock treatment for swimming pools, Godzik explained.

The acid substance was found in half-gallon containers, and the 'Drano' chemical was found in pint-sized containers within the two 55-gallon barrels.

Although these two chemicals are not specifically listed among the materials prohibited by the state for commercial dumping, Dr. Godzik said the are definitely not allowed in a non hazardous materials landfill.

"These are the type of chemicals that are diluted by water," he said, "but they definitely not supposed to be transported by commercial haulers."

In the meantime, the Board of Health has continued to meet with the DEQE on the future of the commercial landfill. At a meeting last week, it was decided that the town's engineers, Camp, Dresser and McKee, would forward to the state a list of recommended regulations and a schedule to implement those monitoring systems and regulations.

The Water Commission has also been moving forward on its decision last month to obtain a cease and desist order against the landfill. Based on the conclusions of a year-long study of Camp, Dresser and McKee, the commission agreed that legal action must be initiated to close the operation that is located on town water supply land.

It has been a time of frustration, Pratt admitted. While the town's Board of Health has been attempting to work within the system with DEQE, the Water Commission has felt compelled to follow an alternate route and close the doors on the business.

"What is in direct collision here is the DEQE's belief that there must be more landfill space within the Commonwealth," he stated. "And another priority of this state administration, the protection of the public drinking supply. My personal opinion is that we should petition the Governor himself, and let the people of Cohasset, the South Shore and the state know how the Governor will react to this most recent turn of events."

Pratt said the "months and months" of litigation, and visits to the state by the DEQE and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) have yet to yield results. "The state DEQE is serving solely at the pleasure of the Governor," Pratt surmised, "and they are playing Russian Roulette with the public protection and the drinking water of Cohasset. I want to know how long this will go on."

The commission chairman said if a petition is presented to the state administration, an answer should be forthcoming by the first of the new year. Time is of the essence, he said, since tracings of leachate have been found in Brass Kettle Brook. "It's only a matter of time before these tracings rise," he added.

Another option may be for Town Meeting to direct Special Town Counsel Leone to obtain a legal injunction against the landfill for permanent closure. "Our attorneys will follow our public policy," Pratt said. "For us, there will be no compromise. A landfill should not be located within a watershed."

The contents of the barrels taken from the entrance of the landfill last week may provide the town "with the documentation we need. But we need the support of the town to fight with us. We also need the help of the government at the state level to protect our water supply."

This B.F.I. truck was stopped by police before it entered the Cohasset Heights landfill. (Bern Caughey)

Art Center news . . .

Color workshop

A special two-day color and composition workshop led by artist Bety Kohlberg is designed to work with color and composition on the two-dimensional surface.

The workshop offered by the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset, will meet from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on two Saturdays, Nov. 9 and Nov. 16. Advanced registration is required for this workshop.

The class will start with an intellectual approach and end with an intuitive approach. Kohlberg will explore modern techniques. As an artist, Kohlberg exhibits extensively in Boston and New York galleries and is represented in major collections. She has an MFA from tufts University and a BFA Massachusetts College of Art where she is a visiting professor.

For further information on this workshop, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

Paint Hawaii

Paint the islands of Kauai and Maui in the company of artist and teacher Harriet Zabusky-Zand during a two week drawing and painting tour of these tropical paradises.

Escape the winter doldrums by joining the artist and the South Shore Art Center for this two-week Hawaiian Tour. The Center at 103 Ripley Road is offering this trip through Cerel's Travel Center in Natick. The group will depart on January 7, 1986, and spend two glorious weeks painting and touring these islands. Cost of the tour is $1,380 per person based upon four people sharing a two bedroom, two bath condo. An optional one-week package is available for $1,010 based on four people. Registrations and deposits are due to Cerel Travel by November 15.

The tour is open to all levels of artistic ability and participants may work in any media. For further information, call Cerel's Travel Center at 653-2400 or 237-6190.

Scituate DPU hearing

The DPU will hold three public hearings in communities served by Eastern Edison Company to receive testimony from the public and local and state officials concerning the outage and the Company's performance.

The next area meeting will be held Monday, Nov. 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Scituate High School Auditorium, 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Although there was a great amount of damage resulting from this storm, and complaints were received about other electric companies the relatively high number coming from Eastern Edison customers indicated to the DPU that an investigation of Company practices warranted.

Cohasset Riding Club sponsored show

Wheelright Park was the setting for a dressage show sponsored by the Cohasset Riding Club on October 14. Mark Weissbecker judged the tests performed by 14 local riders.

Dressage is a discipline which tests the skill of the horse and rider at executing a series of movements at various gaits. As the horse's training progresses, he advances to a more difficult level of testing. The riders are judged individually, receiving a series of scores for each movement of the test. Winners are determined by the highest cumulative score.

The championship went to Derel Lee Twombly and her horse Gabriel, who had the highest score of the day. Reserve champion was Tami Abromowich and her handsome Thoroughbred gelding, Quiero.

The first and second place winners in each test are as follows:

Walk-Trot Test, 1, Shelby Woodmanseee, and 2, Abby Barrett.

Training Level, Test 1, 1, Derel Lee Twombly and 2, Colleen McGovern.

Training Level, Test 2, 1, Derel Lee Twombly (tie); 1, Tammy Abromowich (tie); and 2, Colleen McGovern.

Training Level, Test 4, 1, Derel Lee Twombly and 2, Jill Hamilton.

First Level, Test 1, 1, Kerry McGovern and 2, Derel Lee Twombly.

Rider's Choice (any level not already offered), 1, Derel Lee Twombly and 2, Kerry McGovern.

Judge Mark Weissbecker offers Tammy Abromowich some comments and suggestions following her ride on Quiero.

Jill Hamilton and her pony, Moshe performing their test at the Cohasset Riding Club's Dressage Show.

Field hockey celebrates an undefeated season

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

FIELD HOCKEY

Maureen Farren scored with two minutes remaining in Wednesday's game and thus clinched the South Shore League championship for Cohasset.

Maureen also scored in the first two minutes of the contest to put the Skippers up, 1-0, over Sandwich. Unfortunately, Sandwich came back to tie the game before the half. But Cohasset came back in the second half and their efforts finally paid off.

Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill had outstanding games on both ends of the field. Sarah Dickerman and Anne O'Leary played excellently on defense.

Friday, the girls continued their winning streak and creamed Norwell, 3-0. The entire offense played tremendously. The defense was not as busy as the offense but did its part to keep the pressure on Norwell.

Maureen Farren led the offense scoring all of Cohasset's three goals. Lee Sullivan and Kara McDonald did a great job backing up Maureen. Heather St. Onge and Liz Williams both turned in good efforts as well.

Cohasset will conclude its regular season Tuesday with a game against archrival Duxbury. Duxbury tied the girls before, so Cohasset will try to beat them this time around.

BOYS' SOCCER

Wednesday, the boys pulverized Abington, 6-0. With this victory, Cohasset won the league title. Coach Jon Anderson felt his team played very well and did a great job putting the game away early.

Bobby Shultz picked up two goals with Chris Kirkendall assisting on one and Rob Leonard on the other. David Shultz also scored two off of passes from Chris Kirkendall and Jim Reidy. Rob Leonard and John Reidy also scored.

Anderson cited Kevin Dunn and Kevin Henry as having great games.

Saturday, Cohasset dashed Sandwich's hopes of making the tournament by beating them, 3-0. Anderson believed this was one of his team's strongest showings of the season. Cohasset moved the ball well and had a solid defensive game as well.

Bob Shultz kicked in Cohasset's first goal with the assist coming from Chris Kirkendall. Mark Crough then passed to David Caffery who converted the goal. Finally, Chris Kirkendall headed in Kevin Dunn's corner.

Billy McKenna picked up his 10th shutout of the season. Billy holds the high school record for the most shutouts in one season. This was Billy's 18th career shutout overall.

The boys end their season on Tuesday with a game against Norwell. The tournament starts next week, most likely on Tuesday.

Transporting the latest addition to the CHS championship teams is the bus leaving the scene of another field hockey victory. (Carol McCann)

FOOTBALL

The boys had an exciting victory over Manchester, 21-6. Coach Phil Pisano said this win will be a big turnaround for his team. Now they realize they can play competitively against anybody.

Late in the second quarter Sean Corkery found Jeff Aaron open and converted a 50-yard pass which Jeff ran into the end zone. Then with two minutes remaining in the game, Peter Sandbloom ran 40 yards for the touchdown.

The most exciting play of the game came with 45 seconds left when Manchester's quarterback fumbled the ball which was promptly picked up and run into the end zone by Jeff Lloyd. This touchdown was made possible by a selfless play by Patrick O'Connor who tackled the quarterback instead of going for the ball which cleared the way for Jeff. All three extra points were kicked by Jim McGuire.

Offensively quarterback Sean Corkery had his best game of the season. Philip Mahoney also played well, gaining tough yardage.

On defense, Liam Stanford, Jeff Lydon, Dereck Lacks, Jeff Soltesz, Mat Maloney, Philip Mahoney, Bob Corkery, Peter Sandbloom, and Greg Ferreira all played very well.

The Skippers take on Abington Sunday at 1:30 p.m. with a victory over Abington. Cohasset has a shot at winning the South Shore Small School League championship.

Casting a look at "Flowers for Algernon"

Being selected to perform in an Emmons production at CHS is having made it in the high school theatrical world. Because if Director Ron Emmons possibly can (and he has an excellent track record) he'll take a student all the way to the state finals.

Since 1978, when Emmons first introduced play competition at CHS he has taken his students to the state semi-finals every year; in five out of those seven years his students were finalists (one out of 12 competing high schools in the state); in 1985 CHS took first place in the state competition with "Voices,"; and Emmons is working on this year.

In 1967 Emmons joined the CHS staff as an English teacher. Eight years later (1975) he started doing plays. And then in 1978 he started preparing his students for state competitions, critically and carefully choosing appropriate vehicles for them. In the first year CHS students were named semi-finalists. That was the carrot which led them to a first place last year, with "Voices."

Since those early years, Emmons has come a long way as a director. In addition to being "Drama Man" at CHS, he is a director-in-residence at Choate (since 1984), where he teaches acting to high school students from all over the country. He is also Secretary of the Mass. High School Drama Guild and Vice President of the New England Drama Council. And from all accounts, he is an excellent (but tough) English teacher.

If you'd like to see the best of Emmons, you'll want to catch "Flowers for Algernon" at CHS on Sat., Nov. 9 and Sun., Nov. 10. Tickets are available at CHS or reservations can be made through Cleida Buckley, 383-6425. Some of the performers you'll be seeing are as follows:

director - ron emmons

GLEN HOCHKEPPEL

Senior Glen Hochkeppel will graduate this year, and in doing so will leave a void in the drama club, the barbershop quartet, chorus, concert band and math league. In addition to being in two plays ("Flowers" and "Pirates of Penzance") he is one of the top three or four students in his graduating class, has worked at Target Industries since 10th grade and is a semi-finalist for a National Merit Scholarship.

In "Flowers" Hochkeppel plays Charly's father. In "Grease" he played in the pit band; in Godspell he had a lead; in "Snoopy" he was Linus; and in "Voices" he had a lead. Last summer he auditioned for and got a lead at Christos II Dinner Theater in Brockton, where he and seven others performed a night club musical routine.

Best known for his musical and dramatic talents at CHS, Glen says he would like to focus in English, creative writing and drama at college.

JOHN KUNTZ

In "Snoopy" you loved him; in "Flowers" you'll despise him, as a diabolical and opinionated scientist who has little or no compassion for Charly (Senior Andrew Glasfeld) as he experiments on a human being not giving a damn about the consequences.

Senior John Kuntz played a speechless love-sick boy in Voices (musical and competition versions), was in the chorus in "Godspell," has a lead (Major General Stanley) in "Pirates," and is involved in a multitude of other activities inside and outside of high school. A member of the CHS AFS Club, he supports all AFS activities, fund-raising and inter-high school exchanges. Last year he was editor of the CHS literary magazine. Additionally, he's interested in photography, playwriting, and writes for the CHS newspaper.

After high school he'd like to attend a college in the Boston area (or New York) where he might major in comunications and/or theater arts. He's presently involved in working at Papa Ginos, and in the writing of a one-act play called "The Walls Have Ears" which he hopes to submit to a one-act play competition. Kuntz's musical instrument is the alto saxophone.

JENNA EMMONS

"I can sing but I can't dance," Jenna Emmons is the stage-struck daughter of Director Ron Emmons, and the cute little blonde you see at The Bread Shop. She may make acting look easy, but she studies hard. She spent last summer at Choate taking acting workshops. She researched and wrote the character of Mary Pickford which she then performed in a Historical Women presentation at Choate. She also assumed the role of a 70's cheerleader in "Pom Poms," another original drama.

A junior this year, Emmons has appeard in the two productions of Voices; was Sally in "Snoopy," and had a role in "Who Am I This Time?" A multi-talented gal, Jenna hopes to participate in the AFS summer program next year, and thinks she might like to be a radio disc jockey. In "Flowers" she plays a compassionate lab technician.

LAURA KUHN

She looks and sounds a little like Natalie Wood —with her soft, dark looks and quiet telephone voice which she projects well on stage to the delight of audiences who saw her in "Let Me Hear You Whisper," in which she played Helen, the lead. In "Voices" Sophomore Laura Kuhn had a small acting part and danced; in "Snoopy" she danced and was the character Woodstock. And next spring she will appear as Cleopatra in "When Shakespeare's Ladies Meet."

In the production of "Pirates of Penzance" Kuhn will assist Andrea Miller with choreography. In preparation for what she hopes will be a career in the performing arts, Kuhn has been spending summers at the Capeway Dance Camp at Bridgewater State College. Last summer, in addition to being a student at the camp, she was a counselor for seven-year old girls.

map could be made the official town map.

Zoning Board member Dan Cotton strongly objected, saying, "It would open a Pandora's box. It is a tool. To make it a law would create more problems. Richard Henderson (Town Counsel) advised us not to do it."

Inspector Poskus said he has created a contour map from the topographical map onto the floodplain map which he uses for his permit decisions.

"If an applicant wants to contest the decision," Poskus said, "they are invited to get their own engineer and bring back their own topographical map."

Poskus was scheduled to appear in court yesterday. He said the verdict would be a good indication of how use of the topographical map would hold up legally.

The conservation commission agreed to check with Town Counsel Henderson about legalizing the map as an aide.

Cohasset resident Jean Gormley suggested that before any scaling was done, the benchmarks must be made accurate. She said if the benchmarks on the floodplain map were accurate, her house would have been in water at least during the Blizzard of '78.

While the committee agreed it was worth looking into, Basset said, "That is five steps beyond where we are now."

"With these steps," she added, "we are moving from the 17th Century into the 19th Century. At least it is a start."

Bassett also raised a concern of implementing a computerized map system. She estimated the total cost of the hardware, software and resurveying of the assessor's map would be in the neighborhood of $100,000.

The group seemed excited about this possibility for some time in the future. C. Michael Bliss of the Board of Health said a computer system would be easy to update and could pinpoint different areas of the map.

At this meeting, Sullivan also accepted the explanation of the building permit process from Inspector Poskus. Sullivan expressed concern that the drainage committee had no power to stop construction when drainage is one of the biggest problems in town.

Bassett explained that legally the committee cannot be given official status because it is an appointed board and serves only in an advisory capacity.

Poskus also explained that a series of checks and balances is built into the permit decision.

"I issue an occupancy permit only when the applicant has shown me that he has followed the plans authorized by the building permit."

Poskus also added that Health Agent, Dr. Joseph Godzik, now signs any plans he has authorized.

"In the past I have had people switch plans," said Poskus.

Blue ribbons awarded

Blue ribbons were awarded in six categories at the South Shore Art Center's annual Blue Ribbon Exhibit for gallery artists.

This annual show in the Center's gallery at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset exhibits some of the finest work by the artist members of the South Shore Art Center. It gives the art enthusiasts the opportunity to see the work being done by South Shore artists.

Receiving a blue ribbon in watercolor was Mary Lizotte of Norwell for her piece "Chatham Garden" and awarded a blue ribbon in the oil/acrylic was Claffy Williams of Cohasset for acrylic on paper work, "Dyptich."

Marion Bush of Hingham received a blue ribbon in mixed media for "Landscape" and Berj Kailian of Weymouth received a blue ribbon in graphics for her collgraph, "Sea People." In the pencil category, the blue ribbon went to Sherley Gray of Humarock and in the 3-D category, to Robert St. Pierre for his wood sculpture, "No. 701 Padouck Vessel."

The some 70 works hanging in the exhibit provide a good cross section of art being created by South Shore Art Center artists. The exhibit continues through the end of October; gallery hours are Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m., and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For information or directions to the Center, call 383-9548.

What's the REAL RETURN on Your Savings Certificate?

It may surprise you to learn that interest rates may look alike . . . . but interest payments may NOT all be alike!

The method a bank uses to compute its interest may make a significant difference in the amount of interest payment you receive.

Take this very typical example (let's use an 8½% Annual Rate for comparison):

Annual Rate	EFFECTIVE ANNUAL YIELDS
	Compounded Daily (ROCKLAND TRUST METHOD) 365/360	Compounded Daily (360/360, Method)	Compounded Weekly	Compounded Monthly	Compounded Semi-Annually
8.50%	9.00%	8.87%	8.86%	8.84%	8.77%

The moral is simple: Be sure your bank is paying daily interest on the 365/360 method or be sure your account is at Rockland Trust!

Changes at the Mariner

Marilyn Jackson

Margaret Smoragiewicz

Carol Lund

Mike Berger

Martha Thomas

Jackson named editor

Mariner Publisher David S. Cutler announced the following appointments and promotions this week.

Marilyn Jackson of Scituate, who has been covering Scituate for the past several years, is the new community editor of the Scituate Mariner.

She comes to the Mariner Newspapers after nearly 24 years with the Patriot Ledger as a news reporter, covering government, the courts and the community. Her most recent assignment was as a field editor, reporting and supervising the news coverage in Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell.

An award winning journalist, she has also done investigative work and is a member of Investigative Reporters and Editors, Inc. based at the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo.

A lifelong resident of the South Shore, Jackson attended Thayer Academy in Braintree, Katharine Gibbs School and Boston University. She is the mother of two sons, David, a sophomore at George Washington University in Washington, D.C., and Thomas, a senior at Thayer Academy.

She assumed her new duties at the Mariner last week.

ADVERTISING MANAGER

Carol Lund of Marshfield is the new advertising manager of the seven Mariner Newspapers produced at the company's south office in Marshfield.

Educated and raised in Brockton, she holds a B.S. and a masters degree in mathematics from Bridgewater State College. She has taught high school math in Florida, East Bridgewater and Randolph and is presently an intelligence specialist in the Naval Reserve. Recently she was chosen by the Navy to participate in an intensive two-year course to learn Russian and this year, she was named "Sailor of the Year" from the Armed Forces Reserve Center, Providence, R.I.

Mrs. Lund joined the Mariner two and a half years ago as the company's assistant advertising manager.

She is the mother of two daughters, Donna, 27, and Jennifer, 14.

Succeeding Mrs. Lund as assistant advertising manager is Martha Thomas of Marshfield, the daughter of Wayne and Ann Thomas of School Street.

A Marshfield resident for most of her life, she is an honors graduate of Marshfield High School and a cum laude graduate of Stonehill College in North Easton where she received a bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration.

Prior to joining the Mariner this spring as assistant to Office Manager Kay Honeywell, Thomas was with McDonald's as a crew person and as a manager.

LEADERSHIP TEAM

Other members of the leadership team include Michael Berger, the assistant executive editor and Margaret Smoragiewicz, the production manager and general manager of the seven Mariners produced in Marshfield.

Berger, born and educated in Needham, is a 1978 graduate of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst where he received a degree in Journalism-English and was assistant sports editor of the UMass-Daily Collegian.

He was with Massachusetts Lawyers Weekly until joining the Gardner Daily News as a general assignment reporter. In Gardner, he served as temporary sports and lifestyle editor while also working the city hall and school committee beats.

He joined the Mariner Newspapers in June of 1981 as a reporter for the Hingham Mariner and in the fall of 1983 was named the community editor of the Cohasset and Scituate Mariners. In March of 1984, he was named assistant executive editor while retaining the job as Scituate editor. With his new expanded duties as assistant executive editor, he has relinquished the Scituate post.

Berger lives in Rockland with his wife, Linda, and their son, Danny, 2 1/2. He is a political junkie and an avid sports fan which is propitious, since his additional duties will include some sports writing for different Mariner papers.

Margaret Smoragiewicz of Marshfield has been a part of the Mariner leadership team for several years.

Born and educated in Connecticut, she is a graduate of the University of Connecticut and has done graduate work at Syracuse University's Newhouse School of Journalism. She was with General Electric in Syracuse as an editor for their technical publications.

Smoragiewicz joined the Mariner in 1976 as a production worker and after leaving for several years to operate a gift shop, returned in 1983 to become the company's production manager.

Early this year, she was appointed general manager of seven of the 10 Mariner Newspapers.

Active in community affairs, she and her husband, John, have two sons, David, 14, and Stephen, 13, and a daughter, Susan, 9.

Cohasset art center announces show, names winners

An exhibit of landscape photographs by Droege will hang in the South Shore Art Center's invitational gallery at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset from November 2 through November 23 with a formal reception on Friday, November 8 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

While his photographs give him great pleasure, he is most pleased when people want to go out and see for themselves what he has seen and captured in his work. He feels that part of the problem with photography is the necessity of dealing with what is.

A graduate of the University of Notre Dame, Droege has studied color photography at Harvard University under Marie Cosinda doing mountain photography in this country; with Philip Evans, one of Britain's leading landscape photographers; and with Elliot Porter, a landscape photographer.

Droege is currently a professor at Bridgewater State College in Bridgewater, Massachusetts. His work has been included in such shows as New York University Art Gallery; Sierra Club, San Francisco; Georgia Technical University Art Gallery; University of Wisconsin Art Gallery; Coos Art Gallery, Coos Bay, Oregon; Shelby Art Center, Shelby, North Carolina; and others.

The public is invited to view this exhibit Monday through Friday, noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Blue Ribbons were awarded in six categories at the South Shore Art Center's annual Blue Ribbon Exhibit for gallery artists.

Spataro paintings shown

The South Shore Art Center is presenting a collection of paintings by Peter Spataro at the Quincy Co-operative Bank Galleria, Rte. 3A in Cohasset. This is the 63rd in a series of exhibitions at the bank for the Center. It will continue into December.

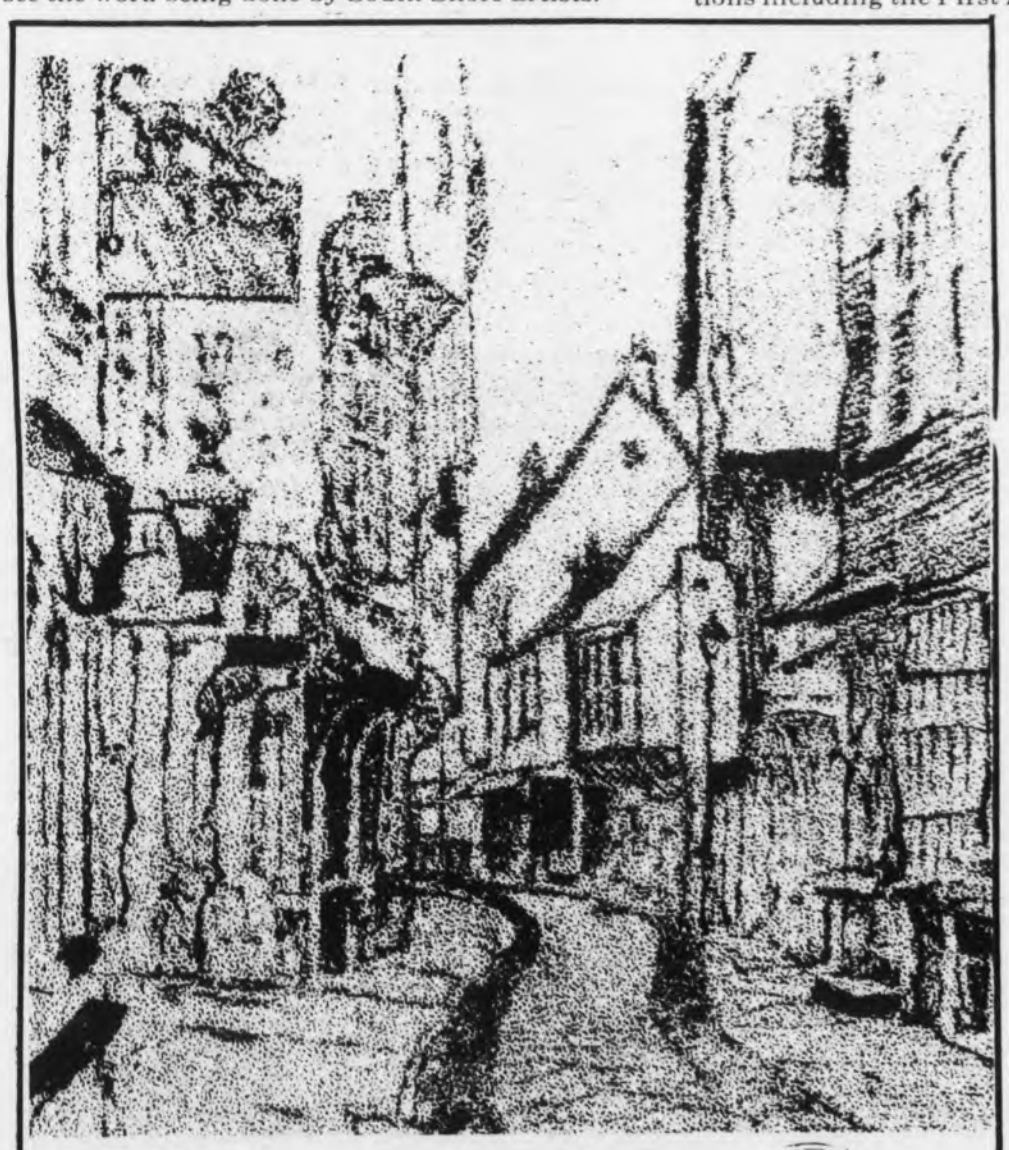
Spataro grew up in northeastern New York. He was educated at Barrington College and Boston University. A firm believer that the artist is a life time student, he has studied with Betty L. Schlemn, Zygmund Jankowski, the late Priscilla Sibley, Riga Martin, Clement Micarelli, Charles Movalli and extensively with Edgar Whitney.

He makes his home and studio in Hanover, and teaches for the Hingham School System.

His works are represented in many private collections including the First National Bank Of Boston. He has exhibited and had one-man invitational shows in New York, Boston and throughout the New England area. These shows included Allied Artist of Americal, Hudson Valley Art Association, Salamagundi Club, The Brockton Art Center, The Copley Society, Providence Watecolor Club, Symphony Hall, The Prudential Building, The Traveling Exhibition of Allied Artists, Gordon College, Bridgewater College etc.

His awards include Grand Prize at the Braintree Plaza, Second Award Massachusetts Teachers State Competition as well as other firsts.

Society crafts festival



The Standish Humane Society will sponsor a holiday crafts festival on Sunday, Nov. 3, at the Scituate High School on Rte. 3A from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. A 50¢ admission will be charged at the door.

Amateur and professional crafters from all over the state will be participating in this year's show. Such featured items will include dried flower arrangements, country folk art, handcarved wooden items, all types of wall and door decorations and more. All crafts are handmade and are of high quality.

Also included will be Standish Humane's own "Christmas for the Animals" table where felt stockings filled with goodies, catnip mice, birdseed/suet balls, and other such delectable items will be available. Refreshments will be available throughout the day.

For more information, please call Bette Davis at 224-2008.

All proceeds from this and other events are used for the care of strayed and abandoned animals in Plymouth County. The Standish Humane Society is a non-profit, volunteer organization.

Car Imports will not expand . . .

from the property.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said he was concerned that Capazzola would return in another year, stating that 40 would not be an economical limit. "We were lead to believe a year ago that 20 was an economically-viable operation," he said.

Abutters to the Rte. 3A property, including Harry Ritter of King Street, said he opposed expansion of the business. He said a previous zoning study recommended the area remain residential, adding that a portion of the Cohasset Imports property is located in the floodplain.

"If this goes from 20 to 40 cars, all two acres will be covered with cars. It will have an awful impact on the value of my house," he said.

Phyllis Sullivan of Buttonwood Lane, who owns a home located behind Cohasset Imports, also expressed her opposition. Her property will be devalued if the business were to expand.

Richard Sullivan and Karen Goodman, also abutters to the car dealership, indicated their opposition to expanding a commercial business in a residentially-zoned area.

Although Capazolla asked selectmen to "give something a little more than 20 to work with," they denied the request.

Selectman Laugelle then suggested it was time the board review all Class II licenses "and if they do not clean up their act, then close shop."

Selectman Mary Jane McArthur said the board members should review all Class II licenses issued by the town, and determine what the zoning is at each location.

"No more Class II licenses. Let's stop where we are now," Selectman Sullivan stated, noting that Whitman had recently established a similar ban.

Selectmen decided to review all Class II licenses and determine what limits are imposed on those licenses.

In other business, the board granted approval to the PSO to used the Town Hall Friday, Nov. 29 and Saturday, Nov. 30 for a sports sale and auction.

PSO President Nancy Sandell assured selectmen that no food would be eaten inside the auditorium, and no one would be allowed to try on or use any equipment in the hall. Selectmen suggested a rug be put down on the floor of the front foyer for those people who would like to try on equipment such as skates and skis. Sandell said she would try to find a rug to temporarily place within the foyer.

In answer to selectmen's questions, Sandell said the PSO wanted to use the Town Hall, because it would provide a central location for the two-day event. Sports workshops will be taking place on the Common, she said, and a video will be shown to the students in the Town Hall auditorium.

Selectmen also decided that Fire Chief Martin Dooley should request a reserve fund transfer from the advisory committee. Dooley said the fire department needed a new refrigerator for the kitchen. It would cost about $500, he said.

Selectmen recommended that the chief ask the advisory committee for the reserve fund transfer.

In other business, selectmen decided to check with Police Chief Joseph Kealey about establishing a regional seminar dealing with police liability. Executive Secretary Donald Andrew will talk with Chief Kealey and other boards of selectmen to discuss whether such a seminar is warranted.

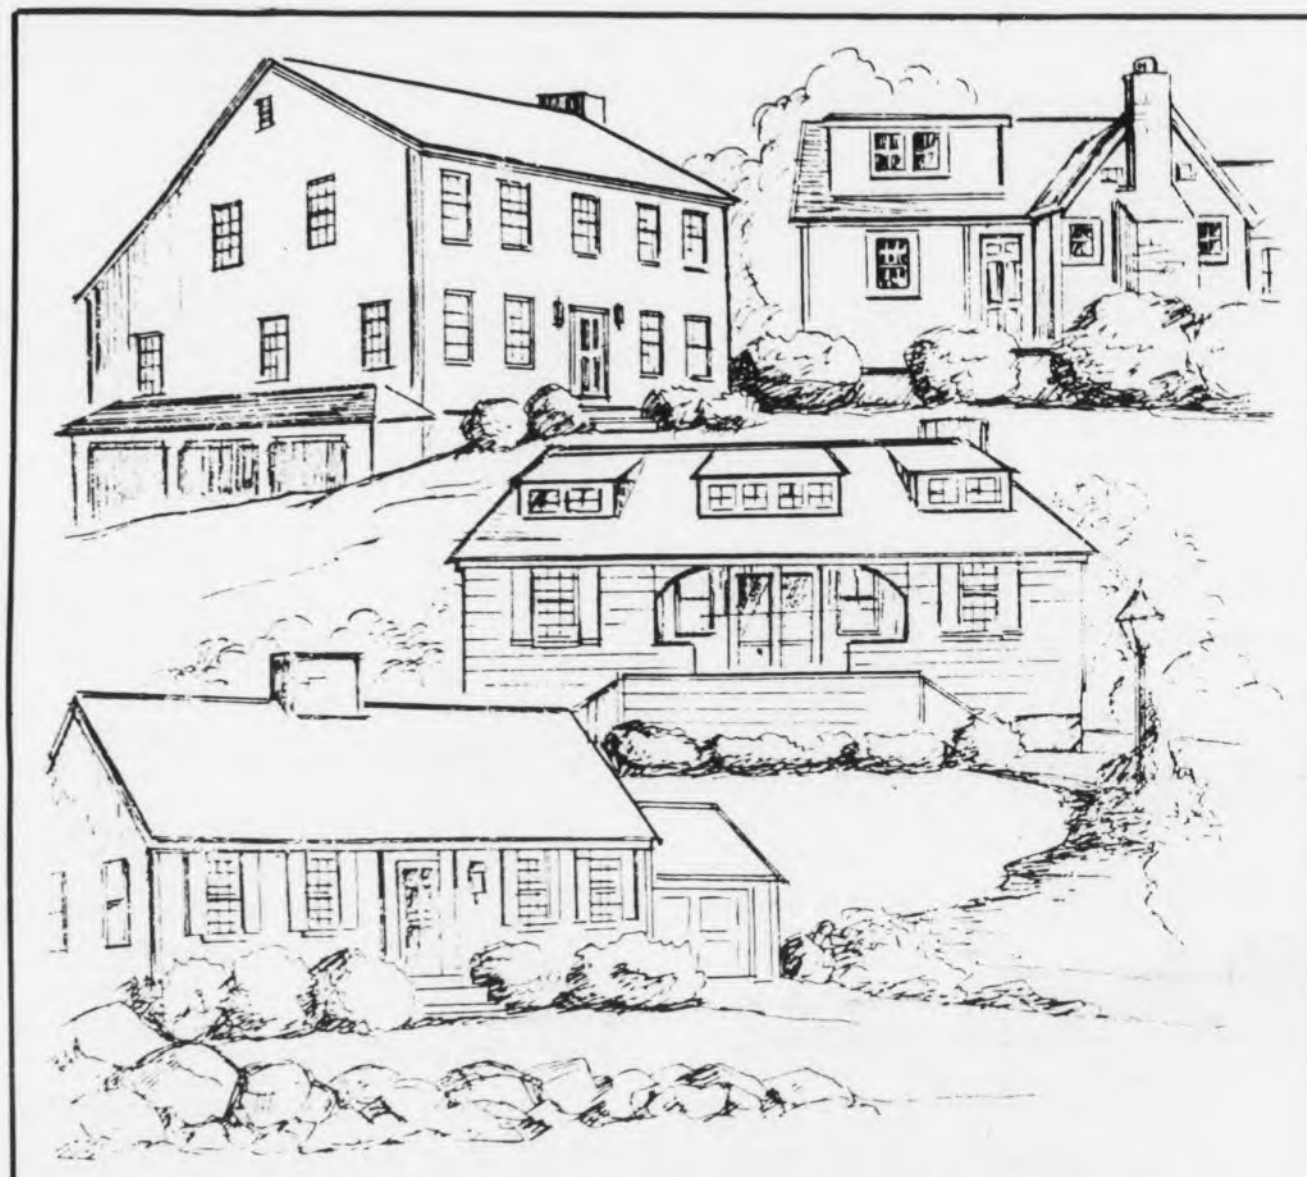
MALPRACTICE



An action in malpractice may be brought against any person who holds himself out to the public as a member of a profession, qualified to render services as required in a skillful and competent manner. The plaintiff in a malpractice action will be required to prove that he retained the defendant to perform these professional services and that this employment was accepted. He will also be required to prove that he suffered damage or injury through the acts of the defendant. This will be because the defendant did not use reasonable care in exercising his skill or because he did not possess the necessary experience, skill and learning. The plaintiff may also show that the injury was due to a practice and procedure used by the defendant which is not recognized by his profession.

Areas of legal expertise can vary. It is important to discuss your areas of concern with your legal representative. In this way you can obtain the representation that is necessary to the matters at hand and thus receive the optimum in reliable service to maximize your rights. LAW OFFICES OF RICHARD PRICE, SMITH, SMITH & PRICE, P..C., 202 Mill Wharf Plaza, Scituate, 545-6660. We are available daily by appt.

A community's look at drug and alcohol abuse

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

The ninety parents and teenagers who attended the third and final session of the seminar, "Chemically Free" at St. Stephen's Church last Wednesday night, left with mixed feelings.

Sponsored by the Social Service League, this session of the seminar focused on the alcohol consumption of Cohasset High School students.

Attending the meeting were: Michael Rosati of the Health Education Prevention Resource Center; Bill Spinks, Director of the South Shore Council on Alcoholism; Michael Gill, Health Education Director of the Cohasset schools; and Officer Brian Noonan, Prosecutor of the Cohasset Police Department.

At the close of the meeting, issues including beach hours, house parties, parental influence and control, and the establishment of a SADD (Students Against Drunk Driving) chapter had been discussed.

"All anyone did was talk," Mark McManus, 16, stated after the meeting, "I came to see if anyone could come up with a solution, but I don't think there is one."

Michael Rosati, who runs meetings like these throughout 40 communities, was pleased with the outcome. "It was very encouraging. The critical factor is how willing people are to take a risk. Communication has begun. Now it is up to the community to work on a solution."

The first session was only open to students and the second was just for parents. Rosati opened this meeting by encouraging both sides to share some of the concerns they had expressed already, and to answer questions honestly.

"How much freedom do kids have not to drink?" one mother wanted to know.

"Most of the time, the alcohol is there, but no one is pressured into drinking," responded one teen.

"But why do you have to drink?" asked another parent.

"From what I've been told, alcohol relaxes you," explained one young girl. "Like when you're at a party and all the kids are older than you and you're really nervous."

"Why are you so afraid to let us drink?" asked a teenager.

"We are afraid that it will lead to more," another responded, "and we are concerned for your safety especially when driving."

Bill Spinks explained that certain people will have trouble with alcohol. "It's a fact that the earlier you start drinking, the greater your chances are of being a problem drinker."

The teenager also wanted to know why the adults drank.

Michael Rosati, who run meetings like these throughout 40 communities, was pleased with the outcome. "It was very encouraging. The critical factor is how willing people are to take a risk. Communication has begun. Now it is up to the community to work on a solution."

"We drink for the same reasons you do," claimed one boy. "What if we come home from a hard day at school and need a beer. Why shouldn't we be able to have one?"

"Maybe we should look at the example we are setting," a father conceded. "We don't even consider beer as drinking anymore."

"It is still illegal," one parent said. "Adults have the legal right to drink whick kids do not."

Officer Noonan said that while the police did try to control teen drinking, there was little that could legally be done to put a stop to it. "I don't have much faith in the system. If a change is going to take place, it has to begin at meetings like these," he stated.

"We're here because we want to help," said one parent. "If the kids want a place to socialize there are plenty of parents in Cohasset willing to open their homes to young people."

"When we go out on a weekend, we see about 150 people in one night. Who would want 150 kids in their house," a boy answered.

"Who wants their parents there watching? I know mine would be right there in the kitchen the whole time," said another girl.

"What exactly do you want?" asked a parent. "A meeting place?"

"When I was in high school, we had a place like that and it turned into the biggest drug and alcohol center on the South Shore," Michael Gill said.

In looking for a solution, the establishment of a local SADD chapter was discussed. Under this program, a contract is drawn up between parents and their children. Each party agrees that if they ever find themselves in a condition where they should not be driving, they will call the other party to come drive them home.

In the closing presentation, Rosati and Gill explained that the process of change can be slow and frustrating, but the frustrations must be directed towards a solution.

Helen Hooper, chairman of the Family Service Committee of the Social Service league, said she was encouraged by the outcome of the seminar. If anyone would like to pursue this issue and help work out a solution, contact Mrs. Hooper at the Social Service League, 383-0771.

Theatre Review

A tender 'Glass Menagerie' at Nickerson Theater

By Judith Montminy
Mariner Correspondent

Tennesse Williams' autobiographical play, "The Glass Menagerie," has become a mainstay of American theatre. It is the story of the family of Amanda Wingfield, a faded Southern belle, who lives with her two children in a small St. Louis apartment during the Depression.

Her husband, an employee of the telephone company, "fell in love with long-distance" and left his family to fend for itself.

Amanda is obsessed with marrying off her daughter Laura, and recounts her own endless line of "gentlemen callers," She is ever-expectant that Laura too will be as popular as her mother.

But Laura, as physically fragile as her collection of glass animals, is more interested in listening to the old records her father left behind. Tom, her brother, works in a factory to support the family. But he, like playwright Williams, dreams of writing and traveling to faraway places.

The Nickerson production of "The Glass Menagerie" offers a tender view of the Wingfields. Judy Braha captures the painful shyness of Laura, who is made sick to her stomach when she has to speak before strangers in a business class.

She would rather leave the house each day and pretend to go to the class than face the teacher again. So much of her life is filled with make-believe.

Childlike and simplistic in her outlook, Laura accepts her mother's hopes as fantasy and does not try to shatter her mother's dreams. Laura is referred to by others in the play as "crippled."

In many productions, she has a simple limp. At one point, Amanda says the large flowing skirts worn in the South would have hidden the limp. The hip deformity suggested by Braha's Laura would be hard to disguise in any costume. In Act I, the limp seems exaggerated and Laura's focus is unclear. She doesn't know what to do with herself. As the play continues, however, Braha gains tighter control over Laura and offers a portrayal that is fragile and sad.

Judy Braha is Laura and Steve Aveson is Jim, the gentleman caller in Tennessee Williams' poignant drama The Glass Menagerie now at the Nickerson Theater through Nov. 23.

Peg Lamprey's Amanda is insistent and desperate. Hers is the underlying tonal theme of the play — the enveloping barrage of notes. Her unrelentless nagging serves to drive away her son Tom rather than keep him close to what is left of the family. In some productions of "The Glass Menagerie," Amanda is clearly a wealthy Southern belle who has fallen on hard times. Director Neils Miller and Lamprey, however, suggest that Amanda's recollections of her good times may be as idealized as her current view of her daughter's prospects. She makes it easy to understand why Tom finally leaves home. But her desperation is haunting.

Robert Riley is a restless Tom who is more believable when he is engaged in scenes with the other characters than when he is reminiscing to the audience. Tom has left home and returns to St. Louis to his memories. He tells the audience that the play is a memory. "I give you the truth in the pleasant guise of illusion." Yet Tom's recollections often sound as if they are being recited. His accent is like no one else's in the play. One could almost imagine him saying, "Pepperidge Farm remembers." It's too bad. Because Riley seems to have captured the soul of Tom in other ways. He tries to placate his mother without playing into her hands entirely. He invites an acquaintance home fron the factory. When Amanda insists on viewing the friend as "The Gentleman Caller," Tom is amused.

As Jim, the friend Tom brings home to dinner, Steve Aveson is perfect. Once a high school star and kind classmate of Laura's, he treats her with sensitivity and encouragement in a scene that is bound to leave her as shattered as the glass unicorn that is knocked over when Laura and Jim dance together. Amanda has built up Jim's visit as Laura's big chance to find a husband. Jim is already engaged and ignorant of Amanda's intentions. In as graceful and gentle a way as possible, he bows out of the household.

Laura and Amanda are left clinging to each other. There is no resolution. Their future is unclear. What is clear, though, is that Tom can never erase them from his memory. And that memory is as delicate and fragile as "The Glass Menagerie."

The performance times for "The Glass Menagerie" at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m., Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 4 and 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 and 7 p.m.

CRAZY PATCHWORK

What's so-o-o CRAZY about Crazy Patchwork?

- You can use ANY piece of fabric on it—silks (men's ties are great), velvets, brocades, taffetas and moires—even polyester knits!—
- Your patches can be ANY shape, ANY color, ANY texture—they overlap and go any-which-way—
- You can use ANY stitch to sew them together and hide the seams—from the fast feather stitch to fancy flower sprays (there are hundreds of possibilities!)—
- You can embroider on ANY personal message—

The real joy of this lively art is the freedom with which you can get spectacular results! This practically foolproof instruction book shows you how to make dozens of projects such as vests (the Black Velvet winter vest is SUMPTUOUS!), evening dresses, evening bags, jackets, dressing gowns, a baby quilt and pillow (that will keep any baby entertained!), two wondrous Christmas wreaths and a Christmas stocking, an entire bathroom ensemble, and more! Step-by-step directions, diagrams and beautiful full-color photos show how to lay out the patches, quilt them and adorn them like MAD with dozens of stitches—all shown in BIG, CLEAR diagrams (use them, combine them or invent your own)! Conroy makes suggestions, and offers inspiring ideas and tips.

Do it by hand or by machine. All the techniques are set out for you. It's easy, it's fast, it's creative.

BONUS: The Crazy Patchworker's Designers' Notebook with ornamental patterns you can shape your patches to—or appliqué on. 110 pages, 8½ × 11, hundreds of photographs (8 pages in full color) and diagrams, index.

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

The terrors which stalk our Halloween dreams

"Gore, space aliens, monsters that can destroy the world, ghosts, vampires, werewolves — they just don't do it for me," Fauna complained. "Not anymore. I watched scary movies every night this week and I didn't get nervous once.

Not even when I was watching "Curse of the Cat People." That one used to have me looking over my shoulder for months."

Flora patted her hand and refilled her Diet Pepsi.

"I know what you mean. When I was in high school, just the sight of the hauntd castle would give me the shivers. And talk about audience participation — my friends and I used to sit in the balcony at Saturday matinees and shout advice to the characters.

" 'Look out, lady!' we'd yell as the vampire hovered outside her window, 'Stop brushing your hair and put your cross back on!'

"Or we'd scream, 'Don't trust him!' to the frightened teen aged heroine. 'He's not really your wise family doctor. There's a pod in his cellar.' "

Fauna sighed. "Do you suppose E.T. was so adorable he took away our fear of aliens? And there's so much gore, mayhem and destruction on the 6 p.m. news that the Late Show can't even ruffle our feathers?"

"No," I interjected. "I think we get scared just as often as we ever did. It's just that different things alarm us now.

"Personally, I live in fear that one of my children will join an esoteric cult and spend the rest of his life living on bean curds and yogurt. I ask you, is that any kind of a diet? And after I spent a fortune on vitamins when he was a baby.

"Yeah," Fauna mused, "you're probably right. Werewolves hold no terror for me these days, but our dog, Wolf, is another matter. I dread that the code enforcement officer will pick him up again. If he becomes a third-time loser the fine goes up to $35."

She shuddered.

Flora paled visibly. "you may be on to something," she admitted. "When I was young I used to get scared when I was home alone. I used to keep my back to a wall so nothing could sneak up on me. Now that I've grown up, I don't do that any more. I know the federal deficit is sneaking up, no matter where my back is."

"There are other things that scare me," I confided. "I worry that Nutra Sweet may really be more fattening than sugar. Or that Bruce Springstein will lose his voice. Or that Sylvester Stallone's muscles may be all silicone."

We looked at each other in fear.

"I have another fear," Flora confided. "You know that movie, "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes?" where the tomatoes come up out of the garbage disposal and kill the woman who's making spaghetti sauce? Well, I don't think the tomatoes are after me, but what if the cocoa beans ever come after people who pig out on chocolate?"

Fauna nodded. "I don't really believe that there's a chicken heart that can grow large enough to eat Chicago. But what if the zucchinis in my garden don't stop producing with the frost? First my house, then my town, then the whole South Shore could be doomed."

We moved closer to each other.

"If Orson Welles were alive today," I mused, "and he really wanted to scare the bejabbers out of people, he wouldn't do it with an invading planet. He'd do a phony news broadcast claiming that people all over America have consumed so many croissants that they're assuming permanent crescent-shapes."

"Right," Flora agreed. "And that croissantisis is hitting people while they're driving or on public transportation, making it impossible for anyone to go anywhere in the United States."

"And," Fauna added, "that whole classes of school children and their teachers, and joggers, and statesmen, and public safety officials, are suddenly bent over double and unable to function."

"It could just work," I said. "Croissantphobia could sweep the nation."

We looked at each other and shivered.

"Boy," I whispered. "This sure has been a scary Halloween."

Theatre Review

A tender 'Glass Menagerie' at Nickerson Theater

By Judith Montminy
Mariner Correspondent

Tennesse Williams' autobiographical play, "The Glass Menagerie," has become a mainstay of American theatre. It is the story of the family of Amanda Wingfield, a faded Southern belle, who lives with her two children in a small St. Louis apartment during the Depression.

Her husband, an employee of the telephone company, "fell in love with long-distance" and left his family to fend for itself.

Amanda is obsessed with marrying off her daughter Laura, and recounts her own endless line of "gentlemen callers," She is ever-expectant that Laura too will be as popular as her mother.

But Laura, as physically fragile as her collection of glass animals, is more interested in listening to the old records her father left behind. Tom, her brother, works in a factory to support the family. But he, like playwright Williams, dreams of writing and traveling to faraway places.

The Nickerson production of "The Glass Menagerie" offers a tender view of the Wingfields. Judy Braha captures the painful shyness of Laura, who is made sick to her stomach when she has to speak before strangers in a business class.

She would rather leave the house each day and pretend to go to the class than face the teacher again. So much of her life is filled with make-believe.

Childlike and simplistic in her outlook, Laura accepts her mother's hopes as fantasy and does not try to shatter her mother's dreams. Laura is referred to by others in the play as "crippled."

In many productions, she has a simple limp. At one point, Amanda says the large flowing skirts worn in the South would have hidden the limp. The hip deformity suggested by Braha's Laura would be hard to disguise in any costume. In Act I, the limp seems exaggerated and Laura's focus is unclear. She doesn't know what to do with herself. As the play continues, however, Braha gains tighter control over Laura and offers a portrayal that is fragile and sad.

Judy Braha is Laura and Steve Aveson is Jim, the gentleman caller in Tennessee Williams' poignant drama The Glass Menagerie now at the Nickerson Theater through Nov. 23.

Peg Lamprey's Amanda is insistent and desperate. Hers is the underlying tonal theme of the play — the enveloping barrage of notes. Her unrelentless nagging serves to drive away her son Tom rather than keep him close to what is left of the family. In some productions of "The Glass Menagerie," Amanda is clearly a wealthy Southern belle who has fallen on hard times. Director Neils Miller and Lamprey, however, suggest that Amanda's recollections of her good times may be as idealized as her current view of her daughter's prospects. She makes it easy to understand why Tom finally leaves home. But her desperation is haunting.

Robert Riley is a restless Tom who is more believable when he is engaged in scenes with the other characters than when he is reminiscing to the audience. Tom has left home and returns to St. Louis to his memories. He tells the audience that the play is a memory. "I give you the truth in the pleasant guise of illusion." Yet Tom's recollections often sound as if they are being recited. His accent is like no one else's in the play. One could almost imagine him saying, "Pepperidge Farm remembers." It's too bad. Because Riley seems to have captured the soul of Tom in other ways. He tries to placate his mother without playing into her hands entirely. He invites an acquaintance home fron the factory. When Amanda insists on viewing the friend as "The Gentleman Caller," Tom is amused.

As Jim, the friend Tom brings home to dinner, Steve Aveson is perfect. Once a high school star and kind classmate of Laura's, he treats her with sensitivity and encouragement in a scene that is bound to leave her as shattered as the glass unicorn that is knocked over when Laura and Jim dance together. Amanda has built up Jim's visit as Laura's big chance to find a husband. Jim is already engaged and ignorant of Amanda's intentions. In as graceful and gentle a way as possible, he bows out of the household.

Laura and Amanda are left clinging to each other. There is no resolution. Their future is unclear. What is clear, though, is that Tom can never erase them from his memory. And that memory is as delicate and fragile as "The Glass Menagerie."

The performance times for "The Glass Menagerie" at the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell are Tuesday through Thursday at 8 p.m., Friday at 8:30 p.m., Saturday at 4 and 8:30 p.m. and Sunday at 2 and 7 p.m.

CRAZY PATCHWORK

What's so-o-o CRAZY about Crazy Patchwork?

- You can use ANY piece of fabric on it—silks (men's ties are great), velvets, brocades, taffetas and moires—even polyester knits!—
- Your patches can be ANY shape, ANY color, ANY texture—they overlap and go any-which-way—
- You can use ANY stitch to sew them together and hide the seams—from the fast feather stitch to fancy flower sprays (there are hundreds of possibilities!)—
- You can embroider on ANY personal message—

The real joy of this lively art is the freedom with which you can get spectacular results! This practically foolproof instruction book shows you how to make dozens of projects such as vests (the Black Velvet winter vest is SUMPTUOUS!), evening dresses, evening bags, jackets, dressing gowns, a baby quilt and pillow (that will keep any baby entertained!), two wondrous Christmas wreaths and a Christmas stocking, an entire bathroom ensemble, and more! Step-by-step directions, diagrams and beautiful full-color photos show how to lay out the patches, quilt them and adorn them like MAD with dozens of stitches—all shown in BIG, CLEAR diagrams (use them, combine them or invent your own)! Conroy makes suggestions, and offers inspiring ideas and tips.

Do it by hand or by machine. All the techniques are set out for you. It's easy, it's fast, it's creative.

BONUS: The Crazy Patchworker's Designers' Notebook with ornamental patterns you can shape your patches to—or appliqué on. 110 pages, 8½ × 11, hundreds of photographs (8 pages in full color) and diagrams, index.

The Dragon's Dungeon

By Claire McDonough

The terrors which stalk our Halloween dreams

"Gore, space aliens, monsters that can destroy the world, ghosts, vampires, werewolves — they just don't do it for me," Fauna complained. "Not anymore. I watched scary movies every night this week and I didn't get nervous once.

Not even when I was watching "Curse of the Cat People." That one used to have me looking over my shoulder for months."

Flora patted her hand and refilled her Diet Pepsi.

"I know what you mean. When I was in high school, just the sight of the hauntd castle would give me the shivers. And talk about audience participation — my friends and I used to sit in the balcony at Saturday matinees and shout advice to the characters.

" 'Look out, lady!' we'd yell as the vampire hovered outside her window, 'Stop brushing your hair and put your cross back on!'

"Or we'd scream, 'Don't trust him!' to the frightened teen aged heroine. 'He's not really your wise family doctor. There's a pod in his cellar.' "

Fauna sighed. "Do you suppose E.T. was so adorable he took away our fear of aliens? And there's so much gore, mayhem and destruction on the 6 p.m. news that the Late Show can't even ruffle our feathers?"

"No," I interjected. "I think we get scared just as often as we ever did. It's just that different things alarm us now.

"Personally, I live in fear that one of my children will join an esoteric cult and spend the rest of his life living on bean curds and yogurt. I ask you, is that any kind of a diet? And after I spent a fortune on vitamins when he was a baby.

"Yeah," Fauna mused, "you're probably right. Werewolves hold no terror for me these days, but our dog, Wolf, is another matter. I dread that the code enforcement officer will pick him up again. If he becomes a third-time loser the fine goes up to $35."

She shuddered.

Flora paled visibly. "you may be on to something," she admitted. "When I was young I used to get scared when I was home alone. I used to keep my back to a wall so nothing could sneak up on me. Now that I've grown up, I don't do that any more. I know the federal deficit is sneaking up, no matter where my back is."

"There are other things that scare me," I confided. "I worry that Nutra Sweet may really be more fattening than sugar. Or that Bruce Springstein will lose his voice. Or that Sylvester Stallone's muscles may be all silicone."

We looked at each other in fear.

"I have another fear," Flora confided. "You know that movie, "Attack of the Killer Tomatoes?" where the tomatoes come up out of the garbage disposal and kill the woman who's making spaghetti sauce? Well, I don't think the tomatoes are after me, but what if the cocoa beans ever come after people who pig out on chocolate?"

Fauna nodded. "I don't really believe that there's a chicken heart that can grow large enough to eat Chicago. But what if the zucchinis in my garden don't stop producing with the frost? First my house, then my town, then the whole South Shore could be doomed."

We moved closer to each other.

"If Orson Welles were alive today," I mused, "and he really wanted to scare the bejabbers out of people, he wouldn't do it with an invading planet. He'd do a phony news broadcast claiming that people all over America have consumed so many croissants that they're assuming permanent crescent-shapes."

"Right," Flora agreed. "And that croissantisis is hitting people while they're driving or on public transportation, making it impossible for anyone to go anywhere in the United States."

"And," Fauna added, "that whole classes of school children and their teachers, and joggers, and statesmen, and public safety officials, are suddenly bent over double and unable to function."

"It could just work," I said. "Croissantphobia could sweep the nation."

We looked at each other and shivered.

"Boy," I whispered. "This sure has been a scary Halloween."

The Passing Lane

By Jane Lane

Meet the 1985 Grand Marquis : A commuter's dream

(This is a monthly column devoted to the review of automobiles; seen from the perspective of a woman who must survive the daily struggle of commuting and surviving in suburbia. Ed note.)

1985 Grand Marquis

Sedan:

EPA mileage rating: 18 City, 24 Highway
Price: $13,700 base sticker price

Colony Park wagon:

EPA mileage rating: 18 City, 24 Highway
Price: $14,800 base sticker price

When I first sat (sunk) into the deep cushioned interior of the Lincoln-Mercury Grand Marquis, one thought came to mind. This is what it must be like to drive oneself to one's funeral.

This car, with its deep velour, tufted seats, immediately recalls the opulence in which one is escorted to that final destination. And from my rather haphazard estimates, that back seat looks like it could handily accommodate a good-sized casket.

But onto more immediate concerns. The Grand Marquis, which will again be making its appearance in 1986, is a fitting nomer for this vehicle. It is extravagent looking - fit for at least six members of royalty.

It is a commuter's dream, with a suspension system that rates A plus with this stop-and-go traveler.

And surprisingly, at least to this amateur driver, is that such a large car handles so well. Maybe because the Grand Marquis commands attention, I felt that it would not fail me. Three-point turns, no problem. Parallel parking, no sweat. Illegal U-turns, quicker than the blink of on-coming cop's cruiser.

The trunk space contains 22.4 cubic feet of space -the equivalent of ten bags of groceries.

Truthfully, this car reminds one of a small plane (wings are optional). When you sit down and close the door, a pleasant-sounding chime, similar to an airplane's fasten-your-seatbelt warning, is sounded.

A noise to which I would immediately respond to by saying, "please existinguish all smoking materials."

As tiresome as that gesture grew, the kids would giggle, but dutifully put out their butts.

I sort of wish the Grand Marquis came equipped with a public address system. The kids were seated too far back in the rear to grab, and they had a worse than usual time understanding what Mom was yelling - "don't play with the window buttons," "don't hit your brother," "don't play with the armrests," and the ever popular, "stop kicking your brother."

Some nice touches - the power side mirrors, the electronically-controlled front seats and the lighted mirrors on the front visors. My bathroom mirror should be as forgiving as this reflection. And my son found momentary amusment, aside from kicking his brother, by examining his tonsils.

The Grand Marquis is a car for those who prefer good, old-fashioned comfort and luxury rather than great mileage.

The Grand Marquis is a semi-gas guzzler. It gets about 17 miles per gallon. But this is not a vehicle for the economy-conscious, budget-watcher.

The Grand Marquis is a car for many people - those who prefer feeling safe and secure rather than braving the untamed savagery of the expressway in something the size of your kitchen sink. It is a vehicle designed for comfort and pleasurable driving.

It feels great, rides smooth and looks sophisticated. One would never feel the urge to install mag wheels or glass-pack mufflers on this beauty. The Grand Marquis is for mature tastes only.

One minor complaint,- irritating enough to deserve mention. The gas cover release is stupidly located in the glove compartment, adjacent to the hood control.

In any other car that would be fine, but this car is really wide. What this means is that every time you stop for gas (and that is not unusual), the driver must lean over to the passenger's side, lay your head atop his/her lap and look sideways to check which release to press.

The last time I bought gas I was with a co-worker. Rather than attempt such an overt manuever, I casually reached over, pressed a button, and hoped for the best.

As the trunk pried open, I smugly dared that grinning attendant to fill it up. Unleaded, of course.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

A haunted menu including Halloween tasty delights

Witches and white-sheeted ghosts, giggling and shuffling through the leaves, will haunt our doorstep this week as little voices pipe "trick or treat," candy-filled pumpkins are proffered as trailing, tired parents wait in the shadows. Later, as they finally relax at home, perhaps munching on a little of the night's bounty, Mom and Dad may recall the days when candy bars were bigger when they were younger. Eight-year-old Allyson Stewart was a prize-winner at this summer's Marshfield Fair with this recipe. It's easy enough for the children to make while whiling away the afternoon before twilight brings with it trick or treating. The kitchen will be covered with sticky fingerprints, but who cares?

CARAMEL CORN

8 c. popped popcorn
3/4 c. packed brown sugar
6 T. butter or margarine
3 T. light corn syrup
1/4 tsp. each salt, baking soda and vanilla

Put popcorn in large bowl, removing any unpopped kernels. Measure next four ingredients into 1½ qt. pan. Heat ingredients, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon until mixture starts to boil. Stop stirring and cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Take pan off burner. Stir in soda and vanilla. Pour mixture over popcorn using rubber scraper to stir gently. Spread in flat pan and bake approx. 10 min. at 300°.

"Mr. Mom" and his three-year old shadow, keep house while "Mrs. Mom" is at work. In the two years since he was injured in a car accident, Earl Woodward has learned his way around the kitchen and has become such a good cook that he sometimes dreams up his own recipes. This one disappears almost as fast as he makes these

CHOCOLATE DIPPED MORSELS

Melt Sumer chocolate in double boiler very slowly, stirring until 130° on candy thermometer. Cool to 88°. Heat water again until 90°. Place chocolate in top of double boiler back on top to keep warm. Have on hand raisins, plain croutons, marshmallows and peanuts. Dip each in melted, warm chocolate, holding with toothpicks or tweezers. After dipping, cool and place on wax paper before mixing all together when chocolate cools and hardens. Sumer chocolate is made especially for dipping and Earl buys his at Lorraine's at Hanover Four Corners.

Bobbing for apples, carving pumpkins, cider and donuts are all a part of Halloween, but at the turn of the century, guests were sometimes invited to a friend's home to share in a "frolic." An old scrapbook tells how it was done. "Over every door of the house and rooms, apple parings hang and beside each, a maiden watches eagerly the lad whom the fairies have chosen to pass under it first. Meanwhile she sits busily cutting out letters of the alphabet, which later are to be set sailing in basins of water. With inflated cheeks she is to blow the letters into line so that they shall spell the charmed name of her dearest friend." What happens then, we are left to imagine, but in these days partying grown-ups would enjoy nibbling on Joanne Cure's

CHEESE SQUARES

3 c. Bisquick
10 oz. grated cheddar cheese
12 oz. chopped onions
2 c. milk
2 eggs
6 T. melted butter
1/4 c. poppy seeds

Saute onions in 2 T butter. Mix Bisquick, milk and eggs, add onions and 1/2 the cheese. Pour into greased, large, shallow pan. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top. Drizzle with rest of butter, sprinkle with poppy seeds. Bake at 400° for 25 min., or until firm and lightly browned. Cool slightly until set. Slice in approximately 60 small bite-size squares. Joanne writes that this recipe was given her by Candy Lawrence and she bakes this ahead and freezes it. "I slice it while it is still firm and slightly frozen and then heat in low oven for about 15 min. Makes very delicious squares similar to quiche, but much easier."

You can pay more for German engineering. But why?

The 1986 Volkswagen Jetta comes equipped with a 1.8 liter fuel-injected engine. Front wheel drive. 4-wheel independent suspension. And German engineering. All designed to give you outstanding performance, handling and comfort. All for only $8995.

You can pay more for a car that does what Jetta does. But why?

The 1986 Jetta. $8995 It's not a car. It's a Volkswagen.

State continues search for mental health home

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

The state Department of Mental Health (DMH) has not forgotten its intent to build an Intermediate Care Facility within Cohasset.

Although construction of a home for eight retarded adults was planned last year, the state agency decided several months ago that the Crocker Lane site was not a suitable location.

Since that time, DMH officials have located several alternative sites within town. Engineers for the state are looking at the sites, and plan to conduct drainage perk tests on the properties.

"The town was so receptive to our first plan for the housing, we are really enthusiastic about locating the home in Cohasset," DMH facility developer Peter Girardi said this week.

"I'm optimistic we can find a site that will be acceptable to everyone," he said, adding that engineers have looked at several sites throughout the town. "Once people realized the Crocker Lane site was not going to go through, we received a lot of calls from people who wanted us to look at their land."

More than a year ago, the state agency announced plans to construct an Intermediate Care Facility for eight mentally retarded adults (ICF-MR) on Crocker Lane property owned by the state Department of Public Works. Construction of the home was scheduled to begin last January.

But several months ago, the state reneged on those plans, saying the site is too close to a heavily-traveled highway.

The proposed facility will be home for eight mentally retarded men and women, aged 25 to 40 years, who have been pre-selected for the program by DMH. Four staff members will stay at the home with the eight residents.

The purpose of the Cohasset facility, one of 53 proposed by DMH for development across the state within the next year, is to give moderately-retarded adults the opportunity to learn and live in a semi-independent environment.

The intention of the program is for the residents to become increasingly independent, able to live within a community, outside institutionalized surroundings.

"We will make all the effort to locate the facility in Cohasset," Ricardi said. "We are currently investigating alternative sites and talking to local residents about available property. There are a lot of requirements for the site - it can't be located too close to wetlands, or it can't be built on a lot of ledge.

"This delay has not been encouraging," he continued, "but we are looking at a couple of sites and hopefully we can build on one."

The state agency is looking at one property owned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coyne of North Main Street. The property is located on Beechwood Street near the fork in the road by a small pond. DMH officials contacted Coyne about the property, and engineers will be conducting drainage tests there this week.

Coyne is hopeful the state will accept the site and purchase the property. "It's a natural concern," he said, referring to his 12 year-old retarded son. Although Coyne would like to one day see his son housed in such a facility, there is little chance he can live in such an independent environment.

"I'm not sure realistically, if this type of facility would be good for our son," he stated. "But we would be supportive of this housing even if it was not for our son. We are not willing to sell our land to the state just because we want a future home for him. There is only a slight chance he could ever live in such a facility. More realistically, he will never live in such a home."

Schools may be close to contract

Contract problems for two municipal unions have yet to be resolved.

While the teachers' association may be closer to a settlement, the police union has not reached an accord with the town.

The Cohasset Police Association has filed an unfair labor practice complaint against the town. A hearing on that complaint was held Tuesday morning before a Joint Management Labor Committee officer.

The association filed the complaint after selectmen, through labor attorney Philip Boyle, informed them that negotiations were at an impasse, and a five percent pay increase would be implemented Oct. 21. That pay increase, retroactive to July 1, 1984 and another five percent hike in July, 1985, will be decided by voters during the Dec. 9 special Town Meeting.

Although the police union refused the final contract offer, Atty. Boyle said that was the town's last attempt to negotiate a contract. The police association has been without a contract since July 1, and has negotiated with the town for more than a year.

Association President David Pomarico said the union members would not accept the pay increase and their attorney has notified the town of that decision.

Town Accountant Don Andrew said although the increase is scheduled for implementation Oct. 21, the raise will not take effect until the funds are appropriated by town meeting. If Town Meeting approves the contract increase, the funds will be released to the police association.

The latest hearing between the town and the police union this week centered on the unfair labor practice complaint. A hearings officer listened to the police union's explanation of the events leading to the complaint. A second meeting on the complaint will be scheduled although no date has been set.

The town was represented at the meeting by Atty. Boyle and Atty. Robert Garrett and Personnel Board member Jan Daggert. The union representatives included Pomarico, Officer Brian Noonan, Sgt. Richard Barrow, Officer Jack Conte and Atty. Joseph McParland.

Last week, a meeting was held by the state Joint Management Labor Committee at Cohasset Town Hall. With the two sides separated, state-selected representatives listened to each side and discussed the contract progress with the respective group. At no time did the union or the town representatives sit together and discuss the contract.

Another JLMC meeting is also being scheduled

Agent to help deserving vets

Noel Ripley entered a VA Hospital last winter. Friends and acquaintances had informed him that the facility was first rate.

The experience of 42 days was painful, he recalled, but made him aware of how precious those benefits are to veterans in need. The nurses were wonderful, he said, and the hospital was clean and modern.

People cared.

Everyday, Ripley said, volunteers would wheel patients around the facility. They would come to visit a lonely soldier. Veterans' groups would bring around magazines, coffee, donuts and cookies. All races and religions were brought together as one united group as they assisted veterans in need.

When he returned home that spring, Ripley decided it was his time to care. He applied for, and was subsequently appointed Cohasset Veteran's Agent.

"I decided that if I could do something to help someone, I should. This is one way I am able to help people deserving of help," he said this week.

A native of Cohasset, whose family homestead is located on the street named after his ancestors, Ripley became personally acquainted with veteran's benefits when he entered the West Roxbury VA Hospital for a back operation. His recovery was slow and uncomfortable, but Ripley believed his progress was accelerated by the exceptional care at that facility.

"I knew absolutely zero about the place, except what a few friends had told me," he noted. "But now I can say I took advantage of my benefits as a veteran and it was a good experience."

Ripley was accepted into that facility as a veteran who served during wartime. Most veterans' hospitals will only treat those patients who were in the service during wartimes.

Although only 18 years old, Ripley served overseas in the U.S. Army of Occupation in Japan immediately after the war concluded. He served there for more than a year, thus becoming eligible to retain VA hospital benefits within the statutory time limit.

It was many years later that his status as a veteran was of great assistance. A clock maker and repairman, Ripley is not covered under any group insurance plan. And when he was advised to enter a hospital for surgery, he immediately turned to the VA.

It was an enlightening experience, he said. "We tend to live in a detached society. We don't think of the hardships of others. We tend to forget things we don't want to remember. But being in the VA Hospital last winter made me see there are people who care, and that's great. I wanted to continue that feeling of caring," he said.

He was not intimately aware of the duties of the local veteran's agent. But slowly, he is becoming acquainted with the requests and needs of Cohasset veterans and their families. He is also astounded, but not overwhelmed by the amount of bureaucracy and paperwork involved in such a position.

Cohasset's week . . .

Agent appointed to board

The Cohasset Board of Health Agent, Dr. Joseph R. Godzik, was sworn in as a member of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering Administrative Penalties Advisory Committee by Governor Michael Dukakis Oct. 31.

The seven-member committee represents various governmental, environmental and business interests. Dr. Godzik is the representative of the Massachusetts Health Officers Association.

The committee is to provide advice and consultation to the DEQE concerning civil administrative penalties regulations which could cover such areas as hazardous waste, water and air quality and water pollution control. It will consider such matters as how and in what amount civil penalties will be assessed; whether local governments and certain federal agencies will be covered; and various administrative matters.

The committee will be meeting regularly since the regulations must be promulgated by June 30, 1986.

Fuel applications

Fuel Assistance applications for persons of all ages will be taken at the Senior Center office of the Community Center over the next two weeks, and thereafter by appointment.

Those needing assistance with their fuel bills may apply Wednesday through Friday, Nov. 13-15 and 20-22 from 10 a.m. to noon. For an appointment for a home visit or to apply after Nov. 22, call the Social Service League at 383-0771.

Individuals or families of any age may apply for financial assistance to help pay their fuel bills if they meet the eligibility requirements. Eligibility is based on gross annual income and the number of persons in the family. Applicants should bring proof of income and a copy of their heating bill.

Stormy concerns

Selectmen have responded to a letter written by Rev. John Keohane, Chairman of the Cohasset Council on Aging, about the lack of assistance given to residents of 60 Elm Street during last month's hurricane.

Father Keohane wrote to selectmen, explaining that the residents of the Cohasset Housing for the Elderly at 60 Elm Street were without electrical power and had no way of getting anything hot to eat or drink from Friday until Sunday midday. "Apparently nobody had made any plans for such an emergency," he wrote.

He stated that Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray learned of their plight that Sunday, and had hot sandwiches and soup delivered to the complex. Earlier that day the Fire Department has also arrived at the apartments offering hot water and transportation to anyone who wanted to go to the high school Civil Defense center.

According to the letter from Father Keohane, the Housing Manager left the complex at noon Friday and returned Monday morning without contacting the residents through the weekend. He complained that there are no plans to cope with such an emergency.

"The Council feels that the Housing Authority and its Manager should set up emergency planning for the senior residents and if the Authority needs help in this matter, they should notify the Council on Aging, the Civil Defense, the Fire Dept., or the Police or whoever can best help them," he stated.

Selectmen responded to the Oct. 31 letter by stating that they will inquire as to what the Housing Authority plans for future emergency situations "so there will not be a recurrence of this unfortunate matter."

Salt shed progress

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield recently updated selectmen on the progress of the construction of a salt shed.

Actual constructon has been completed at the Cedar Street landfill, he reported, and 90 percent of the town's salt will be delivered to the site for the winter.

Litchfield noted that delays caused by Hurricane Gloria have delayed additional work at the site, including installation of an electrical connection. Litchfield said he would like to construct a 12' by 12' building on one side of the shed to house an electrical panel and a small office with an extension phone to the Highway Dept.

He also noted that because the ledge has not yet been blasted, the asphalt paving planned for the site has not been completed.

Notice to taxpayers

Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley stated that fiscal 1986 tax bills were mailed Oct. 24, 1985. The first half payment must be received in the Collector's office on or before Monday, Nov. 25, 1985.

For any payments received after Nov. 25, interest will be computed at 14 percent from Oct. 26. A number of property tax bills have been returned to the Tax Collector's office because of improper mailing addresses.

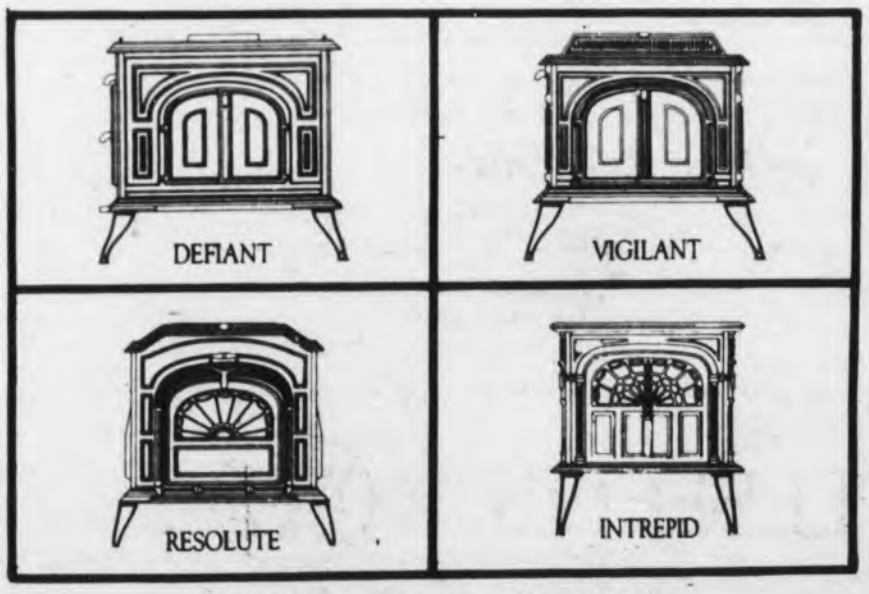
Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall.

Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after Nov. 25.

Sshhh! Alison Kinchla is busy making art in her classroom at the Osgood School.

Town Hall hours: Monday through Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday evening, 5:30 to 8:30; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Because of the Thanksgiving holiday, the Town Hall will be open Monday, Nov. 25 from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.



Cheese and butter

Government Surplus cheese and butter will be distributed by the Social Service League to Cohasset residents in NOVEMBER.

Recipients who qualify for the items are those participating in the following: Food Stamps, A.F.D.C., Welfare, S.S.I. (Disability), Medicaid, Head Start, Fuel Assistance, W.I.C., Veterans' Aid, or Unemployment, or they may declare that their family size and gross income fall within the current fuel assistance range for one person-$7,875; for two-$10,575; for three-$13,275; for four-$15,975.

If you qualify, call the office before November 15 at 383-0771.

State again closes clam flats

Following a tradition set a year ago, the state Division of Marine Fisheries has once again closed the clam flats in Cohasset Harbor through the end of the November.

And if bacterial tests conducted monthly by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) continue to show high fecal coloform counts, the entire harbor may be permanently shutoff from all shellfishing.

Currently the only area which is not permanently closed by the state is the middle portion of the harbor, near the Briggs Harbor - Bassings Beach area. The state is conducting tests there each month, trying to determine whether those flats can be opened, or whether there should be a permenent shellfishing ban.

DEQE representative Tena Davies has taken samples of the harbor water every month. Usually, those tests are conducted every three or four months. But because the state is attempting to uncover a pollution source, Davies said they are completing water sample tests once or twice a month.

"We've ordered the section of the harbor south of a line drawn west from the foot of Glades Road on Scituate Neck to Windmill Point closed for shellfishing because of the eratic results we've been getting. In April we got high total coloform counts, and again in September. If we got a couple of low counts in a row, we'd like to open the Briggs Harbor area, at least seasonally," she said.

Last month, Health Agent Joseph Godzik and Davies took water samples from adjacent areas. Tested in different laboratories, the results were inconclusive, according to Dr. Godzik. "Basically, I think they correlated. But I don't think we came up with any definitive results," he said.

Various sources of the harbor pollution have been investigated, but thus far nothing has solved the continual problem.

Dr. Godzik has inspected sewer connections of homes along Margin Court. It was suspected that one or more homes may not have been properly connected into the town's sewer system. Although the health agent has inspected most of the homes, he is still awaiting permission from other homeonwers to complete his inspections.

He also checked the plumbing connections of homes along Border Street. The sewer commission intends to televise the sewer line on that street. It is possible that a break occurred in the pipe last year when water pipes were replaced and excavation work was completed at the site.

Further upstream, but still a residual problem to the harbor is the troubled septic system in the rear of KoKo Island restaurant. Dr. Godzik said the health board recently received plans from an engineer outlining plans to repair the situation.

According to Dr. Godzik, the septic system drain runs behind the gas station at the corner of Sohier Street and Rte. 3A and under the parking lot of the restaurant and the adjacent businesses.

Eventually that drain runs into James Brook which empties into the harbor. Dr. Godzik is hopeful the drain correction will ease the high bacterial counts in the troubled harbor water.

"That's a big problem behind the restaurant, and at least, the situation there will be resolved. I don't know how it affects the bacterial counts in the harbor," he said.

DEQE representative Davies concurred that although many pollution sources have been investigated, thus far none have reduced the bacterial counts. Although the harbor area is sometime "just over the state allowable level," Davies said a subsequent test usually results in even higher coloform levels.

Last year, the Scituate Board of Health identified a source of pollution in the Minot area of the town. A store in that area was not properly connected into the town's sewer system and sewage was flowing into the ocean water surrounding the Glades section of Scituate.

That area flows into Briggs Harbor, and DEQE officials were hopeful that a correction would alleviate the pollution counts in Cohasset. Although that situation was corrected, there was no residual decline in the high fecal coloform counts in Cohasset, she added.

While the health agent and sewer commission are attempting to resolve the situation in Cohasset, Davies said the DEQE will probably take two more tests before determining whether to permanently shutdown the remaining portion of the harbor to shellfishing.

"Right now we don't have enough information. But we'll take a couple more samples and see what results we have from that," she concluded.

Six new P&B buses

State Transportation Secretary Frederick P. Salvucci reports that six new buses have been delivered to the Plymouth and Brockton bus company under the state Intercity Bus Capital Assistance Program (IBCAP), which allows the company to lease each vehicle at savings up to $1,000 per month.

An additional bus, equipped with a wheelchair lift to accommodate special needs riders, will be delivered to the company early next year, Salvucci said.

Plymouth and Brockton provides service from the South Shore, Plymouth and Cape Cod to Boston.

Chief to decide pension request

Fire Chief Martin Dooley will decide whether a disabled firefighter will return to the department or if he will be granted a disability retirement.

Firefighter Richard Conley, who has been off active duty from the Cohasset Fire Department for several months with a back injury, has requested the disability retirement from the force.

Selectmen first ordered Conley to be examined by a physician, Dr. David Segal, who determined the firefighter could return for "light duty." He said Conley would be able to return on a temporary basis for three or four hours a day, working his way up to a full day's employment. He determined that Conley was suffering from a partial disability, and would be able to do office work. Lifting heavy objects or standing for a prolonged period should be prohibited, the physician stated in his report to selectmen.

Conley appeared before selectmen Monday night and requested that his retirement application be processed by the board and the fire chief. He told selectmen he is untrained for secretarial work, and is unable to return to active firefighting.

"What would the town benefit, and what would I benefit if I was ordered to return to do office work? How would the town benefit, and it might be hazardous to my health," Conley stated, noting that his back injury has left him in constant pain.

He refuted some of the conclusions reached by the selectmen's physician and noted "it was not accurate as to what transpired that day." In the report to selectmen, Dr. Segal stated Conley's refusal to return to work in any capacity other than a professional firefighter.

Conley also noted that ordering him to return to the department in any capacity other than a firefighter would be against the union's contract.

Selectmen said it was a matter for the chief to decide, and that all parties would abide by the contract.

"If the chief has a way to assign (Conley) to light duty, that's fine. If he needs legal advise from us, he is to request it from (Chairman Frank) England," Selectman Cliff Mitman concluded.

Selectmen told Conley their report regarding the retirement application will be finalized this week. The chief has indicated his report will be ready the same time.

In other action this week, selectmen reviewed the Dec. 9 Special Town Meeting warrant for the final time before it is published.

The last article to be included in the warrant is a request to appropriate $200,000 to the municipal insurance account. In anticipation of a "worse case scenario," the advisory committee has requested that the budget supplement be included in the warrant.

The Insurance Advisory Committee warned selectmen last month to anticipate a large increase because of the expected premium rate hikes.

Selectmen will review later this week a plan developed by Building Inspector Edward Poskus to renovate the police and fire complex. Poskus, who is an architect, is finalizing his drawings of the proposed renovations.

At their Monday night meeting, selectmen approved the use of the Town Hall auditorium for the Dec. 7 Village Fair. Selectmen warned that all users of the auditorium, including the Village Fair participants and the Cohasset PSO during its Sports Sale, must protect the newly-refurbished floor. It was suggested that a tarpolin be spread across the floor to protect it during the public events.

In other action, selectmen approved the new Metro South regional council's application for a state Incentive Aid grant. The grant will be used to supplement the MAPC's technical and clerical assistance to the new regional organization proposed by Sen. William Golden.

Selectmen also delayed any increase for liquor licenses until they are assured that the licenses can be separated into categories. During a review of the licenses issued to businesses and organizations in town, the board noted that two groups are classified as clubs, although one is a private organization, and the other is a service group.

Before they decide whether to raise the license rates, selectmen said they should be advised whether it is legal to assign categories to the license holders.

Early Release Day

Thursday, Nov. 14, 1985, will be an Early Release Day for the Cohasset elementary schools only.

There will be no afternoon Kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Deer Hill School-bus departs 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School-bus departs 12:50 p.m. Lunch will be served.

This Early Release Day has been authorized by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the elementary staff members to attend the second session of the "Speaking/Listening Skills" Workshop presented by David Blocker.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES
By Norma Telesco
Home Center Realty

FINDING A BUYER IS THE EASY PART!

Selling a home can be one of the most complex commercial transactions that most of us encounter. Once you find someone who wants your house and has the money to buy it, it's still a long way to the settlement table. First, you must negotiate a purchase contract tht covers the price and all of the terms of the agreement. How much of an earnest money deposit will the buyer put down? How will the loan fees (usually about three percent of the mortgage amount) be split up? When and wherewill the settlement occur? Under what conditions can either the buyer or seller back out of the contract? Many sales agreements are contingent upon the house passing a major structural inspection. Then the buyer must obtain financing, and the lender's appraiser will have to agree that the sale price is not too high. Once the house passes inspection, and the lawyers agree that you have a good title to the property to pass on to the buyer, you can arrange a time and place to sign all the necessary papers to finalize the sale.

The agents at HOME CENTER REALTY have the training and professional experience to guide your sale through the maze of bankers, lawyers, inspectors, appraisers, and paperwork. Commission clashes over wetlands order

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

The Conservation Commission decided Tuesday night, that a Notice of Intent is required for the construction of a garage on the Burnham property, 30 Atlantic Ave.

Civil engineer Neil Murphy, representing the Burnhams, angrily accused the Commission of not adequately fulfilling their duties, of acting illegally by not notifying him of the presence of engineers on his client's property, and by taking the word of one abutter in determining if the land was a wetland.

In a meeting last week, the Commission agreed more information was needed to determine if the area was wetlands, and decided to hire their own engineer.

A statement from Silver Design Consultants said that from the testimony of an abutter, he considered the area a wetlands.

Murphy said legally the Commission was required to notify the applicants and their engineer if they were going to have a viewing of the property.

"I do not like to be put in the position where I can't represent my client," Murphy said.

Commissioner Richard Maichle said he was not aware that Murphy was representing the Burnham's.

"At the last two meetings, David Rubin said he was representing them. I would like to see something in writing which states who is representing them," Maichle said.

"I met with three members of your commission who told me I would be notified," Murphy said.

"We notified Mr. Rubin on that morning," said Pat Buckley, "That covers any legal aspects."

She also requested to see in writing the regulations he was referring to.

Murphy also contested that the abutter's opinion was considered evidence of a wetland.

"I've been to that property myself at every season and have never seen it flood," Murphy insisted. "There is nothing to substantiate what the abutter said."

"We have still not been shown anything in a professional nature proving that it is not a wetland," said Maichle.

Bill Parmenter agreed. "There just isn't adequate information about the situation," he said.

Murphy said his client was not bound to seek approval from the Conservation Commission.

"The Building Inspector issued a permit. I would have advised my client to be in the building when he received it," he said.

Bob Maki explained that in the event of a conflict of opinion, the applicant may submit the opinion of a certified engineer with engineering calculations.

"Maybe we should be looking at hydrological calculations," said Maki. "An isolated flood plain doesn't show up on a topography map."

Collection of hydrological data is complicated by the existence of an underground pipe whose location is undetermined. The building permit was granted with the stipulation that the pipe would be undisturbed.

Chairman Merle Brown called for a decision to be made that evening. In a second vote Brown changed his abstention to make it unanimous in favor of requiring a Notice of Intent for construction.

Cohasset postmaster advises early mailing

The Postal Service is cooperating with the business community of Cohasset in urging customers to shop early and mail early for the holidays.

The Officer-in-Charge of the Cohasset Post Office, Paul F. Farrell asks holiday shoppers to mail early this year and to make certain that mail is addressed correctly (including ZIP codes) and that packages are wrapped correctly so cards and parcels reach their destinations in plenty of time for the holidays.

"During the holiday season, the normal volume of cards, letters and packages handled by the Postal Service increases substantially," Farrell stated. "We in the Postal Service take pride in carrying your messages of love and joy. Mailing early helps us deliver the messages on time." The key to successful holiday mailing is to mail early and correctly. Officer-in-Charge Farrell says that includes planning now for gifts that must travel long distances by Christmas. Many overseas mailing dates—including those for the armed forces stationed overseas—occur this month.

"Customers should also take care to write legible ZIP Code addresses for both the address and the return address. The use of ZIP Codes following the name of the particular city and state aids us in processing the mail."

"Last year, our customers helped us tremendously", he continued, "they mailed early in the season and early in the day. We hope they will choose to cooperate with us again this year, so we both will have an enjoyable holiday mailing season."

☐ There is news from Boston College this week, and it is of special interest to Cohassetites . . . Linton Young has been chosen to be a member of the Boston College Chorale, a mixed chorus group. They are an extremely active group. One of the things on the agenda will be going to Rome in February. Linton, by the way, was Charlie Brown in "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," that they just performed recently at Boston College. To say that he has a lot of talent isn't enough, B.C. is lucky to have him as a student.

☐ Did "Passage to India," "Jewel in the Crown" or "Far Pavilions" whet your appetite for curries or Fandooi chicken? If so, call Shirley Marten (383-9829 or 383-0832) for some recipes. Her daughter, Kay Marten, a 1974 CHS graduate (who is now living in Washington DC) is having fun and excitement planning the second printing of a paperback, "Adventures in Indian Cooking" which she wrote and illustrated. This new venture is an offshoot of her consulting work as an applied anthropologist involved in small business development in Third World countries.

☐ Witnessed an awful sight at the football game . . . a very young boy was standing watching the game when a dog attacked him! Luckily for him, his Mom and Dad were right there, and he was unhurt, but it brings back to us the same plea—be sure your dog is at home during these events! It was a truly frightening experience for all around, but the dog's owner never knew a thing . . .

☐ On a much lighter note, got a call labeled "trick or treat" last week. This is not a trick, however. The men found an upper denture in the sewer plant last week, if you lost yours and can identify same, call Mr. Salvador on Elm Court and he will be glad to assist you.

☐ Can't believe it, but another Halloween is behind us! This year the spider that came to the door gets my vote. Unbelievable, right down to the six legs in front with false fingernails for claws. And the little spider was precious, what a work of art. I was told the spider's mom made the costume; she should be in the costume business!

So what are you looking at? You never saw a turtle crossing a street before? Well, its actually Mrs. Price and her kindergarten class about to bring a bit of Halloween fun to the residents of Cohasset Knoll.

☐ Have been asked to remind you that the 1985 Fall Sports Banquet, sponsored by the Cohasset Boosters Club, will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 13 at 7 p.m. All athletes who participated on any of the various fall teams will be the guest of the Cohasset Boosters Club. All parents and siblings are welcome to attend at a cost of $3 each. The menu will include tacos, milk and ice cream sandwiches.

☐ "Pip" Gilmour sure has been doing some extensive traveling! She went to Finland and stayed with Johanna Arola (who was an AFS student four years ago), and then went to spend time with Tove Osterling (an AFS student two years ago). Both girls want to be remembered to Cohasset and would love to hear from you (call Mrs. Gilmour for more information). Pip meanwhile has seen 12 countries including Germany, Denmark, France, England, and Spain. Her parents flew to Madrid to pick her up, then drove 3,500 miles around the Mediterranean, up through Italy into Austria. There they deposited their Pip, at the University of Vienna, where she seems happy. There she will stay until next April, and from there she sends everyone love . . . also wants everyone to write, call her mom for details (talk about writing, she'll be able to finish a series of books after this adventure, hope you are writing it all down, Pip).

Residents criticize Edison's storm response

By Don Merrill
Mariner Staff

Eastern Edison came under sharp criticism Monday night from area residents at a state Department of Public Utilities hearing probing the utility's conduct after Hurricane Gloria struck here Sept. 27.

Of the 75 local officials and residents of towns from Scituate to Abington who attended the 1 1/2-hour hearing at Scituate High School, none had anything kind to say about Eastern Edison's efforts to restore power to customers.

Officials complained of an inability to contact anyone at the utility in the week after the storm. Many residents blasted the utility because of a lack of repair crews in the area, or because the crews were seen taking breaks.

One Cohasset woman, whose family went without power for a week, said Eastern Edison told her there was nothing they could do to restore her power, despite the fact that the utility had placed her family on a priority list because her handicapped husband receives kidney dialysis treatment at home.

A number of officials also told DPU Chairman Paul Levy and Hearing Officer Kathleen Hearn that Eastern Edison should not be granted a future rate hike if it is based on the damage caused by the storm.

Although Eastern Edison officials were present at the hearing, none asked to speak. Levy said the utility would have a chance to tell its side of the story in the final round of hearings, which are to be held in Boston at an unspecified future date.

Levy declined specific comment on the department's position on the rate hike issue.

"Some rate hikes have been traditionally allowed for reasonable expenses incurred in an emergency like this," Levy said. "It may be the subject of future rate hearings, but the information presented tonight might be entered into the record" at those future hearings.

Levy and Hearn made no comment during the hearing, interrupting speakers only to ask a clarifying question.

DILEMMA

For many residents, nearly a week without power meant inconvenience and, in some cases, hundreds of dollars' worth of spoiled food. But for the Cohasset family of John and Chartis Langmaid, the power outage presented a life-threatening situation.

Chartis Langmaid told Levy that her husband, who receives dialysis treatments at home three times a week, was forced to travel to a Brockton treatment center for dialysis that week.

"When I finally got Eastern Edison in the phone, they told us they could do nothing to get our power back on quickly," she said.

"It boggles my mind to think about 105,000 Eastern Edison customers fending for themselves in the middle of the winter. It seems there's no plan for the handicapped, for the elderly or for anyone else with medical needs."

Langmaid added that Cohasset firefighters came to their Beechwood Road home once each night to carry John upstairs, since he could not use a 'chair-lift' elevator powered by electricity.

While encouraging emergency plans, DPU should also closely monitor how Eastern Edison plans to place repair crews in emergencies, said Norwell resident Robert Eich.

"DPU should scrutinize these criteria," he said. "A crew asked me about the location of lines on an access road toward Scituate that was indicated on their maps. I've lived in my house near the Scituate line for 27 years — they closed the access road over 20 years ago."

ANSWERS

Abington Executive Secretary Arthur Miller said the utility should have a firm program to prune trees which threaten power lines. He questioned why it took Eastern Edison four days to get extra (out-of-state) crews to the towns.

"Eastern Edison has 0.083 crews per sqare mile of its service area," he said, "while Commonwealth Electric has 0.160 crews per square mile. Why is there such a difference?"

State Rep. Frank M. Hynes (D-Marshfield, Scituate), who is chairman of a special legislative committee on utilities and the storm, listed 13 suggestions for improving Eastern Edison's response to future emergencies.

A number of the points had been proposed by Marshfield Civil Defense Director Daniel McGonagle in a hearing before Hynes' panel last week. They included utility participation in local "mock" emergency exercises each year, sending utility representatives to local emergency centers in storms,

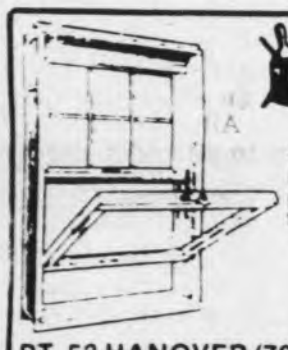
The Law and You

by Richard Price, Attorney-at-Law

THE INDICTMENT

An indictment is an accusation in writing. It states that a particular individual is charged with a specific crime. It is usually prepared by the prosecutor. The case is then presented to the grand jury. When the case is heard, the prosecutor presents his proof that the named defendant is responsible for the crime which was committed and with which he is charged. Twelve or more of the grand jurors msut agree that the evidence is enough to hold the defendant for trial. The foreman will write the words "a true bill" across the face of the indictment and sign his name as foreman. The indictment then becomes the record of the charge against the defendant on which he is to stand trial.



If you are unfortuate enough to be criminally charged, always remember not to aggravate the situation by aggressive behavior. Never waive your rights, because they exist to protect you. The best and safest policy is to contact an attorney as soon as possible who will take action in your best interest. True heroes

Monday is Veteran's Day. Traditionally, it is one of those Monday holidays when your biggest concern is figuring what is open and what is closed for the day.

Face it, we don't make a big thing of Veteran's Day. Either you have the day off from work, or you don't. Either you sleep a bit later Monday morning, or you grudgingly shuffle off to work.

This year, we think it would be appropriate for everyone to spend at least a minute or two to think about the day. Get away from the kids, the television, the stereo, and the neighbors. Sit somewhere quiet and secluded, and think about what veterans mean to our country. And think about how we've thanked them.

Being a veteran is something akin to being a police officer or firefighter. People don't do it for the gratitude they receive, for the accolades they are given, or the salary they receive. There is something honorable about the person who decides that serving others is more morally rewarding than reaping financial profits.

There was a time, not long ago, when being a veteran was something looked upon with disdain. During the height of Vietnam, boys were dragged into service through an active and non selective draft system. Some obliged with honor, some were dragged kicking into the Army, and others fled families and friends to escape into foreign lands.

What the public didn't fully realize at that time, was that all these men were heroes. The men who served their country with honor were true examples of courage. The ones who were forced into service were just as heroic, fighting their best in a war they were not allowed to win. And the young men who honestly thought the war was wrong, who decided that leaving their families forever was the only alternative, made just as courageous a choice.

It is known that the country's true heroes were only teenagers at the time. How absurd it is to think that some of this year's graduating class of Cohasset High School would have been our combat forces 15 years ago? Can we imagine that this group of bright, articulate and gifted kids would have been part of the troops defending Saigon or the Demilitarized Zone of Vietnam ? These kids, filled with hope and anticipation for the future, were the ones sent forty years ago to invade the distant shores of Europe and Japan.

The true heroes of our past were just kids when they were given real guns and bullets and sent away to defend our country in lands they had yet to learn about in school. From the classroom, to the beaches of Normandy. From the streets to Saigon.

It was not the commanding officer, the mature, middle-aged, college-educated man who fought along the front lines. They were kids, inexperienced, immature and unprepared for what they would see and what they would do.

Many kids never returned home. Mother, fathers, sisters and brothers were somewhat comforted in the knowledge that their son or brother was a true American hero. But many of us, especially during the Vietnam War, did not realize that until much later.

When our brothers, husbands, fathers and cousins returned home, we slowly heard stories about the war - about the young kids who fought despite the government's non support, and the public's disdain.

If fighting in Vietnam was a nightmare, their welcome home was a tragedy. They were heroes without honor. We turned our back on these kids as we marched off to college, to our prospering employment, to our new homes.

Hopefully, as the years pass, we will realize how wrong we were. We feel dishonorable for our confused actions, and now must express our humbled apologies. Whether you fought in Germany, France, Japan, Korea, or in South Vietnam, we honor you for your unquestioned courage.

And to all our veterans - we make a promise. We will never forget.

No, the Boston and Maine has not come through Cohasset Common. This is a view from the Meeting House of workers spray-painting the clapboards which will form the new siding of the Meeting House.

Letters

The Hull connection will be costly

To the Editor:

The DEQE letter summarized in the Mariner October 31, pointed out that although the State is generally supportive of sending our sewage to Hull for treatment, there are problems. Cohasset has not engineered it's collection system to the satisfaction of DEQE, nor provided the required information. No agreement has been reached with Hull, nor has Hull yet concluded that it can spare the capacity. In addition to what DEQE pointed out, there are other flaws. The 300,000 gallons per day limitation on flow to Hull is less than the flow anticipated from the areas to be sewered. (As determined at the Town meeting June 1984, the sewered area is the same as that proposed for phase one of the Metcalf and Eddy plan which anticipated a flow of 500,000 gallons per day).

It should be noted that Cohasset will be paying for the unfunded part of the Hull plant, i.e., full price. Had we built our own plant, most of it would have been funded. For about the same first cost and annual cost, we could have had our own much larger and better plant, fully under our control, and capable of expanded use should we choose to do so at some future time.

It certainly does not "bankrupt the town" to get more for the same money. (The cost delusions of the Ward Plan have to be adjusted to the realities of approvability and fundability). The assumptions and method of cost analysis are detailed in my treatise "The Sewer Follies of Cohasset", available in the Paul Pratt Library. They have been waved off by bombast, but no one has been able to show them to be incorrect. Admittedly, future costs and funding levels will be different, and will penalize Cohasset for it's feckless mismanagement of the issue.

Send a message of peace

To the Editor:

Henry David Thoreau advised his contemporaries, "Simplify! Simplify!"

And so he did, our son, the newly-married one, with his bride traveling on their honeymoon.

The postcard he sent depicted the Grand Canyon in Arizona, a massive, rough, precipitous gorge, colored burnt orange-shading-to-tan, alternating with late afternoon shadows. The dark pine trees, in the foreground, evidenced the time of day, and balanced the deep blue sky above the canyon.

The message was lucid, precise, simple: "Hi, everybody! This place was awesome! You have to see it someday to appreciate why we should save the world. See you soon! Love, Scott and Crystal."

"... Why we should save the world."

And so I wrote my letter to President Reagan. I began by quoting our son's message, and then I offered some specifics: I urged him to use the Geneva summit to achieve a breakthrough on nuclear arms control; to halt nuclear testing by placing a moratorium on testing to be followed by a ban in order to curb modernization of warheads; and to make definite agreements toward reducing the numbers of warheads.

I suggested that he and Mr. Gorbachev adopt "The Five Continental Peace Initiative" led by the leaders of India, Mexico, Argentina, Sweden, Tanzania and Greece. (This initiative is becoming a significant influence in the world-wide effort to move the world toward nuclear disengagement).

"Nuclear war can be prevented," I wrote, "if you and Mr. Gorbachev will accept the bottom line that "Militarism" is not the remedy for the world's ills, that "Militarism" is a corruption of the mind and spirit. No matter what are the differences between our countries of the world, they can no longer be solved by war."

I asked President Reagan to heed the words of the great English historian Arnold J. Toynbee: "Either mankind is now going to abolish the institution of war in any form, or, sooner or later, it is going to commit mass suicide. Mankind is free to choose life, not death, and this freedom imposes on mankind today an unlimited responsibility."

I elaborated a few more ideas, and ended my letter, knowing full-well the complexities of the problems our leaders would face as they approached the summit at Geneva.

My letter had been complex, too, with all of kinds of embellishments, lengthy details, carefully wrought-out instructions for the President. Wordy; my letter had been wordy! I certainly had not "simplified" my message. Why could I not, in a few direct words, tell our President what I really wanted him to know - that this summit meeting offered the greatest hope to mankind, to rise to a level of maturity never before achieved?

My thoughts drifted back to our son and his young wife. They would be hiking, carrying back-packs, staying with close friends, Joe, Allyn, Gary -and others I do not know - traveling along the coast to Santa Barbara, viewing the splendor. "It is for this generation," I thought, " and the next generation and the next, that our leaders must be committed to reducing these insane nuclear weapons."

Then, I did an implulsive thing; I tore up my letter and began again:

Dear President Reagan:

Good luck at the summit meeting in Geneva.

Sometime theories and doctrines and complexities and differences must be passed for the greater good of humanity. For once, wouldn't it be appropriate for you and Mr. Gorbachev to focus on the bottom line reality?

Simply stated: "We must save this awesome world."

Sincerely,
Priscilla Daniels

Vet's agent decided it was time to help

There are no office hours for the veteran's agent. His office is his home which contains a three-file cabinet with records and statements on the town's past and present servicemen.

If someone requests information from Ripley, he will put the request in writing and forward it to an authorizing officer in Boston. If he authorizes the request, the town is then obliged to write a check for the payment. The state will reimburse the town for 75 percent of every check written for veterans' purposes.

"There's a lot of paperwork," he complained good-naturedly,"but it's necessary that every request for benefits be authorized in Boston. If not, the town could end up paying for everything themselves."

Ripley explained that veteran's benefits are divided into two divisions, federal and state. The federal government grants benefits for veteran's education, through the GI Bill and the vocational rehabilitation program. There are home loans, disability pensions, medical care costs, readjustment counseling, GI insurance and employment assistance. State assistance is available for unemployed veterans who need temporary financial assistance.

The veteran's agent is available to answer, or seek answers to questions of local veterans. But, as Ripley explained, when a veteran is in need of assistance, he has usually exhaustively researched the answers to his problems. A veteran's agent may make the access to answers a bit easier.

Most veterans, he added, are aware of the benefits offered them. The readjustment period for all our veterans, including those returned from Vietnam, has been long enough now that most veterans know what they are elgible for, and what is available for them.

Ripley's predecessors, Gerard Keating and Gordon Flint, knew full well the extent of paperwork involved with the position. "And there's volumes of stuff the veteran's agent should know about federal and state regulations. They're pretty clear cut; there's not much of a grey area. Either a veteran is eligible for certain benefits, or he's not. It's just a matter of me knowing exactly what all those benefits are," Ripley stated.

"If a veteran is in dire straits, he'll examine every avenue. I hope to be able to assist him, but I'll never know if I can until he requests my involvement," he said.

One warning Ripley has issued to all veterans is to retain their discharge records (form WD-53) in a safe place. A veteran must have that record to be eligible for any type of benefit, including admittance to a veteran's hospital. "That's what a person needs to prove he's a veteran," Ripley said. "That one form contains all the necessary information."

Only six to ten persons a year request assistance from the town's veteran's agent. But Ripley is preparing for their questions and requests.

"If they come to me, I can promise to put them in the right direction. It's pretty straight forward. Either they will be eligible for benefits, or they won't. The government is pretty clear about that, and if they want my help, I'll be here," he said.

This Cohasset native, who has traveled through the world and lived overseas many years, is glad to be back home. Ripley is anxious to learn all he can about his new post.

He's waiting with a hand extended to those in need. He is a former soldier waiting for the chance to serve once again.

Resolve contract

To the Editor:

Once again I am writing in regards to a town employee morale problem in Cohasset, this time the Police Dept.

Although I am no longer a resident of Cohasset, I was born there 48 years ago and lived on Short St. for many years before my parents moved to the big city, South Boston, for business reasons. However, I still have several relatives and family members living in Cohasset, including my 75 year old mother, whose family were residents of Cohasset going back perhaps 100 years ago, or longer, which is one of the principal reasons for my writing this letter. I still love Cohasset and care about what is taking place there.

I have many fond memories of my boyhood days in Cohasset, including my newspaper route around town on my bicycle, having to be at the old railroad station at 7:55 a.m. in order to board the train taking my brother, Jimmy, and me to school (we did not have school buses in those days), going out on the ocean with the fishermen and lobstermen. I also have vivid memories of the firemen and policemen during those years, including Police Chief Hector Pelletier and Fire Chief Piepenbrink, two very dedicated and outstanding leaders.

At this time I am very concerned about the serious morale problem that exists within the Police Dept., namely, NO PAY RAISES FOR MORE THAN TWO (2) YEARS. There is absolutely no justification for the Cohasset police officers to be the lowest paid on the South Shore. No matter what town or city, every time a firefighter or police officer responds to an emergency situation, their lives are on the line. Unfortunately, nowadays too many people will not recognize this fact, until something happens to them. For those individuals who think Town employees are overpaid, why is it that just about every police officer, firefighter and DPW employee, whom I know in Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and many other towns are working second jobs, and in most cases their wives are working also?

I have observed this morale problem in many other towns over the years, and the results have been devastating. I hope the residents and taxpayers of Cohasset will recognize this problem immediately and make their thoughts known to their elected and appointed officials. The Police Dept., as well as all town employees, are providing the services we ask for and are paying for. Therefore, they should be reimbursed accordingly.

The Board of Selectmen, in their infinite wisdom and true concern, have resolved the morale problem that existed within the Fire Dept. by not renewing Chief Dooley's contract. Hopefully they will resolve this morale problem within the Police Dept. in the same concerned and wise manner and as quickly as possible. Support from the residents of Cohasset will certainly help, and then everyone will benefit from the results. Please remember, it is better to be SAFE than SORRY.

More criticisms leveled against Edison

filing emergency plans with local officials each year, annual joint reviews of the plans by local officials and Eastern Edison representatives and active use of media outlets to alleviate hundreds of phone calls made to police and firefighters.

Hynes also said he opposed an Eastern Edison rate hike and that the utility should be audited by DPU to determine whether it is financially capable of coping with future emergencies.

"The bottom line is this: if the lines of communication remain open, there will be greater tolerance of the problems," Hynes told the DPU panel.

INVENTORY NEEDED

Hanover Selectmen Chairman Janet W. O'Brien suggested the DPU require Eastern Edison to develop an emergency plan which would be updated annually.

Allowing residents and local officials to comment during the annual updating process should be "an integral part of the (utility's) planning process," she said.

O'Brien also indicated that Eastern Edison apparently lacked an adequate supply of repair parts, such as transformers and wire, to deal with repairs after the storm.

"These are necessary in any plan for the next storm or emergency," O'Brien said.

Selectman A. Donald Deluse, also of Hanover, sharply criticized the utility for suggesting that local officials were partly responsible for the lengthy power outages. Officials in Hanover, Hanson, Abington, Scituate, Marshfield and other area towns requested town-wide power cuts the night of the storm for safety reasons.

"We dislike being told we were the cause of delays in power restoration," Deluse told Levy.

"We had 12 fire calls that Sunday — two were real fires caused by downed lines that, for whatever reason, had been reactivated. In fact, we stopped counting the downed lines when we reached 190.

"If they aren't going to talk to officials or residents, at least Eastern Edison should be in contact with local Civil Defense directors during such emergencies. If I remember right, utilities did this years ago," Deluse added.

Hanover Selectman Robert J. Nyman asked when findings resulting from DPU hearings could be expected. "Very cold weather will arrive here in four to six weeks, and it could be tragic if this occurred again," he said.

Levy did not specify a date. That depends on when the Boston hearings are set and how much information goes into DPU's final report, he said.

IN THE DARK FOR A WEEK

Scituate officials complained that it took Eastern Edison six days to send a company representative to Town Hall to explain the restoration process. Selectman Joseph Norton said that no one from the utility initiated a call to any Scituate official in the week after the storm.

"This shouldn't be an adversarial situation, but Eastern Edison's lack of communication and its general handling of the emergency made it that way," Norton said.

Scituate Selectman Andrew Zilonis called for an audit of Eastern Edison equipment and staffing to make sure it can meet its commitment to the public.

"Eastern Utilities Associates, Eastern Edison's holding company, paid a 16.2-percent return to stockholders in 1983 and a 16.5-percent return in 1984," he said. "Any company with those figures and $380 million in gross revenues should be able to make Eastern Edison a responsible utility."

Scituate resident James J. Bousquet Jr. later cautioned against approval of a rate hike for Eastern Edison. He said stockholders should bear the financial responsiblity for Eastern Edison's handling of the crisis.

Warren named shop manager

Lynda Warren of Marshfield has been named the new manager of the Mariner Print Shop.

Born and educated in Marshfield, she plans to contribute to the print shop, the knowledge she has acquired throughout her eight years of experience in the printing field.

Lynda initiated her career as a senior in high school. She began typesetting for South Shore Lincoln Press and by the end of her two year stay, she added paste up, platemaking, stripping and bindry work to her skills.

In 1979, she began work for Jay's Publishing Service of Rockland as a paste up artist and book designer.

Within four years, she had taken on the challenge of camera work to broaden her expertise.

During the early spring of this year she accepted a position with R. J. Ferrioli Concepts of Plymouth. There she took on the responsibility of organizing the entire printing and advertising department.

Her work also involved initiating a billing format, purchasing and customer service.

Linda has taken a graphics layout and design course at Northeastern. She has also received training on Varityper's new 6900 computerized typesetting system.

'Pirates of Penzance'

Directed and Produced by Bryan Marks, with a host of CHS teachers and students playing strong behind-the-scenes supporting roles, this Gilbert and Sullivan operetta (one of the world's most popular) will be performed Dec. 5, 6 and 7 at 8 p.m. at the newly-refurbished CHS auditorium.

"Pirates of Penzance" is set in the sentimental, tradition-bound world of Victorian England. The actions of the story center around the naive 21 year-old orphan named Frederic, whose decision to leave piracy for respectability has hilarious consequences.

Senior John Pereira is Pirate King; Major General, Sr. John Kuntz; Frederic, Sr. John Kornet; Samuel, Soph. Peter Kasperowicz; Sergeant of Police, Sr. Glen Hochkeppel; Mabel, Soph. Michele Meagher; Ruth, Jr. Cindy Bell; Edith, Soph. Joy Turner; Kate, Sr. Heather Davenport; and Isabel, Sr. Ann Marie Goggin.

Police are: Seniors Damien Wolfe and Andrew Glasfeld; Juniors Mark McManus and Karl Becker; Sophomores Ian Sullivan and Derek Lacks; Freshmen Matt Kuhn, Dan Farwell, Cliff Scott and Craig Carter; 8th Graders Joel Whitman, Matt Silvia and David Zaloga.

General Stanley's Wards are: Seniors Laura Doherty and Kathy Hasse; Sophomores Vickey Kelley, Laurel Collins, Amanda Sweeney, Kristin Green, Erica Ford, and Mary Beth McNamara; Freshman Celia Mullen; and 8th Grader Carrie Ripley.

Calendar

Saturday, November 9:

"Flowers for Algernon," CHS auditorium, 8 p.m.; CHS football at East Bridgewater, 1:30 p.m.; sports equipment drop-off, 178 South Main St., 9 a.m. to noon.

Sunday, November 10:

"Flowers for Algernon," CHS auditorim, 8 p.m.

A long fond farewell

An 18 foot long farewell card was created by Deer Hill students for their former Joseph Osgood third grade teacher, Mrs. Shirley Manna. It was presented to her at her retirement party held recently at Hugo's.

The children shared happy memories in words and pictures of their third grade experience. It is truly a warm expression of love and appreciation for the energetic teacher who mixes learning with excitement, surprises and humor — not to mention M&Ms, "40 lashes" and bear hugs.

Mrs. Manna's card can be enjoyed by all of her friends at the Paul Pratt Library where it is displayed in the Reference Room until Nov. 12.

Correction

In the "School News" column of the October 31 Mariner, the Cohasset PSO (Parent School Organization) incorrectly stated that the "Osgood's Own Authors and Artists" publication was a PSO project.

The Osgood Literary Committee, with the full support of the principal and staff, is responsible for the concept and realization of this literary effort. The PSO regrets that excerpts from their letter to Osgood parents were inadvertantly quoted.

Fifth grade videotape

Mrs. Hibbard's fifth grade reading group at Deer Hill School made a videotape on "Manners and You." This video was created and produced by Matt Gromada and Kate deLima, and was presented for the first time at Open House.

The three main topics explained were "General School" (passing in the halls, cafeteria, speaking properly and teasing); "Recess" (teasing, fighting, swings and behavior outside); and "Hosting" when a friend is at your house. There were discussions and play-acting and roll-playing to give examples of manners.

All in all, it was fun and informative. Just being on videotape and being a host or hostess, as the case may be, was a first for the class.

A special thanks to Mrs. Hibbard and Mrs. Murphy for operating the camera and behavioral assistance.

Nursery School program

The Nursery School program sponsored by members of the Child Study classes, under the direction of Mrs. Patricia Wunschel, will soon begin at Cohasset High School.

Children must be a minimum of 2½ years-old and must to toilet-trained.

Any parents wishing information on enrollment are asked to call the High School.

Anyone wondering what to do with used games, puzzles and toys, are asked to consider donating them to our pre-school program.

A great field trip

The Deer Hill Sixth Grade, through the efforts of their principal teachers and room mothers, recently attended the Chinese exhibit at the Science Museum in Boston.

The children gained much insight into the lives, crafts, and history of the Chinese people. It is hoped that this field trip will help to make the China unit come alive for the children this year.

We all are fortunate that the trip was made available to our youngsters. All the adults involved in the trip are very proud of our sixth grade ... they represented their school and our town in a most exemplary manner.

This isn't your everyday crossing guard. This is Mrs. Marie Price and her kindergarten students as they prepare to bring some "haunting" treats to their neighbors at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Godzik attends workshop

Dr. Joseph R. Godzik, the Cohasset Board of Health Agent, is participating in a workshop at the Tufts University, School of Veterinary Medicine.

The workshop, entitled "Public Service Veterinarians, Who They Are and What They Do," is designed to assist veterinary medical students in planning their future career activities as veterinarians. Veterinarians from many areas of the public sector will be participating.

Participants include representatives from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, U.S. Department of Agriculture, U.S. Army, Pan American Health Organization and the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Godzik will be speaking about the role of a veterinarian in municipal and county government.

Boys tough against Abington; onto showdown

By Lisa Shumaker
Mariner Correspondent

The boys played an excellent game on Sunday and defeated a tough Abington football squad, 14-0.

The game remained scoreless until the fourth quarter when Bobby Durkin strung together a couple of good runs and finally dived three yards for the touchdown.

Then late in the fourth quarter, Peter Sandbloom recovered an Abington fumble which led to Bobby Durkin's second touchdown of the day. Bobby had an impressive total of 134 yards rushing. Bobby Corkery rushed for two points on an conversion.

Coach Phil Pisano said Cohasset's offensive and defensive lines controlled most of the game. Pisano was especially pleased with the defense which he felt never broke down. Peter Sandbloom, with seven tackles, two interceptions and a key fumble recovery, and Liam Stanford with five tackles and two sacks, led the Skippers on defense.

Pisano also cited Dereck Lacks as having a good game defensively.

On offense, Jeff Soltesz had a great game opening up holes. Patrick O'Connor also pleased Pisano with his play on offense.

Pisano also mentioned Philip Mahoney as being consistent on both offense and defense.

This victory sets up a showdown between Cohasset and East Bridgewater on Saturday. If the Skippers win, they can tie for the Small School League championship. Pisano feels this game will present a difficult challenge for Cohasset, but one he feels his team is ready to meet.

FIELD HOCKEY

Undefeated! That is the only word that sufficiently describes the field hockey team. Undefeated!

Going into Tuesday's game, Cohasset knew Duxbury was the only team that could mar the Skippers' unblemished record. But Cohasset did not succumb to the pressure and hung tough to pull out a scoreless tie.

The defense had quite a workout and rose to the occasion. Halfbacks Kara McDonald, Anne O'Leary and Colby Mantz all had outstanding games. Fullbacks Jill Shockman and Sarah Dickerson also played well, discouraging every Duxbury attempt to score.

Lee Sullivan and Maria Cahill also had good games, creating several scoring opportunities. In fact, Sullivan had a goal which was (questionably) called back in the first half.

The All-Star game was played Saturday, and Cohasset had the largest number of participating players. Lee Sullivan, Maureen Farren, Cindy Spooner, Maria Cahill, Sarah Dickerman and Lisa Shumaker were the All-Stars from Cohasset.

Incidentally, the team on which these girls played dominated and won, 1-0, with Maureen Farren scoring the goal.

The girls open the tournament Wednesday as they face Old Rochester on Milliken Field at 2:30 p.m. Cohasset was seeded third in the tournament and plans to remain undefeated for the rest of the season!

BOYS' SOCCER

The boys didn't have to win their last game, but they showed a lot of character, and prevailed over Norwell, 1-0.

Coach Jon Anderson was proud of his team's playing and especially pleased with his team's attitude and that Cohasset did not let the insignificance of the game affect their play.

The Skippers had many scoring opportunities, but it was not until two minutes remained in the game that Chris Kirkendall finally connected with Kurt Weisenfluh's pass to give Cohasset the victory.

Anderson cited David Caffery and Kevin Dunn as having outstanding games. Goalie Billy McKenna racked up his 11th shutout of the season.

Cohasset had a good showing at the All-Star game Saturday.

Bobby Shultz, Chris Kirkendall, John Reidy, Mark Crough and Bill McKenna all made this prestigious team.

Seeded seventh in the tournament, the boys play Medway Tuesday in the first of hopefully several playoff games. Anderson feels the teams are equally matched and the contest between the two should be exciting.

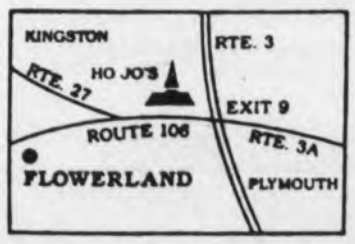
GIRLS' SOCCER

The girls concluded their season this week with two games.

Monday, the Skippers gave the number two state team, Abington, a tough game. They came very close to tieing, but fell just short and the game ended 3-2 in Abington's favor.

Kerri Kirkendall scored both of Cohasset's goals. Margie Murphy and Caitlin Staunton both played well according to Coach Kennan Startzell. Startzell also cited Liz O'Leary and Susan Riley as having good games defensively.

The girls ended their season Thursday with a loss to Scituate, 2-0. Startzell felt his team did not play up to potential, but that Cohasset totally dominated the second half.



Caitlin Staunton stood out for Cohasset as having a good game as she broke through Scituate's fullbacks several times but unfortunately couldn't find anybody to connect with.

Overall, Startzell felt his team learned more about team play than anything else this season. Startzell was pleased with the way in which his team played against the strong teams like Abington. He felt Cohasset showed spurts of brilliance every so often. The Skippers will be looking especially to Caitlin Staunton, Susan Riley and Liz O'Leary to help them reach their goal of playing in the state tournament.

Several awards were given this year to excellent players on the team at the annual soccer break-up dinner. Kristen Contis was awarded the Hustle Award, Lyn Pompeo was given the Most Improved Award, and Caitlin Staunton received the prestigious honor of M.V.P.

Lawmaker explains education reform to Democrats

By Jane Lane
Mariner Staff

More than 100 Democrats, the "Dukakis administration South," listened this past week as the co-author of the 1985 Education Reform Act explained a few of legislation's numerous details.

The co-chairman of the Joint Committee on Education, Worcester's Gerald D'Amico came to Cohasset Sunday, Nov. 4 to praise the state administration's strong support for public education reform. The Education Reform Act, he said, was a joint effort between the executive and legislative branch of state government throughout its two-year passage of approval.

The vote from his constituents has yet to be cast, but D'Amico, who admitted his intent to announce a campaign for Lt. Governor, believes the taxpayers support this attempt to update and renew the public educational system.

"We are pouring in $140 million into the second year of this program," he said after his speech to the South Shore's Coop-6, "and I think the public is just beginning to feel the reforms being created. It's too early to say how the voters actually feel, but they are beginning to get involved in educational renewal. This is a complicated law, but it will give the local communities local decisions. The individual will play an important role in this program - to institute that change and renewal."

His constituents from Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield listened attentively as the former Boston teacher reviewed some of the major components of Chapter 188. With a broad stroke, Sen. D'Amico explained a few of the intricate details of this "reinvestment" in the students and teachers of the Massachusetts educational system.

He repeatedly stressed the importance of revitalizing and equalizing the public education system, as well as upgrading the economic incentive for current and future teachers.

An important aspect of the new law has been the option for local communities to raise the minimal salary level of all teachers to $18,000. In the previous edition of the reform act, the income level was mandated. According to D'Amico, that concept was figured to result in an "administrative nightmare" for local school systems and the state and the concept was scratched for the final version.

That salary scale is now a matter of collective bargaining for the individual school systems to finalize. But the intent remains the same, according to the Worcester Democrat. "Part of this law is to enhance the economics of the profession for the state's 57,000 teachers. And, we will be creating a magnet for those who are deciding to become teachers," he said.

Included in the economic incentive package is a provision to distribute grants for in-school programs and proposals developed by local teachers. The Horace Mann grants will be given annually to six percent of the system's teachers as a salary supplement, for their work in developing and administrating programs within the school.

There are several proposals within the legislation, D'Amico explained, that deal with the state's efforts to upgrade public education and equalize the opportunities for students in every community.

In this spirit, he added, Chapter 188 has recommended a standard of basic skills achievement. "We are trying to create an opportunity to work with kids, and their families, who are below state standards," D'Amico said. "The Block Grant program is for chronic basic needs problems, so there is a basis there for them to develop at a higher level."

Included in this effort are grants for school systems to fortify their pre-school, kindergarten and K-1 transitional education programs. Seventy-five percent of this funding will be targeted to communities and their school systems below the poverty level.

"This program will save us those dollars in the future of these kids," he stated.

D'Amico expressed strong support for the "core" of Chapter 188 - the intent to encourage involvement among students, staff and families to upgrade the educational services provided in their communities. That is the intent of creating the School Improvement Councils in each school building - a group of parents, teachers, and residents who will decide each year how best to develop the curriculum at that school. Small amounts of funding, $10 per student, will be awarded annually to the school. The councils will determine where the money will be spent - for the purchase of books, for building maintenance, or for program development.

"I think the councils will help us," he said, "because we need people to become activized - to see that this reform stays in place. This is an important first step in energizing our schools."

There are many other aspects to this law, D'Amico continued, including a provision for staff development. Money will be available for college students to work part-time as classroom aides and tutors while in college.

There is also a Lucretia Crocker Foundation grant built into the program. The grant would be available to teachers and administrators for research and development. It will allow those staff members to leave on sabbaticals, where they will travel to other schools and share the creative thoughts and programs they have implemented in their schools.

"It's a good strong beginning," D'Amico told the South Shore Democrats. "But we need the state to continue to supplement our local policies. Only then can we have the best schools, and the best teachers in those schools." It is his intention and hope that the state continues to fund Cpater 188 at the same quarter-billion dollar level through the next two or three years.

That will be a difficult challenge, D'Amico admitted, with the loss of Federal revenue sharing funds, and the impending repeal of the state surplus budget.

Four new Special Needs programs

Four new programs for the Special Needs people in the South Shore area will be sponsored by the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, Inc.

The programs will be held after school, early evenings and weekends and will include a sports program, courses in swimming and gymnastics, and social programs for young adults and adults. All applicants are welcomed to register immediately.

Children between ages 5 and 12 will be hosted to an after-school program to be held on Friday afternoons at the Osgood School in Cohasset. The course is entitled "Super Kids in Movement" and will be instructed by Helen Pratt. Children from the surrounding schools are welcomed to attend this program from 2:30 to 4 p.m, beginning Nov. 15.

Gymnastics is everyone's favorite and will be outstanding as Kathy Corrigan's School of Gymnastics of Rockland hosts an eight-week course in basic gymnastics for all children between the ages of 5 and 15 year.

The course will be held Monday evenings from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. beginning Nov. 18. The class will be limited, so sign up today.

Swimming is a favorite too, as all ages are welcomed to sign up for an instructional swim program to be held at the Webb's Fitness Center in Norwell, beginning Nov. 10. Trained instructors and volunteers will provide a one-to-one with all students.

If you like to dine, go to the movies, attend a play, and more, and if you are 16 and over, then why not join Friday Night "Live." "Live" is a social program to be held twice a month in Norwell and open to all young adults and adults. The small fee includes everything, and a different activity will be planned by the students.

There is great news in recreation for Special Needs People, so the South Shore Associaton for Retarded Citizens Inc. invites you to call Norene Carter at 335-3023 for registration material and to register. The programs will be coordinated by Drew C. Bililies.

To insure space in the programs please sign up immediately. The fees are reasonable and scholarships are available.

J. Bildner & sons

Grocery shopping with a style of its own.

OPENING UPDATE

Behind Our Doors in Cushing Plaza

It's hard to imagine it now, amidst the dust and construction crews working long hours, but when finished on November 19th, J. Bildner & Sons will bring back some of the flavor of food shopping the way it used to be.

Some of you have probably noticed some major changes in the exterior of our building. Even greater changes are in store for the interior. Among the stunning brass fixtures, mahogany cabinets, European display cases and gleaming ceramic green and white tiles you can find our chef, butcher, baker, and florist, in addition to trained food experts ready to help you acquaint yourself with a new style of shopping.

We are still hunting for antiques which will be used to create timely displays, accented by a traditional tin ceiling. We hope you will join us for our Grand Opening on November 19th and see for yourself a new era of grocery shopping where service and quality are what you can always expect.

SANTA CLAUS IN A TUXEDO

Student government elections held this week

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R) 3rd Plymouth District (Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull) noted that elections were held in Cohasset High School on Nov. 5 to select a delegate to the thirty ninth annual Student Government Day Program.

"The program was established in 1947 by the Massachusetts General Court in order that secondary students of the Commonwealth would be able to learn about state government by participating in an unique and meaningful experience. This idea has developed into a six-month program which explores all aspects of our state governmental system and includes a one-day "take-over" of the state administration by the students," said Murray.

"Any secondary school in Massachusetts is eligible to send one student representative to this program. The student must be sixteen years on or before May 31, 1986. The student must be elected by the high school in a democractically-held election. The student must be dedicated to receiving full benefits offered by the program in understanding state government," she continued.

After the election in each school, the names of the delegates are placed in a glass bowl. Names of the student counterparts will be drawn by the governor, other Constitutional officers and Supreme Justices. Another drawing will be held to select the governor's councillors, department heads, cabinet secretaries, senators and representatives.

Three series of workshops will be held for the purpose of educating and informing teachers and student delegates about the legislative process and state government. The first series will be held in the regional educational centers. The second and third workshop series will be held at the State House. The governor will participate in these workshops along with the Constitutional officers, legislators, judicial officials, members of interest and lobbying groups. The workshops will also provide an opportunity for students to observe the legislature in session.

Student Government will take place on the first Friday in April. On this day, students will participate in the place where is happens, the State House. This allows students who have been educated in state government the opportunity to exercise their newly-obtained abilities in the atmosphere that actuall government officials perform.

Murray concluded, "The Student Government Day Program has been successful in many ways during its long history. Along with the responsibility of educating a concerned population of the citizens and future voters of Massachusetts, it has been estimated that one-third of the elected state officials currently serving in Massachusetts have participated in the program. Therefore, this program has a responsibility to Massachusetts to provide knowledeable and exemplary public officials for future generations."

Teachers close to settlement

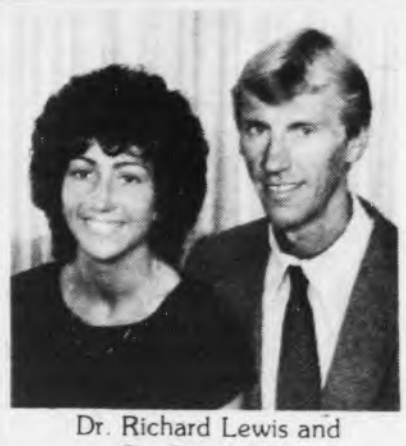
between the two sides.

In addition to the proposed salary increase, the union is opposed to changes which would institute a flat rate for night differential and sick leave buyback, rather than using a percentage of an individual's salary.



The Cohasset Teachers Association may be closer to a contract settlement. At this point, both teachers and representatives of the school administration have gone back to their corners to discuss strategy.

According to Union President George Fortin, a meeting between the two sides produced no final results, although he admitted "we're close. It depends a lot on what the teachers are discussing now. But hopefully, we are going to settle this soon."

The association representatives met Oct. 28 in a mediation session with school committee negotiators. "We had some substantive talk, but no results," Fortin said. "I'm pretty sure we're going to have another mediation meeting, although nothing has been scheduled yet."

The union president, who has been in negotiations with the school administrators for more than a year, is hopeful the contract will soon be concluded. "I'm looking forward to another meeting," he added.

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. New name sought for South Shore council

By Kathleen Kroll
Mariner Staff

Can you think of a better name for the South Shore's new Metro South council? If so the Metropolitan Planning Council (MAPC) would like to hear from you.

The proposed council will unite 10 area towns in order that they can begin to address and manage shared concerns.

MAPC will coordinate collection and management and data and will aid in identifying priorities for the 10 communities to consider.

MAPC will also develop and recommend solutions according to the policies agreed upon by the towns. Staff support and technical advice will be readily available to particpating towns.

MAPC will meet with selectmen in Cohasset, Duxbury, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland and Weymouth to discuss details of an incentive aid proposal.

The towns will be looking for $35,000 from the state's Executive Office of Communities and Development. The money is considered crucial to getting the South Shore subregional project (currently called Metro South) off the ground.

The grant specifies the activities for which the funds may be used, and requires a 10 percent local match. MAPC has agreed to provide the local match for all of the communities (through its local technical assistance program budget) and cover the cost of overhead expenses. MAPC estimates it will contribute a total of approximately $12,000 to the project. A similar Metro West council has been very successful, according to MAPC officials.

According to Executive Director Alexander V. Zaleski, it is MAPC's role to be supportive of efforts to seek solutions to shared problems. "There are concerns and plans which require a metropolitan approach," he said, "and there are others best addressed on a smaller scale."

The 10 communities expected to partcipate in the South Shore subregional planning project are: Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth. Pembroke, the 11th invitee, has declined to join the council. Pembroke selectmen indicated recently that they would prefer to withdraw from MAPC completely and join the Old Colony Planning Council instead.

Zaleski disagrees with charges that Metro South is simply "another layer of government."

According to Zaleski, MAPC is currently a comprehensive resource largely untapped by the 101 communities it serves. "But once they find us and see what we can do for them they keep coming back," he said.

Recent MAPC technical assistance projects on the South Shore include: conducting a groundwater protection plan for Hingham, developing a Metro South grant proposal; land-use maps and statistics for each community; developing an oil spill response plan for coastal towns; "up front work" for Marshfield's fair housing study, and a water protection plan for Weymouth.

MAPC also unsnarls traffic and transportation-related problems. For Norwell and Duxbury the council is doing a Rte. 53 study including accident summaries and organizing a ridesharing program. They have also submitted a grant application for $80,000 to set up a South Shore Transportation Brokerage to serve area towns, including Norwell, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate.

MAPC also is developing a proposal for a regional groundwater protection project on the South Shore. MAPC is working with State Senator William Golden and the state DEQE to develop a project scope which will qualify for state financial assistance.

Diary of a hurricane survivor

By Nina Belsan
Special to the Mariner

Was it only three or four short weeks ago I tried to take a hot bath in the wash basin at McDonald's?

If you want a hurricane to hit, make sure the car is tied down in the driveway. Hurricanes hardly ever happen when you're prepared. I laughed at the lady who loaded her shopping cart with powdered milk. Her boots to the hip provided a provocative prelude to what was brewing in the Carolinas.

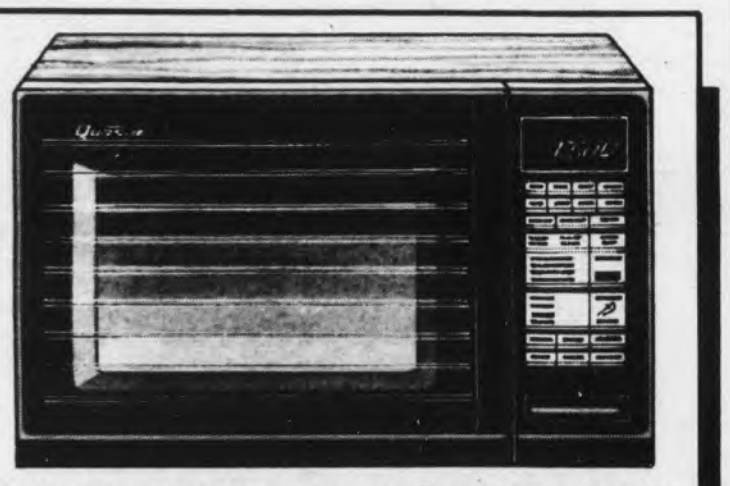
Not only didn't I buy powdered milk, I never even wondered about the angry crowd around the "D" battery display. You might say I was caught with my hip boots down.

I was the only woman on my block without candle wax build-up on her eyelids.

When Gloria's winds subsided, I said a prayer of thanks that my home's roof and frame were still keeping company. But after seven days of no hot food, my prayers changed to: Please God, when I fall over the dog in the dark again, don't let me be carrying a bowl of hot stew from Thelma's house.

In the blink of an eye, I felt as if I had been transported back in time at least 200 years. Gloria's screech had silenced my typewriter, stove and television, (my three favorite appliances), my refrigerator, washing machine, dryer, can opener, etc. etc. etc. I could not work, eat shower, clean, wash, watch television, or see if the new puppy had left us any presents during the night. Etc., etc., etc. Whoever was fool enough to walk around in the middle of the night usually reported her findings to the rest of the household which wasn't sleeping anyway since bedtime was 5 p.m.

There is nothing romantic about putting on make-up by candlelight. After the third day, an ugly sneer appeared at the right corner of my mouth. The left corner was so burned, I could hardly lift it to accept my hardy meal of cold, canned beans.



On Day Six, my daughter, who is the only stable one in the family, cracked: "I can't take it anymore! I'm leaving for a totally electronic environment!" (She missed the melifluous sounds of Kool and the Gang.)

"Take me with you," I screamed. "I too wish to go to a world of ear-shattering stereos, where hair dryers dry and microwaves wave, where I can tell the difference between toothpaste and Ben Gay at 6 in the morning."

Now I know why our ancestors didn't invent Trivial Pursuit; they were too tuckered out just trying to survive.

CHS art teacher not retiring from life

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

"Art teaches us how to live well as opposed to just living."

Thomas Lucas, artist and teacher

Thomas Lucas came to Cohasset 30 years ago and brought his art with him.

Founder of the South Shore Art Center and the Cohasset Art Festival, Lucas is retiring after teaching art for thirty years in Cohasset public schools.

Lucas received his bachelor's degree from the Massachuestts College of Art and has done graduate work at Harvard and SanMiguel College in Mexico. Lucas also spent a sabbatical year at the American University of Beirut in Lebanon.

When he first came to Cohasset, Lucas says there were few organizations for artists. So began a workshop across from Hugo's. The Cohasset Art Festival was formed as an outlet for local artists to exhibit and sell their work.

When they were evicted from their building 27 years ago, the group got together and formed the Art Center. The Center, which has classes and sponsors exhibits, is currently preparing to construct new headquarters adjacent to its present downtown location.

When Lucas began teaching in Cohasset, he was the only teacher for grades kindergarten through high school. The system gradually expanded to include five teachers, but with Lucas' retirement, it will return to one.

"I feel like I'm back at the beginning," says Lucas. "There was a period of great awareness in art. During the 70s the attitude began to change. People started thinking they had to make money.

"Money isn't everything. They are missing the appreciation of the beauty of life."

Lucas believes everyone should have some first-hand acquaintance with art. "No one doesn't have talent. You should exploit what you have," he says.

In teaching, Lucas looks at the various aspects of the individual. He tries to teach them the basics and to impart some type of structural way of working. But to him, all views are valid.

"I give them as broad a spectrum as possible to choose what is right for them," he explains. "There is no one truth. What is most important is to be true to yourself and what you feel about what you see."

Lucas expresses himself mainly in the expressionistic style although recently his work has become more realistic. His large colorful paintings cover the walls of his spacious self-styled home.

Appropriately called Bourne Rock (the peak of the rock comes through the floor of his living room), the house shows little of its original Victorian style.

Lucas began renovating the house 20 years ago to suit his own needs, which include a lifetime accumulation of art, artifacts and furniture from around the world. Lucas completed most of the designing and building. He also made a workshop for his students, claiming that he put several through college by having them work on his house.

Based on Frank Lloyd Wright's theory of the purity of line, space and material, the house features cathedral ceilings. lofts, plenty of windows and even a three story, live tree.

The redwood ceilings are set in a herringbone pattern which Lucas calls "a symphony of ins and outs." Stone fireplaces and walls were cut from the rock on which the house stands.

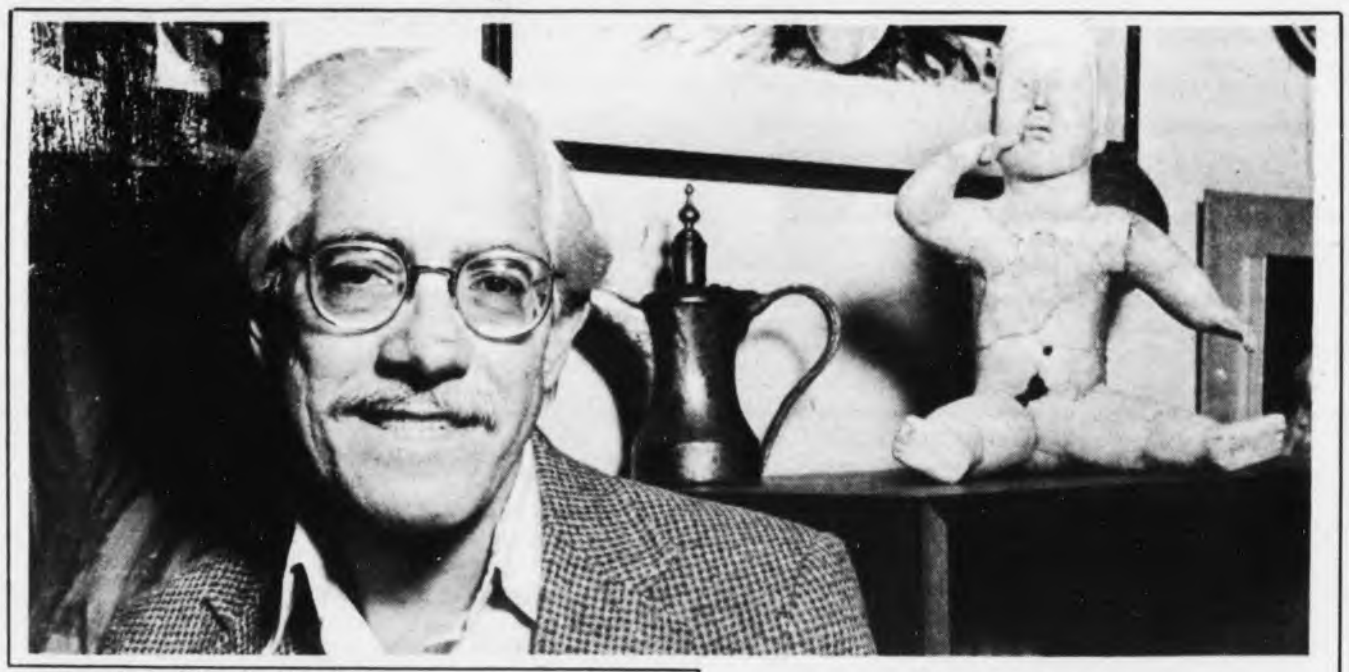
In spite of the stark modern design, the paintings and the bright rugs brought back from Mexico give the house a friendly feeling. The furnishings are a delightful mix of American antiques, modern novelties, Mexican accessories and anything else that caught Lucas' eye.

Beautiful Bill Wyman pottery is found throughout the house. The corner of one fireplace is a custom-designed ceramic column by Wyman. The late artist was a close friend of Lucas'.

The house is designed so that no curtains are needed, and the view is spectacular from all angles. High above Cohasset Village, the scenery includes the village, the bay and his neighbor's backyard.

"I'm lucky they keep such a nice garden," says Lucas.

Lucas also owns a home in Oaxaca, Mexico where he spends his summers. He hopes to spend more time there now that he is retired from teaching. He plans to travel around the world looking for things to bring back to Cohasset.



Lucas hopes now he will have time to explore his own creative interests. "Hopefully they will also help me in my livelihood," he adds.

Lucas has three children, his oldest daughter works in Deaconess Hospital in Boston. His daughter Carla, a 1985 graduate of Cohasset High School attends Wheaton College. A soccer standout, she leads the league in scoring.

His seven-year-old son Matthew is the budding artist in the family. Already his drawings are on display in the kitchen.

Lucas is excited about beginning a new phase of his life.

"I am retiring from teaching but I am not retiring from life," he states. "I have one life to live and I hope to live it as excitingly as I possibly can. If there are challenges, I don't mind!"

November programs at SS Science Center

Because of its popularity, the calligraphy course at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell, has been extended for four additional sessions, running Tuesdays, (Nov. 12, 19, 26, and Dec. 10) from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Instructor Joanne Papandreas is willing to teach new students and will also maintain her current enrollment. Pre-paid registration for this adult workshop is required. (members/$30; non-members/$35). Call 659-2559 for further information.

HACKETT'S POND ADVENTURE

On Nov. 13 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m., join naturalist Barbara Devine for an exploration of the "other" Science Center Pond. This is a great opportunity for those of you who know Jacobs Pond to compare the two and an autumn adventure for all! Pre-paid registration is required. (members/$4; non-members/$5). For further information, call 659-2559.

CUT, PIERCED LAMPSHADE

Now is your opportunity to learn a life-time skill in two three-hour workshops to be held Wednesday, Nov. 13 and 20, from 7 to 10 p.m. These delicate handpainted shades make a beautiful gift for someone special—and the holiday season is fast approaching! Bring 24 clip-style clothespins; all other materials are provided for a 5"x9"x7" shade. Pre-paid registration is required. (members/$26; non-members/$30). Call 659-2559 for further information.

NOVA SCOTIA PHOTO TOUR

The Natural Science Center "Magic Carpet" whisks you to the Maritimes and a scenic focus on the famous Lighthouse Route. Dramatic slides of this beautiful seashore area were photographed and are presented by the one and only—Elizabeth Lawrence! Join us for a taste tempting luncheon after the program. The tour takes place on Friday, Nov. 15 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. so sign up now! Pre-paid registration is required (members/$7; non-members/$9). For further information, call 659-2559.

FAMILY DAY AT DUXBURY BEACH

Explore the marsh, seashore and dunes at Powder Point Bridge in Duxbury on Saturday, Nov. 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. with Marine biologist, Liz Garlo. Collecting of live species will be done with seine, dip nets and sieves. After observations the speciments will be released. Carpool from the Natural Science Center. Pre-paid registration is required: (members/$6; non-members/$8). For more information, call 659-2559.

PRUNING AFTER THE HURRICANE

This is the time to clean up your yard. Want to know what to do with the damaged or blown down trees? Do you know what to look for when assessing damage? Want to learn how to prune damaged trees effectively? Join Plymouth County Extension Service expert, Mike Sikora, for a demonstration and question and answer period on Saturday, Nov. 9 from 10 a.m. to noon. Pre-paid registration is required (members/$5; non-members/$7). Call 659-2559 for further information.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

And don't forget to register your children in any of the Natural Science Center's education programs! Parents and Tots, sign up for Tuesday or Friday sessions, meeting from 10:15 to 11:30 a.m. (members/$20; non-members/$25); Nature Nursery for 3 Year Olds: register for Monday or Wednesday sessions, meeting 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. (members/$50; non-members/$65); Nature Nursery for 4 and 5 Year Olds, meets Thursday mornings, 9:30 to 11:30 (members/$50; non-members/$60; Kindergarten Program, held Tuesday mornings from 9:30 to 11:30 (members/$50; non-members/$60); After School Science Clubs, meet Tuesday or Thursdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m. (members/$35; non-members/$45). SS artists exhibit work at Boston Reserve Bank

"There is no right or wrong time for art in our lives; it is for all seasons and for all people"—so is perceived this idea in an exhibit of works by selected South Shore Art Center artists at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

For the second time in three years, the South Shore Art Center artists have been invited to exhibit their work in the Federal Reserve Gallery. "Art For All Seasons" will run Nov. 12 through Dec. 27 with an opening reception on Thursday, Nov. 14 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Music will be provided by the Unicorn Singers under the direction of Margo Euler.

This exhibit is being supported entirely by corporate and business donations to the Center. The Center has initiated an ongoing commitment to promote a cultural alliance between the arts and business communities. This alliance offers benefits to both sectors—the financial support and advice of the business community and the cultural and educational opportunities of the arts community.

Exhibits such as the one at the Federal Reserve illustrate the South Shore Art Center's dedication to the arts and it's commitment to a superior quality of work. Visitors to "Art For All Seasons" will enjoy the many different visions, styles and mediums presented in the exhibit. The title of the exhibit expresses the idea that the year and the seasons are traversed easily through creativity as seen in the show, and that whether art is abstract or representational it matters not.

The works in the exhibit are by gallery artist members of the South Shore Art Center which is located at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset. The exhibit was curated by Ken Kelleher, formerly director of the Copley Society and an artist as well, and the works selected represent all mediums—watercolor, oil, pencil, acrylic, wood, glass, terra cotta, pastel, photography, clay.

Three artists—Jim Ann Howard, Dennis Kowal and Michael McNabb, names well recognized on the South Shore—have been invited to exhibit their work in "Art For All Seasons." Howard's magnificent oils, Kowal's graceful acrylic and stainless steel sculptures and McNabb's beautiful Vermont marble and granite pieces illustrate the depth of artistic talent on the South Shore.

Going beyond the boundaries of a traditional exhibit, the South Shore Art Center has added a third dimension—noontime artist demonstrations with Otillie Brown illustrating watercolors on Wednesday, Nov. 20, Rosalind Farbush illustrating acrylics on Friday, Nov. 22 and the last of Michael McNabb, sculpture, on Tuesday, Nov. 26. The demonstrations will last one hour.

Selected to exhibit in watercolors are Dassie Abelson, Virginia Avery, Mary Bodio, Rosemary Boyer, Mary Callahan, Judith Campbell-Reed, Helen J. Gallop, Sara Holbrook Gracia, Becky Haletky, Mary Lizotte, Joseph McGurl, Ann Murphy and Patricia McCarthy. Exhibiting their oils are Virginia Allen, Rita Straus Berkowitz, Gil Coyle, Tom Hallinan, Joseph McGurl, Robert Nason, and Jean Sawyer Railton.

In the medium of acrylics, works selected are by Janet Blagdon, K.A. Calnan, C.L. Camelio, Margaret Dillon, Rosalind Farbush, Lousie Kalish, Brooks Kelly, Robert Nason and Claffy Williams. Pastels will be exhibited by Constance Pratt, Katherine Smit and Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman and a pencil drawing by Peg Atkinson was selected. Joan Appel's and Don Lettis' monotypes were selected for the show as was a Tom Lucas charcoal.

Selected to represent mixed media are works by Katharine Brown and Berj Kailian. Two terra cotta with ink pieces by Syma have been selected.

Photographs by Steven Nelson and Christine Hotarek are in the exhibit. Selected for the exhibit are wood pieces by Walter Horak and Robert St. Pierre; white clay by Judith Rossman; and glass by Chris Rifkin.

The exhibit is open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For further information call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Two free seminars

E.F. Hutton & Company Inc. will sponsor two free seminars in conjunction with National Education Week to help parents plan for financing ever-rising education expenses. The seminars will concentrate on practical ways to 'pre-fund' college education as far in advance of the college years as possible. Participants will receive a free information kit, including a card good for a copy of the 216 page 1985-86 edition of The College Cost Book, which lists complete cost information for 3,500 colleges and universities. The seminars are to be held on November 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Sheraton-Plymouth, and on November 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Sheraton-Tara in Braintree. Anyone interested in attending should call Jeffrey E. Wetherbee, Vice President, Manager of the Hingham office at (617) 749-8220.

Cohasset recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct registrations for the Recreation/Booster Basketball League for boys and girls, grades 2-9, Saturday, Nov. 9, from 9 to 11 a.m. at Town Hall.

The fee for this season's program will remain at $10, with a 50 percent fee discount offered to children registering from the same family.

All games will be held Saturdays at the High School and Junior High School gyms. A teaching clinic will be offered for younger grades at the Deer Hill School gym. Schedules and times will be announced after registration.

Team selections will be held Saturday, Nov. 16, and times for that will be distributed at registration.

Because of the large number of participants involved in the program, it will be essential that you make every effort to register on the prescribed day and hours. Parents interested in coaching may call the Recreation Department office.

SOCCER LEAGUE

The Cohasset Recreation Commission would like to extend their sincere gratitude to this year's volunteer soccer coaches.

Approximately 300 youngsters in Kindergarten thru 9th grade were involved in the Soccer League again this fall. Without the time, effort, and interest of the volunteer coaches, it would be impossible to conduct a program of this magnitude.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for ski lessons to be held at Blue Hills this winter.

Registrations will be held at the Recreation office on Wednesday, Nov. 20, from 2 to 4 p.m., and Thursday, Nov. 21, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. The cost for the five-week one and a half hour per week lesson is $47 per person. Parents must register participants as a release form has to be signed. Checks are made payable to the Town of Cohasset.

Ski sessions

Lessons will begin Thursday, Jan. 2, 1986. The fee covers transportation to and from Blue Hills for the five weeks and lessons. Equipment rentals are available at Blue Hills for $6 per week. Classes are offered for all levels of instruction beginning at age seven.

Buses will leave from the Town Hall parking lot at 3:15 p.m. and return at about 6:30 p.m. Parents who wish to go as volunteer chaperones may sign up during the registration.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Because ofthe refinishing of the Town Hall auditorium floor and various other scheduling conflicts this fall, the Cohasset Recreation Department has not been able to book any special events during the past two months. Also, scheduling of the auditorium for November will preclude any additional special events.

However, magic shows, movies, clown acts, etc. are being planned for the months of December, January, February and March. Please watch in local news media for exact dates, times and performances that will appear soon.

Benefit Nov. 17 at J. Bildner's

J. Bildner and Sons will open a 10,000 square foot gourmet grocery store and catering service in Cushing Plaza Tuesday, Nov. 19.

The store, which has two affiliated shops in Boston, will be open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week.

A "sneak preview" party will be held in the store Sunday, Nov. 17 from 4 to 6 p.m. to benefit the South Shore Art Center, 103 Ripley Road.

Complimentary gourmet food and entertainment will be provided by J. Bildner and Sons. Admittance is $15 per person, $25 per couple for non members of the Art Center. Members will be asked to donate $12.50 per person and $20 per couple. All proceeds will be given to the Art Center and donations will be accepted at the door.

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548.

White Christmas plans

Under the co-chairmanship of Andrea Merrill and Sally Wood, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has finalized their plans for an even more spectacular "White Christmas in Cohasset" on Dec. 8.

They and their committee, including: Joe Quinn, Dick Straley, Dan Leahy, Bob Davenport, George Peters, Yvonne Prisble, Ron Goodwin, Frank Smith, Marilyn Willis, Valerie Medici, Ed Goff, Charley Humphreys, Betsy Campbell and Madeleine Fox promise as great a time as last year with even more surprises!

Tennis tourney set

Mill Pond Tennis Club in Hanover will sponsor a Pro-Junior Doubles Tennis Tournament on Saturday, Nov. 9, at the club. The tourney will feature top tennis players from New England and this area. The public is invited to attend to watch the action.

The tournament marks the first time this type of competition has been held in the New England area. Club officials anticipate excellent tennis and good viewing for fans.

Among players on Saturday will be: Eliot Campbell of Duxbury and David Hall of Norwell, Jack Kepinski of Weymouth and his son, Sean; John Voikos and his partner, Tom Divinagracia, of Norwell. Many other players will be included from the South Shore and across New England.

SS Republican club

State Rep. Peter Forman of Plymouth will be the speaker at the Nov. 18 meeting of the South Shore Republican Club at the First Parish Church Hall, River St., Norwell Center.

A member of the Legislature's Joint Special Committee on Redistricting, Forman will speak on the process for redistricting legislative seats for the 1988 election, based on the 1985 state census. He will speak about 1 p.m.

The club's annual Christmas boutique will be open for this meeting and the Dec. 16 meeting. Members are asked to donate baked goods, handcrafts and saleable white elephants. Elsie Akscyn of Brockton and Marie MacLeod of Whitman are in charge of the boutique which will be open before and after the meeting.

There will be a social hour at 12:15 p.m. with Pembroke members serving as hostesses.

Historical Society Meeting

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its Annual Meeting Tuesday, Nov. 19.

Featured will be a catered dinner at 6:30 p.m. and a special evening's program devoted to acquainting every person attending with the resources and goals of the Society.

The cost of the evening will be $7.50.

The Cohasset Society has a true "treasure trove" of historical artifacts, documents and works of art in its museums and archives. Yet many of us may not be aware of the importance and extent of the Society's collections, and of its continuing activities both within and outside of our community.

A special presentation is being developed by Society members and will be shown at this year's Annual Meeting. It will be in the nature of "an inside look at your Historical Society", at which the accomplishments and future hopes of a dedicated organization will be presented.

Further information about this unique evening's program will be forthcoming soon. Meanwhile, members and friends of the Historical Society, be sure to mark your calendars for the Nov. 19 meeting. The place will be Trueblood Hall at the Unitarian Parish House.

Amateur Gardeners

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, Nov. 19 at 1 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Rita Drake, Fair Oaks Lane. Her co-hostess will be Mrs. Mary Donovan.

The program, a workshop in which small dried flower picture arrangements will be made, will be conducted by Mrs. James Spring.

Senior passport sign-up

The Cohasset Council on Aging has scheduled sign-up times for seniors to receive the Silver Savers' Passport at the new Senior Center office in the Community Center.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, November 13-15, from 10 a.m. to noon, and the following week, Wednesday through Friday, November 20-22 from 10 a.m. to noon, Cohasset residents 60 years of age or older may stop by to receive their identification card. The card entitles holders to discounts and special offers found in The Silver Pages Senior Citizens Discount Directory (South Shore area edition). The Silver Pages and the Silver Savers' Passport card are free of charge.

Seniors may use the Silver Savers' Passport at any business locally as well as nationwide that is participating in the program. Participating businesses will display decals on their doors and windows for easy identification.

The Silver Pages is a complete directory just for senior citizens. The front section contains information about programs and services available to seniors. A magazine section in the middle features informative articles and color ads. The back section features classified listings and display advertising of businesses which offer discounts and special services to senior citizens.

The program was initiated by Southwestern Bell Media and coordinated with the National Association of Area Agencies on Aging and various state and local agencies.

The Cohasset Council on Aging encourages your participation because of the potential cost benefits. The Council will receive a small amount of money for each senior registered. The money will be used for the new Senior Center.

If you have already received a card in the mail, please stop by the Community Center anyway to register so the Council will be entitled to receive the funds.

If you are unable to come to the Community Center on any of the designated sign-up days, or if you are unable to leave your home, call the Social Service League office to arrange for a home visit (383-0771).

Signing-up only takes a minute. Take advantage of the opportunity to receive these discounts! One person may register their spouse. Social Security numbers are needed for all registrations.

Antique show and sale

The ninth antique show and sale will be held Saturday, Nov. 9 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier St., Cohasset.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50, regular admission is $2.00. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area.

There is ample parking.

Chairwoman, Cheryl Kristiansen, announces the following dealers in this year's show: Natalie Fultz, Milton; Susan Krueger, Scituate; Eve and Ted Makowaki, Hanover; Polly McBain, Duxbury; Pamela Geissler and Paula Roberts, Duxbury; Marianne Cannon, Hanson; Julie Manning and Sally Hopfner; Norwell; Margaret Lucas, Norwell; Barbara Petit, Plymouth; Paula Arms, Bridgewater; Ellen Wallack, Hingham; Marsha Manchester, Middleboro; Barbara Donahue, Cohasset; Linda Weyant, Pochasset; and Marjorie Reed, Duxbury.

Seniors invited to rehearsal

Senior Citizens are invited to attend the dress rehearsal for the High School Drama Workshop's production of "Flowers for Algernon" on Friday, November 8 at 8 p.m. There is no charge although donations would be welcome.

The Shuttle Bus will be available Friday night for those who need transportation. Call the Social Service League office to make a reservation (383-0771).

Other performances of "Flowers for Algernon" will take place Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 9 and 10 at 8 p.m. at the High School. Admission is $3.00.

The play, which features 23 students, is a drama tization of Daniel Keyes' widely acclaimed novel. Many will be familiar with the work through the film Charly which won an Oscar for Cliff Robertson in the title role. Ron Emmons is Director.

CHS "Flowers" Nov. 9, 10

"Flowers for Algernon" is a drama by David Rogers, based on the novel by Daniel Keyes. It is the story of a love which cannot be. Productions of this play, with its powerful roles and unusual plot, have generated capacity turnouts, extra performances, and a strong emotional involvement, both for the cast and for the audience.

This Cohasset Drama Workshop production will be performed Sat., Nov. 9 and Sun., Nov. 10 at Cohasset High School's newly-refurbished auditorium facility. Tickets for the drama are on sale at the high school; phone reservations may be made by calling Cleida Buckley at 383-6425. All seats are reserved.

"Charly," a mentally-retarded man, and "Algernon," a mouse, are both involved in experimental surgery which is a success beyond anyone's dream. Alas, as Charly, played by Senior Andrew Glasfeld, approaches the peak of his brilliance, Algernon begins to fade.

This is a "boy gets girl, boy loses girl" story, but with a poignant, romantic (sometimes funny) and tragic difference.

The doctors responsible for Charly's operation are played by Senior John Kuntz and Junior Karin Anglin. Junior Jenna Emmons plays the lab assistant; Sophomore Laura Kuhn is Charly's teacher and the romantic interest.

Members of Charly's family are portrayed by Sophomores Michele Casolaro, Heather St. Onge, Peter Kasperowicz, Katie Tolini; also, Senior Glen Hochkeppel, and seventh grader Katie McNamara.

Appearing as Charly's bakery group are Junior Phil Mahoney, Senior John Pereira, Junior Jill Shockman, and Sophomore Mary Beth McNamara. Others in the cast are Seniors Erin Browne (also assistant director), Cynthia Conklin, Jacqui Fahy, Jen Hynes and Carine Martiagun (CHS Belgian exchange student). Also, Junior Mary McElroy, Sophomore Lauren Kalita, Freshman Felecia Bartow, and eighth grader Liz Buckley.

Glasfeld, Kuntz, Emmons, Kuhn, and Hochkeppel are members of the All-Star Cast of "Voices From the High School" which placed first in the 1985 state competition.

The technical crew for this production are Seniors Dan Rossi, and Jamie Cameron; and Junior David Richards. Director is Ron Emmons.

Library workshop

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will sponsor a story sharer's workshop for adults who are interested in volunteering a few hours to the library's pre-school story hour program.

Story hour kits, felt board materials and fingerplays will be demonstrated by Jo Ann Mitchell, childrens librarian. Volunteers may work in teams or individually in presenting a story hour which lasts about forty minutes.

The workshop will be held at the library Wednesday, Oct. 30 at 9:15 a.m. for about an hour. For more information call the library at 383-1348 any afternoon.

Group reviews art applications

Monday, Oct. 28, the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council reviewed all applications for the January, 1986, funding.

The applications received were all worthy of funding. Cohasset does have a vital art community with many volunteers promoting an art consciousness in our town, the members agreed.

There was $1,014 available for recommended funding by the Arts Lottery Council of Massachusetts.

Those present at the committee meeting at town hall were: Sigrid Carey, Tom Lucas, Linda Stearns Halloran, Ron Goodwin, Helen Ketcham and Larry Fone. Members who could not attend were Ellen Morrissey and Christine Conley. (Christine voted by proxy.)

The group was most impressed by the efforts and projects of individual artists: Linda Cuff, Mary Louise Clark and Scott Ketcham.

Two Cohasset school programs were recommended, an especially exciting workshop series created by Tanna Kasperowicz, "The How To" of self publication, promoting graphic activities in Cohasset; and the Osgood School Literary magazine and newspapers.

The primary aim of the Cohasset Council is to direct funding to applicants who will immediately or eventually enhance art enrichment programs for every Cohasset resident.

The money comes from "The Game" and is based on the community's population. Cohasset receives about $2,000 per year. In recent years that money has helped fund the restoration of prints and paintings at the Cohasset Historic Society, and helped produce a recent show of Scott Ketcham's oil paintings at the South Shore Art Center.

These are just two examples of what can be accomplished through the Lottery grants.

The process of funding is simple: the Mass. Council informs the chairman of the Cohasset Council as to the amount of money available. The Council reviews all applications. Those recommended are sent to the Mass. Council, who must approve the funding. Money is then available to the Cohasset town accountant. The entire process takes about four and a half months.

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council urges Cohasset residents to apply in the many artistic areas — crafts, theater, writing, painting, education, gardening — any art enrichment program.

Our Cohasset committee also invites any resident to attend our meetings.

For any information or applications, call Larry Fone at 383-0898.

Chiropractic for HEALTH

by Dr. Kevin M. Neill, Chiropractic Physician

INSIDE OUT

Contrary to popular belief, the scope of chiropractic treatment extends far beyond back pain and stiff necks. Chiropractic, has been recognized for its ability to promote total health and the integration of the body. It focuses on the ability of the body to heal itself from the inside out. Chiropractic encourages us to take personal responsibility for our lives. It teaches us to preserve our health rather than merely treating the symptoms of disease. This is an effective and economical way to cope with America's health. It offers great promise to those who suffer from ill health as well as to those who want to stay healthy and active throughout their lives.

For attention to existing problems as well as preventive desires, a periodic chiropractic exam fits the lifestyle and healthstyle of many. For answers and attention to your needs and desires, just call the COHASSET CHIROPRACTIC OFFICE, 760 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Suite 12. You will find a sensible, natural, knifeless and drugless approach to your health goals. For the young and the young at heart as well as the sedentary and active population, we invite you to discover what chiropractic can do for you. Call us today. Tel. 383-1211, 1214. Daily by appt.

What the Church means to me - Part II - Our "In-Church Writing Sample" showed that many us view the church as the structure of our lives. Words like "anchor", "support", "stability," came up in many of your thoughts. Perhaps these two say it best: "It is the frame surrounding life's events," and "It is a stable island in an unstable world."

The question we must each address in preparing for our 1986 pledge is: how important is that firm foundation to me and my family?

In the family - Our deepest sympathy to the family of Stephen Perry, who died last week. A Memorial Service was held in the church last Sunday.

Children received in Christian Baptism last week were Steven Maynard Jr., and Amanda Maynard, children of Kim and Steven Maynard Sr., and Stefan Vanderweil, son of Anne and Gary Vanderweil. Best wishes to all!

First Parish

Holiday cards - Holiday cards from the Unitarian Service Committee will be available this year during November at coffee hours. The design is a dove bearing a message of world peace; a poster showing the design will be shown at the coffee hours. The Service Committee cost for each box of 12 cards and envelopes is $4 and the suggested donation is $6. Any number of boxes can be ordered although we have asked for only 12 boxes to be sent on consignment. You may place your orders directly with the Service Committee or through Ellyn Packard, 383-9579, this year's UUSC coordinator for First Parish, or at the November coffee hours.

Music notes - Thanks to a wonderful response to our handbell appeal, we can start ringing right away! Rehearsals will be on Sundays after church: everyone get a cup of coffee and then ring for 45 minutes or so. We will ring in church on Sunday, Dec. 15 (Pageant Sunday). These bells were given to First Parish through the families of Roscoe Trueblood and John Hitt, and it is a tribute to their memories to keep them ringing.

Committee reviews request for school buses

By Linda Dagley
Mariner Correspondent

In a meeting Monday night, the school committee placed requests for buses and for reconstruction of a section of glassblock wall at the high school on a list of priorities to be presented to the Capital Budget Committee.

The committee also discussed resolutions to be voted on at the upcoming meeting of the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents and the Massachusetts Association of School Committees in Hyannis. They decided against supporting a bill which would place academic requirements for extra-curricular activities under state-wide regulations.

The Town of Cohasset currently operates its own fleet of nine buses. Superintendent Eugene Crowell estimated this saves the town $75,000 by not hiring a bus contractor, as most towns do.

Legislation is now before the state Senate which would outdate all of Cohasset's buses. This legislation calls for seat belt requirements and higher seat backs. Buses made before 1978 would not be able to accommodate the renovations.

"If legislation is passed, Cohasset's entire fleet of buses will be outdated," said Supt. Crowell.

He presented the committee with three options.

The first option would be to purchase seven buses at $27,000 each. Option two is to rent seven buses and buy three. The third option is to contract out for all busing needs for an approximate cost of $200,000.

If the bill is not passed a fourth option calls for more money to be applied toward the maintenance of the buses.

School committee member Barbara Bliss requested an itemized list of busing expenses.

"I'm still confused," Bliss said after the superintendent's explanation, "I think we need a detailed account of how the money will be spent to present to the budget committee.

Crowell agreed to have such a breakdown prepared.

The committee placed funds to remove and redesign a section of glass wall blocks in the high school. Supt. Crowell estimated the cost between $250,000 and $300,000.

"We are talking about a substantial square foot area for $160-square foot. We need window sashes and glass boxes. The worst scenario is in the guidance office where the computer is. Damaged glass is causing heat loss and moisture is getting in. We can't tell how badly the structural steel is damaged," he said.

Member Diana Kornet suggests that the Capital Budget Committee come down in the daylight to see the damage.

A request was also made to hire a contractor for $50,000 to paint the exterior of the high school. An amateur crew began the project last summer, but decided it wasn't working out.

"I cannot afford to put so many custodians on it now," he said."It is a lotof trouble and I would like to walk away from it and leave it to a contractor. As soon as we are done with one section another has to be done."

Some members questioned this move, citing the good job done on the Osgood School by an amateur crew and the fact that it provided employment for a lot of teenagers.

Crowell also asked for monies to be put toward new drapes, sound proofing and an accoustical ceiling for the auditorium.

"But that is just wishful thinking on my part," he said.

Requests were made for renovations to Sullivan Gymnasium. According to Supt. Crowell, "The lighting system is antiquated and takes 20 minutes to warmup. I would also like to see accoustical paneling installed."

The committee also discussed the need for the unit ventilator at the Osgood School to be overhauled. No figures were available on its cost.

☐ Congratulations to Jennifer Alemian who was among 28 students at Chamberlayne Junior College (Jennifer is studying Interior Design) who participated in the 18th annúal "Designer's Saturday" held in New York City. Jennifer had a grand time seeing the sights at the "Big Apple," and saw collections of 55 of the world's best contract and residential furniture show rooms and participated in a reception at the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts. She'll surely have a lot of exciting tales to tell!

☐ Aidan O'Connell is certainly making the most of his senior year at Phillips Exeter Academy. He is serving as co-chairman of the Student Council budget committee, and is a tour guide for prospective students and their parents. On top of all of that extra activity, Aidan is a semi-finalist in the 1986 National Merit Scholarship Competition.

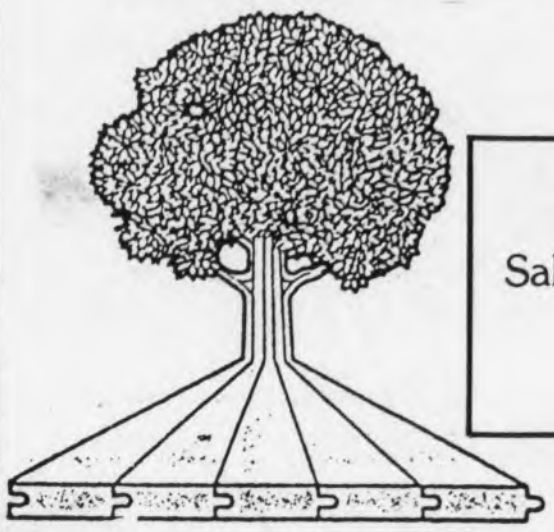
☐ Remember when I wrote about Jeff Brown and his "Bottoms Up" business? Well, he must have truly loved it, he's going to leave Cohasset and join the Navy. He will be leaving in a few weeks (on Nov. 18 to be exact) for the Great Lakes. There he will try to qualify for the diving program. Best of luck to Jeff, we sure will miss you around here . . . that famous smile had better hurry back.

☐ If you are wondering why you haven't been asked directions to the football field the last couple of games, thank Mr. Hall. He puts up signs and arrows pointing to the field, which is a big help to the out of towners that have no clue how to get here. Thanks to you, Mr. Hall, for being so thoughtful.

☐ Saw former football coach John Leone at the game last week . . . looks grand, and reports that he is very happy. One of his assistants, Rick Barnard (who lives in Scituate) just became a second-time daddy, this time to a 10-pound son. Time sure does go on, right?

☐ James M. Contis, son of James and Carolyn Contis of 5 Windsor Road, has entered Bates College as a freshman. A graduate of Cohasset High School, Contis was active in football, baseball, the yearbook and student government. He also was involved in peer counseling.

Also attending Bates this year is Carlton J. Shockman, son of Philip and Joan Shockman of Meadow Lane. A graduate of Noble and Greenough School, Dedham, Shockman served as captain of the football team and was chosen twice as an All-League player. A member of the Big Brother program and the Spanish club, he also was active in lacrosse.



That's the news from here, keep it rolling in . . .

Preparations underway for Dec. 7 Village Fair

After months of organizational preliminaries and regular workshop sessions of "early bird" crafts committees, the business of getting ready for Cohasset's five-church Village Fair Saturday, Dec. 7, has moved into high gear as workers in the participating churches point toward the big day.

Scores of volunteers, either in the scheduled workshops or working individually at home, are fashioning the distinctive articles of children's clothing, stuffed animals, holiday decorations and a range of attractive boutique items that will be put on sale at the Fair. Soon the cooks and wreath makers will be settling down to their specialties as the Fair Day approaches.

This will be the 45th edition of what is believed to be a unique ecumenical fund-raising effort by a group of town churches that combine their energies into a giant benefit bazaar and then share the proceeds equally. The Fair began as a joint project of the three churches of the Common, but in recent years has welcomed two other town churches.

The five churches now involved are the First Parish Unitarian, Second Congregational, St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, and Panagia Greek Orthodox.

Under the system of rotating leadership of the Fair, the First Parish has taken on top responsibility this year, with Gail Bell as General Chairman. Mrs. Bell has enlisted the special help of three fellow parishoners as her Assistant Chairs: Lucy Marsac, Megan Phelps and Ruth Wilcox.

Each of the churches has named one or more representatives to the Central Committee which sets policy and recruits participation from the individual congregations. This year's representatives on the Central Committee are Shelley Weier, First Parish; Dot Gammon, St. Stephens; Goldie Langel, Adeline McGrath and Frances O'Toole, St. Anthony's and Maria Barber, Panagia Greek Orthodox.

The 1985 Fair will again present virtually all of its familiar and popular features, using the Town Hall and other buildings around Cohasset's historic Common to display merchandise and stage events. Included will be a Boutique offering a variety of hand-crafted gifts, a Children's Table with clothes and novelties directed to the younger set, tables offering home-cooked food, candy, cheese and a Bargain Bazaar bursting with used but useful articles of all description. Santa Claus will again arrive and establish himself in a sleigh on the Common where tots can have their pictures taken with him. The Common will also blossom with balloons.

Catering to shoppers' appetites will be a Snack Bar, the habit-forming popcorn machine and a Chowder Bar with sandwiches and Greek delicacies.

Children will again get very special attention, with a Secret Room where they can privately shop for reasonably priced gifts for parents and relatives. In the Community Center there will be attractions of interest to the youngsters, including face-painting and story-telling by Cohasset's own media personality Robin Lord.

A color television set and a week-end at the new Bostonian Hotel have already been secured as top prizes in the raffle, with other appealing prizes still to come. Tickets for the raffle will be on sale through the churches from now until the Fair Day.

Olga Sawchuk (l) and Stella Nardo prepare attractive seashell candlesticks that will be among the items offered by the Boutique at the Fair, Dec. 7.

While decorative bits for wreaths have been assembled over the summer, actual making of the wreaths will take place during the final week so that the items will be fresh when put on sale.

Golden says state needs regional government

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner Staff

A report by Sen. William Golden recommends that residents of the 12 counties in Massachusetts be given an opportunity to "strengthen, weaken or even abolish" their county governments.

Golden's recommendations are contained in a report prepared by the Senate Committee on Counties due to be released Friday, November 8, at the Hampshire County Courthouse in Northampton.

"In Massachusetts," the report concluded, "there can be no doubt that we need some form of regional government. No city or town alone can solve its transportation problems or its solid waste or sewage problems.

"Today, throughtout the state, local officials are increasingly frustrated in their efforts to solve such regional issues with limited local resources."

Golden, who chairs the committee, toured the state's counties over the summer and identified the issue as "whether or not county government will survive as the chosen or preferred form of regional government."

"To survive as modern regional governments," the report continued, "counties must be willing to abandon traditional programs which are no longer viable or suited to county government.

"(They) must establish new programs and policy objectives designed to meet the specific regional needs of their cities and towns."

Due to diversity of the counties, said the report, the residents and not the state legislature should be called on to decide the future of their own counties.

"They alone can determine the viability of their county government as a regional government and then customize the proper institutional structure for it.

"The state, however, must give the residents of each county the mechanism by which they can either strengthen, weaken or even abolish county government in their county."

The mechanism, the report recommended, is Senate Bill 765, now pending before the Legislature, which would establish a charter reform commission in each county.

With the pressing need for regional services, said the report, "it is imperative that this charter reform legislation be enacted now and that the charter reform process begin in earnest in each county.

"Charter reform, once passed, will become a two-edged sword by which a county will live or die.

"Some counties... will rise to this challenge by demonstrating the accountability, the responsiveness, the efficiency, the flexibility and the utility of county government.

"These counties will continue to evolve and meet the needs of and challenges of the 21st Century.

"Those counties which have looked to the traditions of the past to sustain them like the dinosaur, will fail this test of governmental evolution and will lose out in the competition for scarce public resources to other more efficient forms of regional government."

The report noted that the strength of county government "seems to vary inversely with its proximity to Boston and the degree of control manifested by municipalities within the county."

"The closer to Boston and the more controlled county government is by one or more municipalities within that county, the weaker and less viable the county is as a form of regional government," the report concluded.

"The farther the county from Boston, or the more the county is controlled by and oriented toward smaller or rural communities, the stronger the county and the more diverse its services.

"Cities need county services far less than smaller communities."

The report noted that Plymouth County has only one city, Brockton, and the smaller towns rely on many county services.

"As Plymouth County continues to grow," said the report, "the need to address such problems as transportation and solid waste disposal grows with it.

"County commissioners are considering a regional transportation authority for the area... and are exploring solutions to the constant growth in the county."

Solid waste management, the report noted, is also the number one concern in Norfolk County, where attempts to implement a 1974 engineering study have failed.

A county airport is listed as another future Norfolk County service.

Support for clean-up

Sen. William Golden has written to the state Division of Water Pollution Control, stating his support of an effort to fund the clean up of Little Harbor.

Recently, town and state officials gathered to discuss the algae and odor problem developing in Little Harbor. It was decided that the town should apply for funding to eliminate theincreasingproblem at the site.

Sen. Golden issued his support of the funding through the Clean Lakes Program. "I am concerned over the algae growth on the gated side of Little Harbor. The insect and odor problems have become steadily worse," he wrote.

State looks at land offers for housing

The state will only construct the facility on property between one and one-and-a-half acres. The Coynes' property is larger than that, he said, but the family is willing to sell a portion to the state.

"The DMH approached us," he said. "And we said we would be very interested in selling it to them for the (ICF-MR) facility. State engineers will be conducting tests on the property, probably this week."

Coyne and his wife, Karen, have been active in community educational programs for their son. Now 12 years old, their son attended Osgood School and now attends a Cohasset-sponsored program in Hanover. Karen Coyne is a member of the PSO Board of Directors, heading the special needs committee.

"I'm not sure what the state is willing to pay for land," Thomas Coyne said. "But I think we'd be willing to have a mixture of a sale and a gift to the state. The state certainly has the money to buy the property, so we won't be forced to donate the land. But we'd like very much to see it used by the state for housing. We would like to have the land used for that purpose."

Maria Plante, another longtime advocate for retarded citizens in Cohasset, said the state is actively seeking property in town. The DMH is currently reviewing three or four pieces of land, she said, and engineers have looked at some of the sites.

"It's difficult for the state to find the perfect site," she stated. "There are so many requirements dealing with the acreage and the topography. But they are looking and are quite anxious to locate here because we were so receptive to their first proposal."

When the ICF-MR facility was initially proposed last year, the DMH held one public hearing to discuss the Crocker Lane site with town residents.

At that time, town officials and residents indicated their support of the site and the proposal. DMH officials explained then that facility would house eight South Shore residents, including one Cohasset adult. The home will be operated by a non-profit human services agency such as the Cardinal Cushing School, St. Colletta's or Survival, Inc.

According to DMH official Girardi, the state will notify the town as soon as property is purchased and construction plans are proposed.

Notre Dame exam

Students in grades eight and nine who intend to apply for admission to Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, for the 1986-1987 school year are reminded that they must register for the entrance examination that will be administered at the Academy, Dec. 14 at 8:15 a.m.

The cost of the exam is $15 and it is a prerequisite that each student who applies for admission to the Academy must take the exam on that day or the makeup date which is Dec. 21.

The exam is administered through the Boston Archdiocesan Board of Education and, the Notre Dame Academy Guidance Department asks that parents register their daughters any day during school hours at the Academy, 1073 Main St., Hingham.

CHRISTMAS

WONDERLAND by LIGHT

There's a magical kingdom waiting for you and your child.

A kingdom where the Spirit of Christmas burns brightly for young and old alike. Where 200,000 Christmas lights illuminate the nighttime sky, painting rainbows across the winter landscape. And heated turn-of-the-century steam trains travel through woods and fields alive with wondrous sights and gaily lit seasonal displays.

It's the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival. A magical mixture of light and color, sights and sounds. Where Christmas carols fill the air. And laughing children run from one marvelous sight to the next. From Santa's Village to the baby deer in the petting zoo. From the "Night Before Christmas" animated display to the white-bearded man in the red suit who always has a good word and a small gift to share with a child.

Discover this wonderful world for your child—and yourself. Experience the dozens of attractions, the once-in-a-lifetime train ride, and the most magnificent display of Christmas lights you'll probably ever see. This year, rediscover the Spirit of Christmas. You'll find it wonderfully lit up at the Edaville Railroad Christmas Light Festival.

VISIT THE EDAVILLE RAILROAD CHRISTMAS LIGHT FESTIVAL.
Open daily, Nov. 8th through January 5th, 4–9 PM weekdays, 2–9 PM weekends.

Performers take direction from Ketcham

"Death of a Salesman" by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Arthur Miller will be presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club Nov. 15, 16, 22, and 23 at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Performances will start at 8 p.m. The Nov. 17 show, which is free to senior citizens, will begin at 2 p.m.

Several months ago, members of the drama club approached Helen Ketcham and suggested she direct the fall production. The selection of a play was her decision alone.

Ketcham chose "Salesman."

Ketcham is an affable woman in her late forties or so, about 5'7" tall with short-cropped brown hair. Her sparkling blue eyes reflect her moods and feelings about this play; one can almost anticipate her answers to questions.

Why did she select this particular product with so many other vehicles on the market? She responded, "It's a wonderful play. I never saw it on stage and I'm glad I didn't. I caught some parts of Dustin Hoffman's version on TV in September, but this way, I can present this thing the way I interpret it.

"This is an (if not The) American Classic - so universal it just keeps going on and on. This is a typical drama that is so real that it could happen at any time to anyone; your father, brother-in-law, or nextdoor neighbor."

She continued, "I have very good people in this show. They all do their parts well. However, regarding the characters they portray, I have ambivalent feelings about some." Her eyes narrowed and Helen began to look angered. "You know," she added, "there is one outstanding scene that absolutely infuriates me. That is when Willy Loman is fired by his boss, Howard Wagner."

In the play, salesman Loman, played by Dr. Benedict Duffy of Hingham, is fired and left without any pension by his employer of many years, Howard Wagner, depicted by Ron Massa of Cohasset.

With eyes flashing and obvious indignance, Ketcham continued, "I just want to paste Howard ! To think this is happening in reality every day, somewhere. Willy is 63 and at the end of his tether. His age has a lot to do with his retirement, with no monies to rely on in the future. He is the type of individual that at times you laugh with him, and other times, at him. There are intervals when I truly feel sorry for him."

Lee Dunne of North Scituate is cast in the role of Linda, Willy's wife. According to Ketcham, "Now there is a strange woman. She can be strong, domineering and then reticent. Her moods are interchangeable within minutes. I don't think I like her very much. She and Willy adulate their older son Biff (Carl Slotnick of Cohasset) to the dismay of their younger boy, Happy (John Kuhn of Hingham). Biff's balloon is eventually burst and Happy continues to struggle on. What these parents do their kids, I find absolutely stomach-wrenching."

One interesting note that Ketcham emphasized, "You know you go all through this storyline and not anywhere do you ever find out just what type of salesman Willy is. You wonder if he sells cars, insurance or what? Miller never says. Guess it's up to the audiences' imagination."

Ketcham has been directing stage performances in Cohasset since 1971, starting with "Angel Street" which she did for the Cohasset Dramatic Club that year. Other plays for this club that she directed include "Uncle Harry" and "Bus Stop."

For the Cohasset Community Center, she presented "Guys and Dolls" and "Pajama Game" which played to packed houses. A few years ago, she wrote and arranged a fun-filled musical entitled "Wagons-Ho," which drew crowds of people and soldmany tickets for the benefits of the Cohasset Boosters Club.

Helen is no stanger to the field of writing. To augment the festivities during Cohasset's 200th Birthday Celebration in 1970, the Bicentennial Committee commissioned the Cohasset Dramatic Club to write and produce an original play depicting Cohasset's first Town Meeting. Ketcham, a member of the club, agreed to author the play. Hence, "Town Meeting 1770" was conceived.

In 1981, Dell Publishing Co. printed a hard-cover book, "Mistress of Wynds," an historical novel which she authored.

In the spring of 1986, a California-Boston based independent producer, Tony Mich, will begin filming a full length movie with Cohasset as its location. The film "Stock" will center on life as a summer stock apprentice. Mich already has an outline for his film, but recently sought out Ketcham and requested she write the script.

"I think I'm going to love doing this," she said. "I have never been involved with a movie before, but I think it could be a lot of fun."

But for now, "Death of a Salesman" is this talented woman's first priority.

Dramatic Club to install light system

The Cohasset Dramatic Club has agreed to most of the conditions forwarded by selectmen regarding the installation of a dimmer system at the Town Hall stage. One condition stipulated by selectmen, that the system be owned by the town but maintained by the club, was not approved by the club's Board of Directors.

A representative of the club requested permission to install a lighting dimmer system in the Town Hall auditorium for use by the Dramatic Club during its productions. Selectmen agreed to the request, but added six conditions to that approval.

Arthur Paquette of the Cohasset Dramatic Club said the organization's board of directors has determined that ownership of the dimmer system cannot be passed to the town "due to the terms of the grant under which it was purchased. As an alternative, I propose to install the appropriate power controls and receptacles which will allow the dimmer system to be used as a portable unit, rather than permanant."

Wiring Inspector Stephen Wigmore has agreed to the alternative, Parquette stated.

The other conditions of the agreement have been approved by the dramatic club, including installation by a licensed electrician, that no wires or anything else be attached or taped to floors or walls of the auditorium, that a key to the system be left at the selectmen's office, that the town bear no expense in the installation or maintenance of the system, and that any electrical problems caused by the installation will be corrected at the club's expense.

NEARLY NATIVE — by DARRELL BERGER

Diligently rising from soap to summit

The learning process is full of little humiliations. They are a necessity. Failure, error, the exposure of ignorance, the constant evaluation of less than perfect performances are forever being thrown in the way of anyone trying to learn anything. Little wonder motivation and enthusiasm are so necessary and so relentlessly in need of rekindling.

That's why I could never understand why a school would want to supplement the humiliations of learning to read, write and cipher with extracurricular humiliations. Recently I was reminded of my most unfavorite elementary school project, which was foisted upon submissive and innocent children every year at my school back in the 1950s.

The soap carving contest. I don't remember how much time was taken from class every year for this exercise in collective futility, but to me it seemed endless. If we had all spent that time studying math and science, we'd probaby have had the Star Wars system in place years ago. I would not have been surprised to discover that soap carving was a communist plot to discourage American children from having confidence and high self-esteem.

My fine motor skills are even today not especially accomplished. As a 10-year-old, I was given a knife and bar of soap and told to create a work of art. They might as well have told me to spin flax into gold.

I tried to fashion effigies of various mammals. I would start trying to carve an elephant. The more soap I removed, the less it looked like an elephant. So I lowered my sights and said it was a horse.

The more I failed, the smaller the carving became and the smaller the animal became that I said I was making. Perhaps, by the end of the process, if I had been given a scalpel I could have come up with a passable gerbil. Perhaps not. The efforts of my peers were hardly more accomplished.

Finally, in sixth grade, the last year of this ignominy, I became both a rebel and conceptual artist. I quietly and with much diligence, chopped the entire bar of soap into ittsy, bitsy flakes. I called it "Snow Mound." Teacher was not amused.

Very recently I discovered that soap carving had not been a communist, but rather a capitalist, plot. I found this by reading the autobiography of Edward Bernays, who is now retired in Cambridge after a career that left him with the reputation of being "the father of public relations."

It seems Bernays had been hired by Ivory Soap to increase its sales. He came up with the "99 and 44/100 percent pure" slogan, made a big deal out of the fact that it floated, and encouraged schools to have those wretched soap carving contests. He was wildly successful, though he had nothing to do with the publicity that came to the company when a former Ivory snow girl, Marilyn Chambers, became an actress in pornographic movies.

Some of Bernays' other gambits were to help United Fruit with its image by painting its Central American exploits as patriotic. He also increased smoking by women by encouraging New York debutantes to smoke while walking in the Easter parade. He worked with Woodrow Wilson in selling World War I to America, though he was unsuccessful in selling The League of Nations to Congress.

Now we await the summit meeting of the leaders of the superpowers. Televison and magazines have been full for months of the public relations strategies of both sides. Far less attention has been focused on informing people of the precise nature and number of the arms that are supposed to be limited.

Public relations seems to have made a complete triumph. There once was no thought to whether people needed more soap it was only important that it be sold. Now it is not considered important how much we spend on what weapons, but only that one side or another be perceived as a force of reason and moderation.

For years, thousands of exploited kids, duped parents and unquestioning teachers humiliated each other and wasted their times destroying bars of soap, and they didn't even know they were being manipulated. Nothing much has changed, but what is being carved up now is a lot more than soap.

The Dragon's Dungeon

Madame Zola's astrological Thanksgiving

I know it's a mite early to start thinking about Thanksgiving, but it occurs to me that some of you may have no idea what you should give thanks for. An Aries, for example, might be grateful beyond words for something that would make a Pisces shudder, and vice versa. And we can't have you being happy about all the wrong things, now can we?

So once again I bopped over to Madam Zolar's chic little ashram on Third Cliff and begged her to whisper the secrets of the universe — things that would make the various signs of the Zodiac sing with joy — in my ear. First Madam insisted that I make her sing with joy by crossing her palm with pieces of green paper with pictures of presidents on them. Then she deigned to impart the following secrets of the universe:

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Aries, as we all know, are only born to lead, they are also born believing they know what's best for everyone in the world. Their laudable desire to improve the lot of those less capable than themsevles sometimes causes others to consider their Aries acquaintances a tad pushy even — dare we say it? — obnoxious. If you are an Aries and no has cleaned your clock in the past 12 months you can be truly thankful.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Taureans are gentle souls who are grateful for nature and the products of nature — birds, animals, fields, brooks, pearls, diamonds, rubies . . . In a pinch you are also prepared to be thankful for bearer bonds and negotiable securities.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): As always, Gemini, you are pulled in two directions. You fluctuate between being grateful that you beat the income tax evasion rap, and giving thanks that the press did not learn of your activities with you-know-who. You should also be glad that you-know-who's spouse didn't learn about it, either.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Rejoice, O Cancer! Your many months of dieting are starting to pay off, and you are devilishly attractive to the opposite sex. Be thankful that your spouse hasn't learned of your recent activities with a Gemini.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Like Aries, Leos believe that they have better judgment than others. Unlike Aries, however, Leos are seldom able to confine their leadership to advice. Be grateful that the coup you planned last March did not succeed. Be honest. What would you do with a small Caribbean republic with no water and an inferior medical school?

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Ah, Virgo! Once again you can give thanks that you are not like the rest of the Zodiac: obnoxious, acquisitive, verging on the criminal, compelled to diet, etc. And while you're at it, give thanks that you have been granted another 12 months to try to get the rest of us to shape up.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23): Charming, romantic, indecisive Libra. You can give thanks if your love of weddings and your disinclination to settle on a permanent partner has not led you into a dalliance with the spouse of a Scorpio. Many a Libra has been murdered by an insanely jealous Scorpio.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22): Scorpios have much to be grateful for this Thanksgiving. You can be grateful that your political career is progressing nicely. You can be grateful that you are grinding your enemies under your heel. You can be grateful that you don't know what your spouse is up to with a Libra.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21): Sagittarians can be grateful that they did not give in to pressure from Virgos to clean their closets this fall. For the next several months you can point to the mess, shake your head ruefully, and blame Gloria.

CAPRICON (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Capricorns of the world, exult! You can give thanks that everyone else is so busy thinking of things to be grateful for that they aren't paying any attention to you. An excellent opportunity for back-stabbing and clawing one's way to the top, n'est pas?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 19): You can be thankful that during the past 12 months you have indulged your zany, fun-loving nature without attracting the local police. Continue to use an assumed name and if questioned, deny everything.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 21): Sweet, sensitive, Pisces! Since last Thanksgiving an Aries and a Leo have bullied you, a Taurus has walked out on you taking your bearer bonds and negotiable securities, a Virgo has told you that you are a slob, a Scorpio has ground you under his heel, and Capricorn has stabbed you in the back and an Aquarian has done unspeakable things to you under an assumed name. You have had every opportunity for hurt feelings and lots of tears, and you are deliriously happy. Congratulations.

NOTE TO ALL SIGNS: Ignore any advice you receive from a Sun Sign astrologer. She is an Aquarian who is operating under an assumed name and hoping to avoid the attention of the local police.

DARE child needs a home

(DARE Family Services Greater Boston Region, a private social service agency, is looking for quality foster homes in the South Shore area. Here is a specific article about Steven. Another child, looking for a home, will be published next week. Ed.)

STEVEN

Steven is an amiable, energetic thirteen year old boy who needs a consistent, well-structured home in the Weymouth area. Steven is an athletic, creative and personable teenager. He intereacts well with his peers. He is a special needs student living in a temporary foster home.

However, Steven truly needs a stable, long-term environment. He wants caring, loving adults who will help him make greater gains at home and in school. He is a child who just needs a chance.

If you have room in your home and your heart for a child like Steven, please call Don Moskowitz of DARE Family Services at 628-3696. Professional training and support together with medical coverage and financial reimbursement are available.

FROM THE GARDEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

Capricious November threatens garden flora

November's charms leave much to be desired, but even the pewter-gray skies prove a perfect backdrop for purple asters, orange bittersweet and pearly bayberry. Trees such as the maples and birch have already lost their leaves and are starkly outlined against leaf-colored skies, but hardly a yard isn't brightened with yellow, purple or orange mums. All is forgiven of capricious November when the golden Beaver Moon shines on the 27th, lighting up the holiday scene. Like busy beavers industriously building thier dams for the winter, we, too, will take shelter these first few weeks, for the Old Farmer's Almanac promises a brief cold snap.

Tired of dragging several pots of pretty, pink geraniums into the garage to escape the night's frost, I was glad to learn these tender perennials usually treated as annuals can be carried through the winter by cutting the plants back severely and potting for indoor growing. You can also dig up the geraniums and store them without soil if you have a cool, humid storage area such as an unheated earth-floored basement or root cellar. In the spring, prune back to the main stem and replant.

David Clapp director of our regional Audubon office, says that even though most of the common, garden birds have disappeared, it's time to prepare feeders for those who share our winters here. Migrant sparrows are on their way from the frozen tundra, and feeding the birds brings them closer for us to observe and enjoy. To attract different species, a variety of foods is needed. The most popular seed for many species is the sunflower seed. Cracked corn is a favorite with ground-feeding birds.

Mixed seed contains sunflower, corn and millet and may be used as a basic seed to attract many birds. Unsalted beef fat is important for protein and may be used as solid from the supermarket, or melted down with seeds, peanut butter, etc., and packed into cans or log feeders. Thistle is a treat for finches. Don't forget to provide water for drinking or bathing — even in winter!

Winter's gloom intensifies as the days grow shorter (five hours and 49 minutes less than in June) and even our houseplants seem to be sulking after summering outdoors. It's depressing to see leaves turn yellow and drop off, a sign that it will take them a while to adjust to our heated homes. Water them less, don't let them stand in saucers of water, but place pebbles in their trays for drainage. Because they are resting, don't force them by dousing them with plant food. Remember that when we overwater them, we kill them with kindness, so the best way to determine if the plant is dry is by digging your finger into the soil about half an inch deep underneath the top layer to see if the soil is still damp. If some damp grains stick to your finger, consider it wet.

It's a wrenching experience to see mighty trees uprooted by Hurricane Gloria, and Dominic Marini of the Plymouth County Extension Service tells us how to avoid similar damage when considering new plantings in one's yard. Weeping willows, silver maples and white ash have wood that is weak and brittle and produce multiple trunks likely to split under the stress of high winds, or the weight of ice and snow. Most maples and oaks, although slow growing, are stronger and more resilient.

When planting trees do so at least 50 feet away from the house if they are those that grow to be large. If trees are desired closer to the house, consider smaller trees such as dogwoods, flowering crab, or hawthorn. As the tree grows, prune out extra branches, so that it offers less wind resistance. Space branches at least a foot apart along the trunk with each one radiating out in different directions, avoiding limbs that overlap or rub against one another.

Gourds of different shapes and colors that I used as a table decoration turned moldy and attracted fruit flies within a week, so out they went! Mrs. John Quinlan whohas taught floral design and is a graduate of Rittners Design School in the Back Bay, says all would have been well if I had sprayed them with a clear lacquer you can buy in any garden craft store, or if I had used hair spray to coat the goards. She will teach her garden club how to make a cornucopia for their Thanksgiving holiday tables using a 10-inch horn of plenty which you can find in any craft store at this time of year. Fruits, gourds, dried flowers, even vegetables may be used.

Hilma Alger's greenhouse is filling up with houseplants that she is bringing in for the winter, and it's a place where she says "I spend many happy hours." Cuttings from her summer plants, ivies, cactus and begonia are among the popular plants people look for at the church and garden club fairs to which she donates her greenhouse plants. It's a nice hobby for her, particularly on a sunny winter day and at the same time, swells the coffers of these local fund-raising projects.

Why fly to the Bahamas to get away from it all when the ferry out of Dorchester offers a vacation retreat in Boston Harbor? Beverly and Myron Litchfield commuted daily to Thompson's Island, now privately operated as an educational center. Their week-long lecture series introduced senior citizens to the pleasures of birding. Ideal weather on the old island, explored in 1621 by Myles Standish, offered the best possible conditions for the birders. They came from all over the nation for the nature program sponsored by Elderhostel. In their walks along the shores, near the marshes and on the grounds of the old brick buildings, some seniors discovered their first glimpse of migrating birds such as ducks, sparrows, marsh and red-tail hawks and of winter birds starting to arrive such as red-throated loons, juncos andwhite-throatedsparrows.

FROM THE KITCHEN

by JOAN PINKHAM

'True and Tried Recipes' retain the flavor of life

Seventy-five years ago the Dorcas Society came into being, the women's group of a tiny church in a remote corner of Scituate. The Union Chapel of Sherman's Corner just celebrated its 100th anniversary and down through the years has existed on free-will offerings, rummage sales and fairs and the proceeds from the sale of a quaint little cookbook.

"True and Tried Recipes" was first printed in 1915 with the help of local merchants of that era, whose ads funded their little paperback collection of recipes. Updated for this anniversary edition, it retains the flavor of life around here at the turn of the century. Ads read like this: Victoria Theatre, "Pictures and Dancing," No. Scit.; S. Scituate Savings Bank "Joseph Corthell, Pres.", Norwell; Loring Hall, "Idle Hour," Hingham; John H. Flavell, "Boarding and Livery Stable," Marshfield, Brant Rock and Green Harbor; The Willow Tea House, Gladys Smith Duffee, Marshfield.

The Cohasset Savings Bank boasted of deposits of $1,160,000 and the George F. Welch Co. of Scituate advertised: "We want to please the cooks!" The Rockland Trust Company, not be outdone, had a full-page ad in which James W. Spence, president, told of deposits of $1,068,967.87.

But none of the little general stores of that era would have had the ingredients on their shelves for Judy Nagles's

BUCKEYES

2 1/2 C. crunchy peanut butter
1 stick margarine, melted
1 box (16 oz.) powdered sugar
3 C. Rice Krispies
12 oz. choc. chips

Mix all ingredients and form into bit-size balls. Melt chocolate chips and dip each ball half way.

In those horse and buggy days, the Frederick T. Bailey Co. of N. Scituate assured readers of their ad that "anyone can cook with our ranges." The old recipes of that era were of little help when it came to cooking directions. No range could be set to a specific oven temp, no advice was included as to length of time for baking, and you were on your own as far as the number of servings to be expected. The cake of Mrs. Annie Sampson was called "Braintree Cake" and one can only pity the beginner cook in the 19th century faced with this recipe: 2 eggs, 1 C. sugar, 1/2 C. butter, 1/2 C. molasses, 1/2 tsp. soda, 2 1/2 C. flour, and all kinds of spices.

Equally vague were directions for Poor Man's Pudding, Honeycomb Pudding, Mock Fried Oysters, Scituate Cookies, Mrs. Wilder's Oatmeal Cookies and Skeletons, (a cookie). Among the present-day members of The Dorcas Society is Judith Whittemore and she has this recipe for soup. Those of you who have old-fashioned pot-belly stoves in your kitchen could simmer a pot of this fragrant

SUPERB VEGETABLE SOUP

1/3 C oleo
3 C mixed, diced fresh vegetables: i.e. onions, cabbage, carrots, string beans, celery, potato, green pepper, spinach
4 C chicken stock
1/3 C elbow mararoni
1/4 C peas, optional
1/2C tomatoes
1 bay leaf
2 T. parsley and salt and pepper to taste

Melt oleo in heavy pot. Add 3 C veggies. Cook until they start to wilt. Add stock, simmering all ingredients except tomatoes and peas until tender. Remove bay leave. Add tomatoes and peas and left-tover chicken if desired. Simmer 5 min. more.

This 51-page booklet may never make it on the best-selling lists as have cookbooks such as Fannie Farmer, French Chef or Joy of Cooking, but for those who collect cookbooks, it is an enjoyable edition. Scituate's Kathleen Laidlaw, well-known local historian and member of Union Mission Chapel, has copies, available by calling 545-0474, as does Christine Adams, 659-4604. Here is Lois Babbitt's recipe for

ONION PIE

1 small box Cheez-it crax
2 lbs. onions, peeled and sliced
1 stick margarine, melted

Make a cream sauce of 1 C. milk, 1 T. ea. butter and flour. Roll out crax, saving 3/4 C. for topping. Add melted margarine to make a crust. Pat into pie plate. Boil onions, drain and mix well with cream sauce. Pour into crust and sprinkle remaining crumbs on top. Dot with butter. Bake approx. 20 min. at 350 degrees until brown.
